to be making the advances I am now making. The laity knows so well our many virtues, whilst we of the dramatic profession know only each other's imperfections. The author of The Belle of New York bids one of his singers tunefully and condescendingly observe, "You cannot be altogether like us; but try to be as like as you can." So it occurs to me that perhaps, though not a layman, I might try to be as like a layman as I can in proposing this toast. Let me forget that for thirty-four years I have been discharging the function of that gifted but arrogant being, the actor-manager. Let me fancy myself quite an ordinary being—it may not require a violent exercise of the imagination—who desires to approach the Temple of the Drama with becoming reverence—a humble votary standing barefooted in its precincts—performing his simple acts of adoration in all purity and innocence of heart. Now, the first thing that must strike such an intelligent outsider is the universality of the Drama—its inherence in all things human from the cradle to the grave. From the first wail of the infant when it salutes the light of day "with no language but a cry," to that other terminal hour when to dying eyes "the casement slowly grows in glimmering square," the Drama is always with us. As soon as the little doll comes into its little career, the child assumes managerial cares and responsibilities. She talks to it or at it or round it, and from this the step is an easy one to extemporised conversation between the child and its playmates—the convention of a story or a plot to which the conversation relates: in fact, a little drama introduced by the familiar "let's pretend." Then our infant actress craves for a mise-en-scène—she must have decorative accessories—she dresses up everything she can lay her hands on—the doll must have its doll-house, with its doll furniture and doll dresses. In fact, the child now becomes a manager, with an inborn determination to produce all her plays regardless of expense, for, happy little child, it already has its syndicate. And so in the little world of the nursery, we arrive at exactly the same product, by the same successive process—plot, cast, dialogue, dresses, and scenery—as in the world of professional theatrical art. Now examine life at the other terminus. How many of the last words of the great ones of the earth—words spoken at a time when, if ever, man reveals himself—betray a curious fancy for bringing down the curtain with an effective situation—a consciousness that what is past is something played—"a comedy to those that think—a tragedy to those who feel." Hearken to dying Augustus, "The comedy is over—plaudite"; or to the sublimely self-pitying Nero as his curtain is slowly falling, "What an artist dies in me"; or those sad whimsical verses of the dying Hadrian to his soul—so long his guest and comrade—for whom at last the hour had come to go forth, a pale, puny, shivering, unclad and unhoused derelect, into the cheerless void alone. Don't you see now that from the very beginning to the very end of life you cannot escape the Drama. Now I think that I have played the intelligent outsider long enough. Let me drop him and speak in propria personæ—like the man who gallantly begins a speech in a foreign tongue and finds it more convenient to finish in his own. I don't want the potential playgoer to begin reflecting on the universality of the Drama too much, till he begins to think to himself: If I can so readily and economically find the Drama everywhere, why should I go at my own cost to see it: if the theatre of the world is so profusely papered, why should I pay for a stall in any other? Let us, in case of accidents, drop the subject, and diagnose, to quote the Daily Telegraph, the "Drama of the Day." Take it from me, it is in a very healthy condition. Of course, it has had its infantile convulsions and occasional infections, but has never suffered from general paralysis or senile decay. Its greatest danger has been from the alternation of contradictory treatments. At one time unjustly reviled and oppressed, at another unduly pampered and caressed; yesterday put under a shower-bath of cold water, to-day coddled comfortably in wool by others. It has survived both, and is now left to itself to work out its own salvation, which is all it wants, or ought to want. It has excited innumerable controversies—whether or not Art is degraded, and the artist effaced by the actor-manager; whether there should or should not be a National Theatre; whether there should or should not be a Censor—questions almost as old as Queen Anne, though, unhappily, not so dead—whether beauty unadorned is beauty most—I'm not alluding to living statuary or realistic dances—finally, whether the stage panders to the passions or purifies them; whether it is a Circe, who, by enchanted potions imprisons the soul of man in unworthy shackles, or an angel who, with heavenly keys, unlocks the prison door, sets the chained spirit free, and leads him forth into the blessed sunlight. All these have left the Drama vigorous and unimpaired. Nothing, indeed, now disturbs its serenity except, perhaps, the size of the matinée hat, the length of the music-hall sketch, and the price of the water we don't consume. I claim that the glorious constitution which the English Theatre has inherited from its forefathers has been well maintained: its eye is not yet dimmed nor its natural force abated. And this will always be so long as its exponents are true to themselves, to their high calling, and to that world of stored fancy and creative thought which is at once our inheritance, our treasure house, our empire, and our home.

Mr. Alfred Sutro, in responding for the Drama, said: In England the Drama is the Cinderella of the Arts Her beautiful sisters, Fiction and Poetry, are forever thrusting her back into the kitchen, and denying her title to the family name of Literature. She has a Lord Chamberlain sitting on her chest, and refusing to allow her to stir beyond certain marks he has chalked on the floor. The poor thing may be as vulgar as she chooses; but if with burning earnestness she ventures into certain mysteries of life, she is met by an indignant Reader of Plays, who promptly slaps her face and sends her packing. Critic-doctors are forever meeting in consultation: they feel her pulse, shake their heads, and declare she is very ill, very ill, indeed, and not likely to recover. No tourist returns from foreign parts without proclaiming the superiority of the plays he has seen over the home-grown article; he has chuckled at the light-hearted indecency of the French vaudeville, but hurriedly sweeps his womankind out of the London theatre should the English dramatist have omitted to provide the heroine with a wedding ring. One section of the public—the elect, the ultra-intellectual, the superior—regards the theatre with unconcealed scorn, and almost boasts of never crossing its threshold. To another it is a kind of hilarious sandwich between dinner and supper. And there is a third that declares the only hope lies in producing the classics—that the dramatists of the day have sufficiently proved their inability to write works of real merit. And this in a year that has seen three great modern plays: The Thunderbolt, Granville Barker's Waste, and What Every Woman Knows! I assisted recently at a meeting, not unconnected with the theatre, at which one aged gentleman after another rose and protested, with rheumatic enthusiasm, that what they wanted was Shakespeare, and more Shakespeare, and still more Shakespeare. Does our love for Shakespeare, our enthusiasm, our reverence, need any spur? I fancy not. He occupies, in the Drama of all the World, his own proud place; but if, from that splendid throne, he could speak to us now, I imagine he would say "You show your love for me best by fostering your modern drama, tending it, caring for it, adding link to link, so that, in the time to come, it may produce a new Shakespeare of its own. For, in truth, who speaks of Drama speaks of what is modern. It is a vital force—fluid, actual, a thing of the day. The dramatist runs hotfoot by the side of the thinker, and throws the dawning thought on the screen for all to see. Hauptmann's Weavers thrills us and grips us more than the Oresteia—we know the hunger of workless men, but are insensible to the anger of hidden gods. Let us clear our minds of cant, and not be too eager to take the classics down from their honoured shelf. Shakespeare is eternal, and will be played as long as actors have ambition and audiences a sense of beauty. But he is, above all, the mighty background, the rallyground, that shall attract, inspire, and influence all that is best in modern work. And what shall this modern work be—what its aim, its direction? There are critics as well as authors who affect to despise the crowd. I hold they are wrong. The dramatist who would be of service to his generation must not wander too far from the common thoughts of common people, from mere simple human feelings, passions, and desires—for, in ultimate analysis, it is the common people who are right, and nearest to life. Genius has its own laws; but, then, genius is rare outside the columns of publishers' circulars: dullness is no proof of it, nor empty benches its unvarying accompaniment. It is so easy to be unconventional, eccentric, abnormal—so easy to win the frantic applause of the few to whom everyday life seems merely ugly and stupid! It is so easy to end a play with suicide—to let the curtain fall on four gloomy men bringing up the damp body of the defunct heroine on a shutter! But the people who do not kill themselves—who live to the end their patient life of toil and suffering—these are not satisfied. And whom do we write for, we writers of plays, if not that great, silent crowd? "Commercial" is the critic's favourite adjective for the men who aim at the wide appeal. Then are priests, statesmen, orators, commercial, too—every man who wishes his voice to be heard, to let it travel, outside mere clique and coterie. Every thoughtful play that attracts the people helps to bring the theatre more into focus with everyday life; is a step in its advancement; makes the path easier for its successor. There are men upon whom the sense of their cleverness weighs too heavily—they imagine themselves head and shoulders above the crowd. Viewed from some little eminence the difference is not perceptible. And I imagine they also do their duty who humbly serve and try to widen the influence of the art they love so well. I have spoken of three great plays—no mean record for one year! But, indeed, the English drama needs no apologist, nor its close collaborators, the actors. English people rarely go into raptures over English acting; but I believe that we could send out more than one company, without very seriously draining our resources, that would be greeted with overwhelming and delirious praise by the critics of Sicily. English people rarely go into raptures over English plays. I have heard it said that the Drama would be in a splendid condition if there were no authors. Be that as it may, the future is hopeful. We are to have a National Theatre; there are Afternoon Theatres, Little Theatres, all kinds of admirable new societies springing up to produce new plays and help new authors; and there is, I believe, a steady desire among the playwrights of this country to do the best work that is in them. And there is, above all—and how shall one speak of the Drama without mentioning him?—there is our great leader, Arthur Pinero, of whom any country might be proud; and not the least valuable element in the future is the work that he still will give us.

Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, in the absence of Mr. Edward Terry, briefly replied for the Fund. He desired to say on behalf of Mr. Terry that he hoped there would be a generous response to the Chairmans' appeal. Mr. Terry wished to be put down for his usual subscription. Mr. Cruikshanks went on to state that he himself had been for many years a member of the committee of the Fund. He thanked the assembled company for coming there that evening and for their generous donations. He thought that the profession owed a debt of deepest gratitude to the managers, who had always been the strongest supporters of the Fund. As far as the rank and file were concerned, they had probably done their best. He concluded by announcing that the subscriptions amounted to upwards of £1,100.

General Baden Powell, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Maude, made the following remarks: Cyril Maude has the admiration of both the profession and the public as an actor; but he has something more than that in their affection for him as a true "Single Heart," and as a gentleman in the best sense of the word. The temporary rebuff of Fortune which he met with when a neighbouring establishment fell upon his theatre nearly brought him within the scope of the charity for which he is working to-day. He had the warmest sympathy of the whole of England in that catastrophe: he has since had their constant admiration of his pluck in the hard struggle to set himself up again. He now knows, from experience, the bitterness of bad times and the value of a glint of sunshine in the cloud. He is therefore able all the better to minister to the wants of others who seek for sunshine when things around are dark: he is a doctor who knows the pain as well as the cure. He has now the heartfelt congratulations of us all on his successful re-establishment, and our cordial wishes for further success and a long career of usefulness to the profession.

The Chairman, in very few words, acknowledged General Baden Powell's compliments, stating that his heart was too full to permit of his making a speech.

The toast of "The Artists" was next submitted by the Chairman, who thanked those ladies and gentlemen very cordially for their kind services. Mr. J. H. Maunder returned thanks on their behalf.

The Chairman, in bringing the proceedings to a close, read a letter from Mr. Terry explaining that gentleman's absence, and expressing his great disappointment at not being able to be present. Mr. Terry hoped that the result of the dinner would be entirely encouraging. The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland had also communicated his regret at non-attendance. Mr. Maude, in expressing his gratitude for what had been collected at the dinner, remarked that he thought the Actors' Benevolent Fund was entitled to appeal for outside help in view of the help that actors and actresses gave at performances for other charities. During the past two years, in London alone, no less than £12,000 had been obtained by theatrical performances for outside charities. A week ago he had been approached by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, who had asked him to get up a big matinée on behalf of the Davos Home for Consumptives, of which Queen Alexandra was the President. Mr. Collins had promised the use of Drury Lane Theatre for a date in May next, and Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, and other eminent actors had promised assistance. Lord Balfour had not neglected the wants of the theatrical profession, for it was hoped to provide five or six beds for actors and actresses out of the funds raised at this matinée.

During the evening a capital programme of entertainment was presented, the contributors to it being the Westminster Singers (Messrs. George May, Wilfred Kearton, Bertram Mills, and W. H. Brereton), Miss Esther Palliser, Mr. Marcus Thomson, Miss Carmen Hill, Mr. Robert Radford, Miss Mabel Corran, Miss Hemming, Dr. Byrd-Page, Miss Clara Alexander, Mr. Nelson Jackson, and Mr. Harry Paulton. The discourse by Mr. Paulton on "The Art of Acting" was hugely relished and excellently delivered. Mr. J. H. Maunder proved an able musical director.

A list of donations received at the annual dinner will be found on centre page.

WALKLEY ON SHAW.

Mr. A. B. Walkley's collection of essays, entitled "Drama and Life," which was published by Methuen and Co., is still a delight and a treasure to those who enjoy clear and logical argument, piquant wit, and an individual view of the subjects treated of. One of the most gratifying things about the work is that Mr. Walkley, while an ardent admirer of Mr. Bernard Shaw's talents, is by no means such a slave to the dramatist's "hypnotism" as to accept all he does as satisfactory. For instance, in a notice of Man and Superman Mr. Walkley says:—

"When I venture to say that Mr. Shaw is no dramatist I do not mean that he fails to interest and stimulate and amuse us in the theatre. Many of us find him more entertaining than any other living writer for the stage. But that is because he is bound to be an entertaining writer in any art-form—essay or novel or play. All I mean is that when he happens to choose the play as the form in which he shall entertain us there is a certain artistic waste. There is waste, because Mr. Shaw neglects, or more probably is impotent to fulfil, what Pater calls the responsibility of the artist to his material. You forgive the waste for the sake of the pleasure. Nevertheless, in the interests of good drama it is one's duty to be dissatisfied. We want a play that shall be a vehicle for the Shavian philosophy and the Shavian talent, and, at the same time, a perfect play. Shall we ever get it? Probably not, in this imperfect world. We certainly do not get it in Man and Superman."

Again, in a notice of Major Barbara:—

"Mr. Shaw has become the fashion, and in becoming the fashion he has given way to the besetting sin of the fashionable; he has become a law, or rather a caprice, unto himself. He exaggerates his own perversities, revels in his own weaknesses, parades his own prejudices. And it is all so naïvely done! You are reminded of what Sterne said to the lady. 'Pooh, pooh, ma'am, look at your child there, lolling on the carpet. He shows much that we conceal, but in perfect innocence, my dear ma'am, in perfect innocence.' In perfect innocence Mr. Shaw puts his apology into the mouth of one of the people in Major Barbara. 'Andrew, this is not the place for making speeches'; and Andrew replies, 'I know no other way of expressing myself.' Exactly! Here is a dramatist who knows no other way of expressing himself in drama than the essentially undramatic way of speech-making. He never knew any other way, but in his earlier plays he did make an effort to conceal the fact. In his earlier plays there was some pretence of dramatic form, unity, coherence. In Major Barbara there is none. His motto is that of his own Andrew Undershaft—'Unashamed.' And the worst of it is, this innocence of Mr. Shaw's, the shameless innocence of the child, is more effective than the wisdom of the serpent. 'Faiblesse qui est une force,' as Professor Bellac says of something else. All the time the innocent Mr. Shaw is taking a mean advantage of playwrights far less guileless than himself. Many of our playwrights have skill, one or two have even thoughts, but unfortunately their skill is wasted on rubbish, and their thoughts are never concerned with things worth thinking about. Now Mr. Shaw has no dramatic skill, has apparently no dramatic instinct, but he is a thinker who from first to last deals with things worth thinking about. And so you turn with relief, nay, with positive joy, from the intellectual commonplaces of the average English playwright to the intellectual eccentricity of Mr. Shaw. Though a dramatist he is not, he is a first-class pleasure-monger. That is why he has become the fashion in a pleasure-seeking world. But one word of warning. He must not abuse his vogue. Amusing as he is, he is perhaps not amusing for quite so long as he supposes. The truth is, he doesn't know when to stop."

Again, dealing with John Bull's Other Island, the critic says:—

"The play is a disappointment because of its wilful, perverse disregard of anything like construction. It is written on the 'go-as-you-please' principle, without beginning, middle, or end. People wander in and out casually and say whatever happens to come into Mr. Shaw's head at the moment. A rivulet of 'story' meanders through a meadow of 'Shawisms' and trickles dry long before the curtain descends. There is no reason whatever why the play should end when it does—except that Mr. Shaw has had enough of it. Some of us may perhaps wish he had got tired just a little (say half an act) sooner."

A better-balanced estimate of Mr. Shaw's peculiar genius could hardly have been formed and promulgated.

A DICKENS NIGHT.

A special "Dickens Night" was held in King Edward's Hall, Canonbury Tower, on Thursday evening, Colonel C. E. Dance (the Warden) occupying the chair. Mr. W. Edward Kaye gave dramatic recitals and character sketches from Charles Dickens, which were much appreciated, and appropriate songs were sung by Mr. Robert Anthony and Miss Nina Hare. The musical programme was under the direction of Mr. Lovett King. The following letter, addressed to Mr. R. T. Baines, to whom was entrusted the arrangements for this special occasion, was received from Mr. Bransby Williams, who, being engaged in rehearsing for pantomime at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, was unable to be present:—

"Prince's Theatre, Bristol, Dec. 12, 1908.

"Dear Mr. Baines,—I am very busy rehearsing pantomime, but just write now, in case I forget when the time comes, to say how much I wish your 'Dickens Night' a big success. I trust you will all spend a real joyous evening, and be good Dickensians. I only wish I could come along to you and have a word with you all

"Convey my heartiest wishes to all. 'May you never want a friend or a bottle to give him,' as Cuttle said, and 'May the wing of Friendship never moult a feather,' as Swiveller said. My last word I would speak through little Tiny Tim, 'May God bless us everyone.'—Yours, Bransby Williams."

Colonel C. E. Dance, the Warden of the Club, occupied the chair, and proposed the toast of "The Memory of Charles Dickens," the toast being drunk in silence.

In an eloquent booklet called "A Chorus of Celebrities," the Board of Management of the Royal Hospital for Incurables, Putney Heath, publish a number of replies from eminent people in answer to a request for 200 words embodying reasons why the hospital should be supported. The list of contributors includes Mr. George Alexander, Madame Albani, Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Francis C. Burnand, Mr. Ben Davies, Sir W. S. Gilbert, Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., Mr. Beerbohm Tree, and Mr. Lewis Waller. The essays are accompanied in some instances by interesting drawings.

Salvini, the great Italian tragedian, has expressed the appreciation of the Italian stage of the recent Ristori matinée at His Majesty's. The distinguished actor writes as follows:—"Expounding the sentiments of all the Italian dramatic artists I return heartfelt thanks to Mr. Beerbohm Tree, president, as also the organisers of the memorable performance given for the Adelaid Ristori Memorial Matinée, and to all the kind actresses and courteous actors who took part, giving valid and sympathetic proof of the union that unites the artists of every nation with the noble tie of brotherhood.—Yours, most sincerely, Tommaso Salvini."

THE FOLIES BERGERE, PARIS.

In the City of London Court on Tuesday, before his Honour Judge Lumley Smith, K.C., an action was brought by Messrs. Beyfus and Beyfus, solicitors, 69, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C., against Mr. H. Stanley Wescott, stockbroker, 58, Old Broad-street, E.C., to recover £22 12s. for professional services rendered with a view to the purchase of the Folies Bergère, Paris.

Mr. H. J. Turrell appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Jellicoe for the defendant.

In explaining the case, Mr. Turrell stated that the defendant was disputing the plaintiffs' retainer, and he said the plaintiffs must look for their charges to Mr. Alfred Butt, the managing-director of the Palace Theatre, London. As plaintiffs were instructed by the defendant, they did not propose to take that course. The defendant seemed to have acquired an option for the purchase of the Folies Bergère, he being interested with other people. A gentleman named Gluck had an option for the purchase of the house, but it was not in Mr. Gluck's name. Mr. Wescott obtained an introduction to Mr. Alfred Butt, a gentleman of experience in these matters. One day Mr. Butt went down as a guest to Brighton of Mr. Alfred Beyfus, one of the plaintiffs, and there Mr. Beyfus was introduced to the defendant. The defendant said he had an option for the purchase of the Folies Bergère, and produced what he said was a contract for the option. Mr. Beyfus pointed out that the document was worthless in its existing form, and suggested that the defendant should go to Paris and obtain a document which could be much more easily dealt with if the Folies Bergère was to be sold. It was also necessary to have a statement of the figures prepared by accountants of repute, and the plaintiffs introduced Messrs. Chantry and Chantry to the defendant. The defendant employed plaintiffs to prepare such an option which, when signed, would enable Mr. Butt to lay before his directors of the Palace Theatre. This was done by the plaintiffs, who consulted Sir Francis Palmer, a great authority on such matters, and the defendant took the contract with him to Paris. Interviews followed, but the business never matured, and the plaintiffs now asked to be paid their charges.

Mr. Beyfus was called, and repudiated any suggestion that he was employed by Mr. Butt to do the work now sued for. As a matter of fact, Mr. Butt married his (witness's) wife's niece, but he did not see what they had to do with the matter.

Mr. Alfred Butt, managing-director of the Palace Theatre, was also called, and he said he took particular care to see that the work which the plaintiffs has done for the defendant would not be attributed to him. He would have laid the matter before his directors if there had been any reasonable probability of them entertaining it. The Folies Bergère had been offered to a number of people, and several individuals had their prospects of purchasing it. For these reasons he carefully specified he was not to be responsible for any expenses the defendant had been put to. He (Mr. Butt) and the chairman spent a fortnight in Paris in trying to negotiate a purchase of the Folies Bergère, but it did not come off.

For the defence, Mr. Wescott said he had never employed the plaintiffs, and that they had acted all along for Mr. Butt and in Mr. Butt's interests. Plaintiffs did their work at the request of Mr. Butt, with a view to laying the matter before Mr. Butt's directors. The terms upon which the Folies Bergère was to be sold were £60,000 cash and £60,000 with interest, but the purchase did not come off. The clients for whom he was acting paid £1,000 for their option, and that, of course, had been lost by them.

Judge Lumley Smith, K.C., said he must find for the plaintiffs on two items claimed for and they would have the costs of the action when the amount was ascertained.

Miss Katharine Clarke's smart and clever duologue A Woman's Reputation will be seen in town again on Monday at the Middlesex, with, of course, Miss Clarke as the Woman.

Miss M. E. Ellis will produce Cora, a Ballet Girl, comedy sketch, at the matinée at the Palace, Battersea, on Monday next. Miss Ellis will be supported by Mr. Stanley Robson and Mr. Donald Roy Young.

Mr. Harry J. Crane, who has just finished a tour of The Prodigal Son, playing Magnus in Mr. George D. Day's company, will produce at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday a pathetic musical episode, entitled Truth in Absence.

Servais Le Roy, Mlle. Talma, and Bosco are due at the Hackney Empire next week. This remarkable trio have developed the art of magic to a wonderful degree, and their tricks are worked to the accompaniment of a constant flow of laughter.

The only music hall left in Brussels is Barrasford and Gibbons' Alhambra, whose programme includes Signor Barbalonga, a fine baritone; Hawkins and his clever dogs; the juggler, Rapoli; the Maximilian Trio; MacBans, the club manipulators; the Arabs, Iben Obed; and the Aramis Quintette of Italian singers.

Miss Enid Erroll, after a successful run with her fantastic dancing episode, The Magic Vase, will open on Monday at the London Pavilion, after which engagement she will produce a new and original dramatic dancing episode, A Moment's Madness, by J. Alston, which she will run in conjunction with the Magic Vase.

Miss Dora Lyric, who has been making an enormous success this week at the Canterbury and other halls, has just purchased two spendid choruses entitled "Don't wear your heart on your coat sleeve" and "What did the papa say?" written by Weston and Barnes and composed by Maurice Scott, the composer of Vesta Tilley's enormous hit, "That's the time a fellow wants his ma."

The tragic death of "Mexican Joe," a travelling conjurer, at Swadlincote, on Nov. 28, was the subject of further inquiry on Wednesday. Evidence taken by the coroner showed that deceased had been identified as Herbert Nottingham Turner, aged 42, of Pontefract. The doctor stated that the thumb of the left hand was cut off as if deceased had raised his hand to defend himself from an assailant. The police had no clue, and the inquest was again adjourned.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

M. Jules Charmettes, the Anglo-French eccentric, or, as the Press says, the "Harry Lauder in French," direct from the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue, will be at the Tivoli, Manchester, on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coyle, as usual, will have a large party of relatives and friends to keep up the Yuletide festival, and the guests will include his brother-in-law, Mr. George Gerald, the Parisian music hall agent, and his wife.

At the Albert Theatre, Brighouse, there is a fine display of animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Company this week, including Sleeping Beauty (a beautifully coloured picture), A Son's Crime, Bostock's Jungle, Napoleon and the Sailor, and variety turns are supplied by the Three Coopers and Savile Bradley's company in Ructions.

Peterborough Theatre Royal has been leased by Mr. A. D. Vernon to a variety, bioscopic, and dramatic syndicate, who will spend about £300 on interior decorative effects. The house is a very old one, situated in the Broadway within a stone's throw of the new Hippodrome.

The popularity of roller-skating, of which a revival is imminent, depends in an important degree upon the quality of the skate, and for perfection in this department the manufacturers of the Richardson Ball-Bearing Skate Company, of Chicago, are to be recommended. The application of the ball-bearing principle to the roller-skate has been brought to a fine art, and of such quality is the article submitted that it is little wonder that Richardson skates have held all world's records for twenty-three years and that all the prominent skaters in America use them. An artistically printed booklet, giving examples of their work and containing numerous testimonials, may be obtained on application to the head office, Wells-street, Chicago.

The Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Leigh, was opened on Monday afternoon to a crowded house, the Mayor (Mr. W. Harrison), aldermen, and councilors being present. Mr. W. Benson announced the opening in a few well-chosen words, and a delightful entertainment followed the singing of the National Anthem. The Elliotts-Savonas, a wonderful combination of clever instrumentalists, evoked the heartiest possible applause; the Lauri Brothers, refined acrobats, went through some astonishing feats; Jolly Johnny Walker, comedian, was well received for his funny songs and patter; Miss May Geraldine is a dainty comedienne and dancer; and Kyoto, Japanese contortionist and comedy juggler, proved a huge success. The Four Sisters Netherland, singers and barefoot dancers, gave a pleasant entertainment, and the Bioscope concluded.

The chief item at the New Brighton Winter Gardens is the appearance of Miss Agnes Molteno, who sings delightfully, and presents a beautiful series of living tableaux depicting "An Old-time Story; or, a Dolly and a Coach." The mounting and stage arrangements are admirable. Miss Molteno is ably assisted by Mr. J. S. Edwards and Little Dolly Mr. Harry Wright is an immense favourite with his extempore vocalism, and Mr. Leslie P. Paget proves himself a fine character actor, his Dan'l Peggotty and Fagin being fine studies. Mr. Billy Dewey, a coloured artist, is a good singer and first-rate dancer; Carello gives a remarkably clever foot-juggling performance, which is received with much applause; Miss Jessie Beach whistles charmingly; Mr. Cliff Carter is a quietly effective comedian; and the animated pictures are, as usual, of the most instructive and entertaining kind. The new conductor, Mr. Parsons, has made a decided success.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We cannot undertake to answer the inquiries of correspondents by post. In all letters names and addresses must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the replies if so desired.]

J. P. KENNEDY.—Pat Feeney died May 13, 1889, at the age of thirty-eight.

PUZZLED.—(1) You can register a title at Stationers' Hall, but you get no copyright in it. You can obtain a property in it by user. See Strong's "Dramatic Copyright," published at this office (3s. 6d.). (2) Yes, unless the registered owner can show that he has acquired the sole right to the title by user.

A. A.—We have no record of the production of the comedy in London. Why not put your question direct to Mme. Réjane? We know of no adaptation.

DOUGLAS BLAIR.—No. The lady had to give up important singing parts before the production you mention, which has no rôle suited to her present capacity. She is now restricted to comic old women.

G. R. WELLS.—As the company does not advertise in the professional papers, we are unable to inform you. A letter addressed to T. R., Bristol, might reach them if the envelope is endorsed "Please forward."

B. ABRAHAMS.—"The voices of men contain three registers, viz., the chest voice ('voce di petto'); the head voice ('voce di testa'); and a third, which, as being forced or non-natural, is called by the Italians and French 'falsetto' or 'fauset,' or false voice. The male counter-tenor or alto voice is almost entirely false." This is an authoritative quotation from the late John Hullah, and therefore you may be certain that the falsetto cannot be natural in a man. It is, however, used very artistically, both by tenors and baritones.

ARTHUR WILLIAMS.—Striking the Hour; or, Firematch the Trooper, by W. H. Pitt, was produced by Mr. Morris Abrahams at the City of London Theatre on May 20, 1867, with the following cast:—Firematch, Mr. Tom Mead; Sir Francis Witton, Mr. H. Vivash; Wilford Fielding (afterwards Lord Murray), Mr. J. Robertson; Little Maud, Miss Saunders; Roderick, Mr. W. Spencer; Maud Witton, grown to womanhood and known as Marcelline, Miss Jenny Grainger; Roland Kenward, Mr. J. Gardner; Lord Hay, Mr. R. Harrison; Ninno Nimmo, Mr. Bannister; Corporal Cannonball Mr. W. Archer; Seriah, Miss Fitzgerald; and Molly, Miss Clara Griffiths.

SHOT ON THE STAGE.

At Bow-street, before Mr. Marsham, on Wednesday, Clementini Dolcini was charged, on remand, with the manslaughter of a young man named Herbert Thomas Lee, who was shot in the head whilst taking part in a shooting performance called "The William Tell Act" at the Middlesex.

Mr. J. L. Graydon stated that when he questioned Madame Clementini respecting her performance she assured him that there was no danger. So far as witness knew, she did not practise in the hall before she appeared in public, and he had never known any other rifle-shooting expert to do so. After the accident witness saw the accused pacing up and down the stage in a very distressed state. She said, "What have I done? I do not know what has happened. Something must have gone wrong."

Mr. Philip Rutland, who watched the proceedings on behalf of Mr. Graydon, said he wished to draw attention to certain clauses of Madame Clementini's contract to appear at the Middlesex, and Mr. Bodkin remarked that the effect of them was that nothing dangerous was to be done.

Mr. Graydon further pointed out that there was nothing on the bills or programmes suggesting that the performance was of a sensationally dangerous character.

Charles Webster, a stage hand at the Middlesex, said that between the second and third shots Lee moved away from the screen in front of which he was standing, and then, seeing that the ball was not broken, he took up his position again.

Stephano Comoni, who had been employed as property man by the accused, said it was not correct to say that she generally missed the first shot at the ball in order to attract the attention of the public. She sometimes called out "Ready!" before she shot, but witness did not hear her do so on the evening in question.

The hearing was again adjourned.

THE GRANVILLE.

Some excellent turns are in the bill this week at this cosy little Walham Green hall, and the large and appreciative audiences that assemble twice nightly form eloquent proof of the ability of Mr. Robert W. Duce as a successful music hall caterer. At the head of the programme comes Carrie Laurie's kindergarten, in the comedy sketch A Model School, and right well do these clever little juveniles acquit themselves. The house is loth to lose them, and their painstaking teacher. Mr. Fred Elton, in a piano scena, On Board an Ocean Liner, provides a most agreeable turn, and his rendering of "When the leaves are tinged with gold" is tastefully artistic. Miss Mabel Hinds contributes two welcome numbers, and her descriptive song, "A woman's way," is decidedly good. Dashing Chummie la Mara is, as usual, an immense favourite here, and her latest hit, "Harrigan—that's me," is decidedly a good song well sung; Miss Adey Spencer plays and sings cheerfully, and Dot Hardy nightly increases her reputation as a low-comedy artist, her singing of "When father gets his old-age pension" being delightfully naïve, and—to use a George Robeyism—terse.

The Norman and Leonard Trio, in a musical incident, The Itinerant, provide the sweetest of melodies on the harp and violin, and this is an artistic turn worth anyone's while going a long way to hear, and the Walham Greenites emphasised their approval in no uncertain fashion.

Mr. Ted E. Box is an eccentric comedian, bubbling over with quaint ideas, and his whistling powers are little short of marvellous. As a sifflеur, indeed, he takes his place in the very front rank. Christmas Eve is a touching little sketch, acted by Irve Hayman as a tender-hearted burglar and little Marie Montague as a particularly winsome and innocent kiddy. Some very good pictures on the Cinematograph bring to a close a pleasant evening's entertainment, to which Kisbey also contributes.

THE ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND.

It is now some twenty-six years since a general meeting of the theatrical profession was held at the Lyceum Theatre on a Thursday afternoon under the presidency of Mr. HENRY IRVING "for the purpose of establishing an Actors' Benevolent Fund." In his opening speech Mr. IRVING explained that the intention was "to found a fund to benefit those followers of the craft to whom Fortune had not been kind." It was, he said, a source of pain to true lovers of the art of acting that its needy followers were so many and their wants so continuous. At the same time, it had ever been a pride and a pleasure to them all that the actor's heart was a big heart and his hand an open one. They must all bear in mind one thing, said Mr. IRVING, that the proposed scheme was not one of charity; it was one of aid—aid of which they might all of them be some time in need. When brother or sister in fortune helped brother or sister in distress, they did not call it charity.

The late Mr. WILSON BARRETT described the methods by which it was proposed to carry on the Fund; the late Mr. MICHAEL GUNN proposed a resolution approving of its establishment; and Mr. BANCROFT, Mr. LIONEL BROUGH, Mr. CRESWICK, Mr. TOOLE, Mr. ROBSON, and Mr. AUGUSTUS HARRIS made speeches in support of the project. The managers of eight London theatres decided to give, whilst in management in London, an annual sum of £100; and thus was formed the nucleus of the fund.

It must have been very pleasant to those who were present at the meeting in 1882, and who also sat down to dinner at the Hotel Metropole last Sunday, to contemplate the splendid success of their plan. Sir SQUIRE BANCROFT, Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM, Mr. BEERBOHM TREE, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER, Mr. LIONEL BROUGH, Mr. HARRY PAULTON, Mr. J. D. BEVERIDGE, and Mr. H. J. LOVEDAY, who signed their names at the meeting in 1882, must feel intense satisfaction at the success of the Fund, which, under the able and energetic secretaryship of Mr. C. I. COLTSON, is so full of life and energy. As we have often pointed out, a project for the benefit of the profession never fails when it is taken up, heartily and earnestly, by our leading managers and actors. They have the happy amalgam of imagination, humour, and practicality which ensures the success of an enterprise. Without imagination we cannot conceive plans; without humour it is difficult to avoid waste of energy in friction; and the best intentions are useless without that experience of affairs, of the constant and usual movement of forces, which constitutes the man of business. All three of these qualities were splendidly displayed at the Actors' Benevolent Fund dinner on Sunday. We never remember to have heard post-prandial oratory more free from the besetting sins of that description of eloquence. Mr. CYRIL MAUDE surpassed himself in his speech in proposing "Success to the Fund." As was once said of BURKE, he "wound into his subject like a serpent," strewing epigrams on his way. Then, having put his audience into the best of humours, he touched a deeper and a sadder key. The tale he told was one of simple truth; and one point he made was especially acute. "Members of any other class," said Mr. MAUDE, "may break down through ill-health, through competition, through a hundred and one difficulties that beset the paths of all, but no—the actor's failure must be through thriftlessness; they do not take into consideration the awful struggle to get work, the enormous overcrowding, the wretched salaries paid to the great majority." The estimate which outsiders form of the actor's income is erroneous, because the public do not take into consideration the amount which must annually be deducted for periods of unemployment. When we remember that all actors and actresses have to face these resting periods; and when we take into consideration the small salaries that are paid to the rank and file, it is wonderful that the latter manage to live at all, without periodical applications for assistance. For the difficulty of thrift is not the same at all levels. To save, during nine months of employment on a salary of thirty shillings a week, enough to live on in repose for the other three is an heroic achievement; but the description can hardly be applied when the income amounts to a weekly thirty pounds. The actor and actress have innocently, but creditably, contributed to misunderstanding by the courageous and spirited way in which they "carry off" their impecuniosity and endure their misfortunes.

But, after all, the actor's calling has one great advantage: its votaries "wear well." Possibly the privations of the early struggle may have something to do with it; but how rarely do we meet in the profession with those cases of corpulence and its attendant evils which are so common in other ranks of life. The army of doctors who earn princely incomes by professing to relieve their patients of the penalties which Nature has placed on the combination of gluttony and indolence finds few victims amongst the theatrical class. The actor and actress, by an active exercise of all their faculties, keep young, both in body and mind, in an extraordinary degree. A remarkable object-lesson on this theme was furnished by the youthful energy and vivacious jollity of Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM'S capital speech in proposing the toast of "The Drama," and by the obvious—we do not like the word "rude"—health of Mr. CHARLES CRUIKSHANKS, who replied for the Fund in the absence of the ever-alert Mr. EDWARD TERRY—another testimonial to the healthiness of the calling. The only oration of the evening which verged on the pessimistic was that of a sedentary worker, Mr. ALFRED SUTRO, whose worship of The Weavers and Waste does not, it is pleasant to remark, extend to actual imitation. So far from the Reader of Plays being an enemy to the modern "advanced" playwright, he is a friend in disguise. He enables the dramatist to talk about the masterpieces which he could write had he not the fear of the Lord Chamberlain before his eyes. It is only when the "advanced" author publishes his alleged magnum opus, or has it produced "privately," that the illusion is destroyed.

Slating the Sicilians.

MR. WILLIAM WINTER, the celebrated New York critic, shares our views of the Sicilian company which is now in New York. He says:—"The dreary, disgusting exhibition now visible at the Broadway Theatre, where Sicilian actors are performing in a farrago of trivialities and chatter called Malia (meaning enchantment), should not surprise any thoughtful observer of the trend of theatrical affairs. Carnality is a part of the human machine; and if every ingredient in the composition of humanity, every physical process, and every part of the conduct of human beings is to be represented on the stage—if there is to be no selection, no restraint of taste, no art, nothing but unlimited licence—that also comes within the scope of the actor's province and it must be expected to appear."

Stout Prima Donnas.

A DISTINGUISHED Paris physician, who was asked the other day why most great prima donnas are so stout, replied, according to the Mail, that a powerful voice required voluminous lungs and well-developed thorax, and these essentials were ordinarily found in a tall woman with a generous bust. It should also be borne in mind, he said, that celebrated singers were seldom fond of exercise They never walked, and, being usually blessed with healthy appetites, it was not surprising if they ran to fat and eventually lost the ideal harmony of lines and perfection of figure which was the most cherished ambition of every pretty woman to retain.

THE ACTRESSES' SUFFRAGE LEAGUE.

Mr. Forbes Robertson presided at a meeting which was held on Thursday afternoon in the Grand Hall of the Criterion Restaurant by the Actresses' Franchise League. Mrs. Kendal is the President of the League, and Miss Gertrude Elliott, Miss Violet Vanbrugh, and Mrs. Madeline Lucette Ryley Vice-Presidents. Among the members are Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Compton, Miss Eva Moore, Miss Decima Moore, Miss Mouillot, Miss Cicely Hamilton, Miss Tita Brand, and Miss Edith Craig. Mrs. Kendal, who was acting in the provinces, was unable to attend, but there were present at the Criterion on Thursday Mrs. Boucicault, Miss Eva Moore, Miss Fanny Brough, Miss Charlotte Granville, Miss Gertrude Elliott, Miss Violet Vanbrugh, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Florence Wood, Miss Cicely Hamilton, authoress of Diana of Dobson's, and Mrs. Madeline Lucette Ryley, authoress of Mice and Men.

Mr. Forbes Robertson put the following resolution:—"That this meeting of actresses calls upon the Government immediately to extend the franchise to women; that women claim the franchise as a necessary protection for the workers under modern industrial conditions, and maintain that by their labour they have earned the right to this defence." He said he had for many years been in sympathy with the movement, his mother having been heart and soul in the cause. He would advise his hearers, when they were asked some trivial question or troubled by some side issue, to say to the objector, "Have you read 'The Subjection of Women,' by John Stuart Mill? All your questions are answered by that author." The person who had not read that work knew nothing of the subject of female suffrage. He implored everyone to read the book, and to make his or her friends, wife, or husband read it; and especially Stanton Coit's excellent introduction and analysis, which showed that all that had been done in the way of reform in that connection had been brought about by Mills' work. He (the speaker) firmly believed that female suffrage would be one of the greatest revolutions of the age. What might come out of it seemed to him illimitable. "Do not let us work the less," said Mr. Robertson in conclusion, "because we are sure of victory." He felt as certain as that he stood there, that before long the subjected half of humanity would have freedom.

Miss Evelyn Sharp said working women would never be able to improve their industrial position until they could back their unions by a Parliamentary vote. Wherever the Government employed men and women for the same work the latter got very much lower wages than the former.

Mr. J. T. Grein said the status of woman as far as the law was concerned was wholly incommensurate with her intelligence and position. In England, "the land of progress," she was still considered so little responsible, that when she did not pay her dressmaker's bill her husband was sued. People with unbiassed minds must admit that the woman who owned property and paid taxes, who was a worker, and not necessarily dependent on man to earn a living, was entitled to have a say in the selection of the men making the laws of the land. He thought it was monstrous that the drunken lout at the street corner should possess a privilege which was denied to a decent woman. He asked for "Fair play for the Fair Sex."

Mrs. Lucette Ryley and Miss Cicely Hamilton made very bright and witty speeches in support of the movement, and Miss Eva Moore pleaded very pleasantly for subscriptions in support of it. She said that as the organisation was young "and possibly rash," contributions to its banking account would be welcome. The members would persevere and hope to win, and in support of the movement would give the eagerness of youth as well as the experience of the weight of years.

The resolution, having been put to the meeting and carried unanimously, a collection was made, which resulted in nearly £23 being gathered by the ladies who went round with plates.

LE CERCLE ARTISTIQUE.

Miss Joan Pereira and Mr. Gerald Mirrielees' "Cercle Artistique" entertainment at the Rehearsal Theatre on Sunday evening was a complete success. One of the most agreeable items of the evening was the admirable treatment by these two clever artists of the third act of Denise, in which Miss Pereira's Parisian French and her dramatic rendering of the dialogue were equally agreeable. Miss Pereira also appeared with Mr. Wentworth Fane in a picturesque Hungarian Gipsy act. Others who contributed to a varied and interesting programme were Mr. Lawrence Grove and Miss Rita Sponti, Mr. Frederick Annerley, Miss Laura Leycester, Mr. Frank Cochrane, Miss Alys Rees, and Mr. Gordon Leslie.

The entertainment concluded with a one-act piece, neatly adapted by Miss Pereira from the French of Guy de Maupassant, entitled

"MADEMOISELLE FIFI."

The Count Von Folsberg..MR. BENEDICT BUTLER
Otto Von Grossling ....MR. LAWRENCE GROVE
The Marquis Von Eyrich
MR. GERALD MIRRIELEES
Armande .....MISS ROSETTA MACLAREN
Blondine .....MISS ALYS REES
Rachel .....MISS JOAN PEREIRA

As all readers of Maupassant are aware Mademoiselle Fifi is the nickname given to Captain the Marquis Von Eyrich, a German officer from the French point of view—that is to say, a brutal reprobate. Rachel, a Jewess, one of three peasant girls who are brought up to the French château where the invaders are quartered in order to make sport, is insulted by Fifi, and stabs him with a table-knife. Mr. Mirrielees was excellent as the Marquis, and the other German officers were well depicted by Mr. Benedict Butler and Mr. Lawrence Grove. Miss Pereira's part of Rachel suited her style and temperament exactly, and she gave a powerful and intense reading of it. Miss Alys Rees and Miss Rosetta Maclaren were good as the other girls.

A QUESTION OF COMMISSION.

At the Westminster County Court, on Tuesday, Mr. Hartley Milburn, a theatrical agent, carrying on business in Leicester-square, sued Mr. Harry Rogers, an actor, for £62 10s. for commission on subsequent engagements which plaintiff alleged he obtained for defendant personally, but which defendant denied. Mr. Milburn said he acted as defendant's agent, and obtained several engagements at music halls for Mr. Rogers and had been paid the commission agreed upon. About September, 1906, he first saw Mr. Rogers about a sketch and was asked to book dates for it, but he secured nothing for it until December, 1906, about Christmas. Mr. Rogers did not complain of the delay in getting engagements, and witness did not point out that Mr. Rogers was asking too much money. He obtained a trial engagement at Glasgow at the Moss and Stoll Empires for Mr. Rogers, and it was a success, inasmuch as something came of it. Mr. Rogers received £30 per week and paid him commission on the amount. He was also paid commission upon engagements at Manchester and Birmingham.

His Honour said it was clear to him that Mr. Milburn was employed by Mr. Rogers to secure engagements, and he was quite satisfied that the defendant expressly told plaintiff that he would not accept the usual agreement. It rested upon the plaintiff to prove the agreement, and this he had not done, so judgment would be given for defendant.

MASONS AT WORK.

Those members of the Dramatic Mark Lodge who met at the Hotel Cecil on the 10th inst. for the purpose of witnessing the installation of Mr. Geo. A. Keen as Master for the ensuing year were deeply impressed with the rendition of the beautiful service which was carried out with becoming dignity and due observance of the ancient rites and ceremonies by the Rev. C. E. L. Wright, the Chaplain of the Lodge.

The retiring Master, Mr. J. Edward Hambleton, was ably supported by his officers:—Messrs. Clarence Coggin, G. A. Keen, R. J. Corbet, W. A. Keen, W. H. White, S. S. Percival, Harry Nicholls, J. H. Ryley, Chris. Hilton, Alfred Ellis, Clarence Sounes, Tom Clare, and W. Englefield.

Mr. Hambleton was pleased to advance Major Beeching, V.B., to the Order.

It was announced that Lieut.-Col. Drage, D.S.O. (the Master of the Athlumney Lodge), Frank H. Callingham, and W. H. Marler would join the Lodge at the next meeting.

Mr. Harry Nicholls very reluctantly and regretfully resigned the office of Secretary of the Lodge, owing to his professional duties, and Mr. Will Sparks was appointed as his successor.

The newly-installed Master was pleased to appoint his officers as follows:—Messrs. J. E. Hambleton, I.P.M.; W. J. Keen, S.W.; E. H. Bull, J.W.; W. H. White, M.O.; Dr. W. Hotten George, S.O.; Chris Hilton, J.O.; Charles Cruikshanks, Treasurer; J. H. Ryley, R.M.; Will Sparks, Secretary; Charles Cameron, S.D.; Alfred Ellis, J.D.; Clarence Sounes, D.C.; W. J. Harvey, I.G.; Rev. C. E. L. Wright, Chaplain; James Powell, S.; Chas. Macdona, S.; the Honble. W. Fremantle Gaunt, S.; and Wm. Englefield, T.

There were also present Messrs. R. J. Corbet, W. H. Roberts (Atlas), W. E. Holloway, Douglas Gordon, C. Wyndham-Quin, H. J. Horner, J. T. Murray, Chas. Anderson, Ludwig Simon, and Ed. Humphrey. Past Masters W. John Holloway, A. G. Duck, Lord Athlumney, and Thos. Fraser, the Rev. W. Cree and the Rev. H. C. de Lafontaine. Visitors, Lieut.-Col. Drage, D.S.O., Frank H. Callingham, W. H. Marler, and R. A. Dickson.

Grand Lodge was represented by the Rt. Honble. the Lord Athlumney, Thomas Fraser, Harry Nicholls, Rev. W. Cree, Rev. C. E. L. Wright, Rev. H. C. de Lafontaine, R. A. Dickson, W. H. White, and Richard Clowes.

The Auditors' report was received, adopted, and ordered to be placed upon the minutes.

The business of the Lodge being concluded, the Brethren and their visitors adjourned to the banqueting hall, there to discuss an excellent dinner provided for the occasion. After dinner the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and some very interesting speeches were made. During the evening Mr. Geo. A. Keen, on behalf of the Lodge, presented Mr. J. E. Hambleton, the Immediate Past Master, with a very handsome Past Master's jewel, and that gentleman, in gracefully acknowledging the kindly feelings that prompted the gift, made some happy allusions to the incidents of his year of office as Master.

The concert, which was interspersed with the speeches, was of an exceptionally high order, being contributed to by Miss Kate Trail, Miss Millie Le Hay (the talented daughter of John Le Hay), Miss Marion Jack, Miss Emilie Hayes, Messrs. Owen Way, Edgar Coyle, Tom Clare, J. T. Murray, Alfred Ellis, Ludwig Simon, Frank H. Callingham, Major Beeching, and Harry Nicholls. Mr. John Le Hay delighted the assembly by introducing his ventriloquial figures, their singing, patter, and topical and personal allusions being highly appreciated; while Mr. Chris Hilton, a very expert exponent of the magic art, succeeded in thoroughly mystifying all and sundry. Mr. Willie White presided at the piano, and was responsible for the programme, and well and worthily carried out his arduous duties.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. R. A. Robinson (Chairman) presiding.

CROWN THEATRE, PECKHAM.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had considered a drawing submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing a cinematograph chamber proposed to be constructed at the rear of the gallery at the Crown Theatre, Peckham. The Committee recommended that the Council had no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing submitted, provided that certain stated regulations be complied with.

Agreed to.

LYRIC OPERA HOUSE.

The Theatres Committee reported that they had considered a drawing submitted by Messrs. F. Matcham and Co., showing how it is proposed to comply with a requirement made by the Council for the improvement of the arrangement of the balcony seating and gangways, and of the exit on the O.P. side of the balcony at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith. They recommended that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing submitted, subject to the provision of handrails to the satisfaction of the Council.

Approved.

FUN CITY.

The Theatres Committee reported that, having considered a drawing submitted by Mr. F. H. Payne, showing the arrangements in connection with the Fun City to be held in the annexe at Olympia, Hammersmith, and the provision of a new lavatory and of an additional entrance from Blythe-road, they recommended that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing, provided that the various side-shows be arranged in detail in accordance with the Council's regulations, before the helter-skelter lighthouse be used by the public a certificate from the district surveyor as to its stability be forwarded to the Council, a gangway 3ft. 6in. wide be provided down the centre of the seating and the seating be arranged in all respects in accordance with the Council's regulations, the exit notices be hung in prominent positions to the satisfaction of the Council, &c.

Agreed to.

NEW CONCERT-HALL, TOOTING.

The Theatres Committee reported that they had considered a drawing submitted by Messrs. Emden, Egan, and Co., in respect of the concert hall proposed to be erected on the east side of Tooting High-street, showing the position of the cinematograph chamber, the method of ventilating the gas-meter chamber and the cellar below the platform, the means of access to such cellar, and an alteration in the position of the gates in the passageways at the sides of the hall. They recommended that the Council has no objection to the particulars shown on the drawing submitted with regard to certain details of the arrangements, provided that whenever the public are admitted to the premises the gates in the passageways at the sides of the hall be kept locked back in such a manner as to require a key to release them.

Adopted.

A MUNIFICENT New Year's present is being sent by Mme. Melba to the Philharmonic Society of Melbourne, her native city. It consists of a complete set of band instruments of the best make, in handsome cases, and each bears the inscription, "Melba's Gift," in silver letters. There are about twenty-five instruments, and the cost aggregates to nearly £300.

"PETER PAN'S" CORRESPONDENCE

We have received for review an amusing little volume, entitled "Peter Pan's Postbag," which he opens with a letter from Miss Pauline Chase, in which she says, alluding to the "fell pirate" of the play, "You never, never, never can tell how the awful villainy of Hook will affect children. Their fear is very often pretence, which heightens their enjoyment, and the ones whom he made scream may afterwards tell their puzzled parents that they liked him best of all. They may also tell it to us, for they shout out their thoughts to us across the footlights, addressing us by name with pleasing frankness. 'Don't believe him, Peter,' they cry; 'Peter, look out, he's coming down the tree!' or, 'How are you, Wendy? I'm here to-day,' or (agreeable to the box office), 'I say, Slightly, I'm coming every day when I'm a man.'

"I know of one little girl whose mother expected to have to comfort her in the agony scene when Hook puts his head in at the door and glares at Peter asleep. This is the moment that curdles their blood most, but she was not dismayed. 'I do love that man,' she called out so that we all heard her. No, you never can tell how they will take it. Hook has a soliloquy on the pirate ship, 'No little children love me,' and stern voices in front have been heard calling out in reply, 'Serves you right!' But all are not so hard-hearted. I remember two mites being brought round behind the scenes because they had something they wanted to say to Captain Hook, but awe fell upon them when he shook their hands (with his hook), and they could only stare at him and say not a word. When he had gone, however, they looked very woeful, and kept repeating, 'We wanted to tell him, we wanted to tell him!' and they explained to me that what they wanted to tell him was that they loved him.

"A good many of them come around to see us, and it is easy for Wendy to be pleasant to them, as what they chiefly seem to want of her is to sit beside her and hold her hand. When there is silence in Wendy's room that is usually what is taking place. It is simple for her, as they don't expect her to be able to teach them to fly. But they do expect this of me, and they stand on my chairs so happily, and say, 'Now shall I let go?' with such faith in me that I often find it agonising. I also sometimes wish I did not carry fairy dust in the first act, for they come begging for a few grains of it, and I have to say I can't give it them now, but if they will leave their nursery window open, then some night when I am flying past—Oh dear!

"Even now I have not told my really serious reason for being nervous when children come knocking at my dressing-room door. It is this, that if they are the very nicest, kind little round balls they never doubt that I really am a boy, and all the time they are staring at me I am in a panic lest they discover the horrid truth. The girls may sit beside me and hold my hand, but with boys I must be so careful; they expect manlier things of me. Often I have 'given myself away' and been unable not to squdge them. They may let it pass, but sometimes I feel a shudder of disappointment pass through them (pass through such a lot of clothes!), and oh! the look of reproach on their faces as they turn from me! I have known them cry with vexation, and then I cry too, and that makes it still worse.

"Sometimes, however, I have a victory. A young gentleman of about six was brought to see me, and I gathered from his introductory remarks that his big brother had made him uneasy about my sex. He put two cunning test questions to me (probably suggested by the brother). The first was, 'Can you whistle?' By great good luck I could whistle that day. Then, 'What do you think of kissing?' he asked anxiously. 'Rotten,' I said. He was immensely relieved. Then he knew I was all right.

"One of these boys (oh dear! why is it that I tell more stories about boys than about girls?) said to me gravely, 'I don't think it's right to make fun of pirates.' Another, who had such an angelic face that it was awful to hear the question come from his lips, said, 'Do you think that if I was frightfully good for a year they would let me be a pirate?' Children love to clap their hands at the play because then they feel that they are really part of it, and you can see them holding their hands poised ready to seize an opportunity. Their great chance is when I ask them to clap their hands if they believe in fairies, and so save Tink's life. But they are very wrathful if anyone claps who has the reputation of being a cynic, and once there was quite an uproar in the front row of the dress circle because of a girl who clapped. Those about her pulled down her arms angrily. 'How dare you clap,' they cried, 'when you know you don't believe in fairies!'

"There was one dreadfully hard-hearted little boy who came to the theatre not to clap. That was his object for coming, and he came round 'behind' to tell me so in the middle of the play. His teeth were firm set. 'I won't clap,' he said doggedly; 'I'm not going to clap.' And when the time came he didn't clap; above the clapping of all the others I could hear him shouting from a box, 'Peter, I'm not clapping.'

"I think the very nicest story I know about the play is one of some children who have an exceedingly prim and proper nurse, and now, since they have seen Peter Pan, they won't go to sleep till she barks at them.

"They all love Nana, the dog, and I suppose they know she is played by a human being, but not all their elders seem to know it, for we have heard of a nice old lady saying at the end of the play, 'It is wonderful how they train animals nowadays.' And I think she was another nice lady (and probably a Nana herself) who summed up Peter Pan in these words: 'It never would have happened if they had had a proper nurse.'"

The book also contains an amusing selection of letters from the adoring juvenile patrons of the play.

THE Theatre Royal, Bath, which was closed during the early part of the week, was given over for the latter half to amateurs, who presented the charming comedy Liberty Hall. Mr. Egbert Lewis has greatly interested himself in all the performances, as they are in aid of the Royal United Hospital, of which institution he is deputy-chairman.

DIFFICULTIES were raised by the magistrate at Westminster Police Court on Wednesday over the application of Mr. James Anning, manager of the Court Theatre, for a licence for a boy just under eleven and a girl of the same age within a month, to play the title-rôle part in Little Lord Fauntleroy. The girl, it was explained, was only to be licensed as an understudy, generally leaving the theatre before ten o'clock, but in regard to the boy the licence was asked for until eleven p.m.

MR. FRANCIS said that in his opinion this was too late for a boy to be kept up night after night for a month. Mr. Anning said the boy, as his Worship could see, was bright and eager to play the part. To him it would be a matter of thorough enjoyment. He added that the boy could rest until any time in the morning. If the application was refused it would put the management in great difficulty. Mr. Francis: I am afraid I can't do it. It is too late for a little boy to be kept up. The manager asked permission for a week so that they might make other arrangements. The Magistrate: Yes. I will allow that. I don't want to place you in a difficult position.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

AT a meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation held at the Bedford Head Hotel yesterday afternoon, Mr. George Sinclair presiding, Mr. Joe O'Gorman announced that a conference on the agent question had been held at the House of Commons the previous evening, between representatives of the V.A.F., the General Federation of Trade Unions, and the music hall managers. That conference had been adjourned, and he (Mr. O'Gorman), as well as the other gentlemen who attended it, were pledged to secrecy as to what took place. He could, however, state that he had hopes of an early settlement of the dispute. Messrs. Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, Wal Pink, and George Sinclair represented the V.A.F. at this conference, and at yesterday's meeting of the Federation Messrs. W. A. Appleton (general secretary of the Federation of Trade Unions), Pete Curran, and Ben Tillett were present.

THE London Coliseum anniversary on Wednesday under the newer conditions brings to our mind the striking and marvellous success of Mr. Oswald Stoll's policy at the fine palace in St. Martin's-lane. Twelve months ago the Coliseum, phœnix-like, rose from its ashes. From an empty theatre rated and assessed as occupied it has become the favourite West End vaudeville house.

PATRONS come every week with the regularity with which they take their weekly papers. The writer has several friends in "Suburbia," and often has heard the remark in answer to his query, "What are you doing on such-and-such a night?" "Oh, that's my Coliseum evening; I must take the wife and daughters there. We go every week." In this strenuous age people want to be taken out of themselves, as it were, and the place that can give them most enjoyment is the one they invariably patronise.

No theatre in history has in twelve months placed so many stars before the public, and were it not for Mr. Stoll's premier position in the theatrical world, even a palatial establishment like the Coliseum could not hope to do the same for another year. But a glance at the engagement books proves that even a more surprising twelve months is in store for the patrons.

MR. STOLL and his co-directors are to be warmly congratulated, but it must be said that the cosmopolitan nature of the attractions that have been presented during the twelve months has deserved the gratifying success that has been achieved. The Coliseum is the dernier cri in richness of architecture and in the alluring delights of variety, which have never been enshrined in a more beautiful building. With the large number of the shareholders we may express the hope that the past year's success will be repeated in 1909.

MR. OSWALD STOLL will choose the witching hour of midnight for the first representation of the Hippodrome Yule-tide fantasy, and thus what begins "to-day" will end To-Morrow literally, figuratively, and productively. It will be a "private view," and, commencing on Thursday next at 11.45, will end when the chanticleer cheerily crows "salutation to the morn." The fashion is a new one at the variety theatres, but the legitimate houses anticipated Mr. Stoll with a similar festivity at the Court Theatre last year, when The House was produced at midnight, at the passing of the old year, 1907.

MARIE LOFTUS received a telegram on Monday, just as she was going on the stage, from Mr. Marshall Hall to say that she must be at the Law Courts on Tuesday morning. After doing two shows on Monday night, and occupying the stage thirty-five minutes in each house, she left Rotherham at 12 o'clock at night, arriving at 5 o'clock in the morning, and was at the Law Courts at 10 o'clock. The case being over at 1.15, she caught the 2 o'clock train back to Rotherham, arriving there at 6 o'clock, and did the two shows, having a rousing reception.

"OUR MARIE" has taken to rinking. The popular stage favourite has become one of the many enthusiastic members of the theatrical profession attending the handsome skating rink in Aldwych, known as "The Rinkeries," a minute's walk from the Gaiety. The fair comedienne afforded a party of personal friends on Wednesday afternoon a pleasant surprise with her facility in mastering the rollers after a few minutes' instruction. Merriment and hearty laughter attended the initial movement of Marie; but, with her characteristic gift for "quick study," she soon gave her friends opportunity for congratulations. "It's simply delicious," said Miss Lloyd, "as easy as winking, too, gliding round this lovely floor on perfect skates. But please don't stop me—I'm bitten with the craze, and I don't want to waste a minute. My address for the future is 'The Rinkeries.'"

MR. GUS ELEN, who came out on strike at the Oxford on the eventful night of Jan. 22, 1907, returns to that house on Monday. He is repeating for the fourth year his kindly practice of distributing 600 to 700 toys to the poor children of Balham, Battersea, Clapham, Wandsworth, and Tooting.

LADY TRUSCOTT, the Lady Mayoress, with her two daughters, will accompany the Lord Mayor, Sir George Truscott, when he makes his state visit to the Coliseum on Tuesday, December 22, to be present at the matinée arranged by the Grand Order of Water Rats in aid of Sir William Treloar's Christmas Hamper Fund for Crippled Children. In addition to those already announced, the programme will include the names of Miss Evie Greene, Miss Marie Lloyd, Miss Cecilia Loftus, Miss Victoria Monks, Miss Gertie Gitana, Messrs. Harry Tate, Maurice Farkoa, Julian Rose, Eugene Stratton, Joe Elvin, Tom Costello, Chirgwin, George Leyton, and other well-known variety artists.

THE policy of Mr. Hitchins in exploiting one-act plays at the Empire is evidently a successful one, and the fact that the latest playlet to be produced at the Leicester-square house is from the pen of Mr. W. J. Locke is a proof of the higher development of the music-hall sketch. It is a simple duologue, entitled A Blank Cheque, and is more remarkable for the wit and grace of the dialogue than for dramatic intensity. Dennis Mahoney, previous to the curtain rising, has been sentenced for stealing jewels during his stay at a country house. The disgrace weighs heavily on the wife, who telephones to her lawyer that Dennis is about to call upon her. He does so, with proofs of his innocence in his pocket; and pleads to her to give him back a little of the love he has lost. She points out to him the impossibility of the step, but when he writes on the blank cheque she gives him the words, "Pay Denis Mahoney—a wife's love," she realises that her heart is not quite so cold as she imagined, and that there is something more in life than the allurements of the best society, which now receives her.

OF course, love wins, and the genial, laughter-loving, happy-go-lucky Dennis is in her arms before she learns over the telephone from her solicitors that the innocence of Dennis has been proved "Shure," says he, "I've been going to tell ye that all the time, but you wouldn't let me get a word in edgeways." On this happy dénouement the curtain falls. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy's emotional fervour and dainty charm have full scope in the part of the wife, and Mr. C. V. France presents a delightful sketch of the Irishman.

THE new Watford Palace, which was opened on Monday evening by Mr. T. M. Sylvester, is the first music hall the town has ever had. It is situate in the Clarendon-road.

THE Empire Theatre, Oldham, will be closed next week for alterations, opening on Dec. 28 as a variety house, on the two-shows-a-night principle. It will be run on first-class lines, with refined programmes, including the leading artists on the variety stage.

IMPORTANT changes are impending at the Scottish Zoo and Hippodrome, Glasgow, as Mr. E. H. Bostock has decided to pull down the existing buildings at the end of the spring season, and erect a handsome edifice more in consonance with modern ideas, and fit to rank with any amusement palace in the country.

WHEN Mr. Bostock first opened in Glasgow, twelve years ago, he took a five years' lease of the ground, then known as Olympia, with the option of breaking the lease at the end of the first year. Before the year was up, he saw that there was a demand for the Zoo and the other entertainments comprised under the same roof. He completed the five years' lease, and then secured the ground himself, making various improvements and additions from time to time, first as a circus, and latterly by the erection of the spacious hall known as the Hippodrome.

THE new scheme will make an important addition to the list of Glasgow amusements. The length of time occupied in building will, however, necessitate the sale or dispersal of Mr. E. H. Bostock's splendid collection of animals, and it has already been suggested in Glasgow Town Council that the present is a suitable opportunity for the inauguration of a municipal Zoological Garden.

BLACKPOOL is the latest town to catch the roller-skating fever, and a company has been formed to exploit this healthy pastime in South Shore. The building will be a handsome brick and iron one, and will be opened at Easter. The best American maple wood will be used, and the floor area will measure 250ft. in length and 150ft. wide. The skates in use will be the latest ball-bearing type of American make.

MR. JAMES FIONI, the well-known amusement expert and music hall proprietor, is the managing-director, and valuable assistance will be given by Mr. Arnold in the capacity of resident-manager. The latter gentleman has been connected with the Tournament Hall Skating Rink, Liverpool, since its commencement. Councillor Eaves, J.P., has joined the board of directors, and other influential local gentlemen are interesting themselves in the venture.

IT has been suggested to the management that an Excise licence be asked for as an additional attraction to the rink, but as it is the avowed aim and settled determination of the management to make it the fashionable rendezvous for the district, intoxicating liquors will be rigidly tabooed.

FOLLOWING his usual custom, Mr. Macnaghten on Wednesday generously placed the Palace Theatre, Bath, and the artists engaged for the week, at the disposal of the Bath Cycling Club. The proceeds are to be devoted to a dinner in aid of the Old Folks' Christmas Fund. A number of local performers and vocalists supplemented the entertainment.

MR. LEO WEISKER (of Weisker Bros., Liverpool) has now taken up his position as manager at the Hippodrome, St. Helens. Mr. H. Curline Baldry has succeeded to the post of manager of the Shoreditch Empire. Mr. Baldry has been associated with the profession for many years, having had considerable experience as manager of travelling companies, and for three years he managed the pantomimes at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross.

AT the Birmingham Police-court on Wednesday morning, Mr. Ansell applied on behalf of Mr. Henry Weaver for a music licence for a skating rink to be opened shortly in Birmingham at the corner of Monument-road and Icknield-street. Mr. Ansell explained that the application was made in that form because the applicants were not sufficiently advanced with the building to make it at the last special sessions. The application was for a music licence for fourteen days, so as to carry them on until the next sessions.

THE skating area was 100 feet by 130 feet, and was constructed of specially prepared maple. Plans had been submitted to the city authorities, who had approved of them subject to certain alterations. The music would be orchestral, and there would be fifteen performers.

THE Chief Constable said he had written to other towns where the company Mr. Weaver represented had established rinks, and they all appeared to be well conducted. In answer to the Magistrates' Clerk, the Chief Constable said the stipulated alterations were being made, and would be completed before the rink was opened to the public. The licence was granted.

IN connection with the Canadian exhibitors at the Ipswich Fat Cattle Show, a dinner party assembled at the Railway Hotel, Ipswich, on Wednesday evening, to celebrate the visit to Ipswich. The chair was taken by Mr. N. B. Colcock, recently appointed to the office of Director of Emigration in England for the province of Ontario.

AT the conclusion of the proceedings, the Canadian representatives proceeded to the Ipswich Hippodrome, bearing Canadian flags, with a view of protesting against an anti-emigration to Canada song, rendered nightly by Miss Harriet Vernon, but Mr. Bostock, the manager, previously getting wind of the intention, politely, and with much tact, induced the visitors to depart quietly without entering the building, and what seemed somewhat like the development of a disturbance ended in a general expression of good feeling all round.

UNDER a compulsory winding-up order made against the Brighton Alhambra (Limited), King's-road, Brighton, Mr. W. J. Warley, Official Receiver, has now issued his report to the creditors and shareholders. The accounts filed under the liquidation show liabilities £19,767, a surplus in asset of £12,976 after allowing for payment of all debts, and a surplus of £2,708 to the contributories. According to the Official Receiver's report dividends ranging from 5 per cent. to 10 per cent. were paid up to the end of 1903, but since then the business has chiefly resulted in losses, and no dividends have been paid. In December, 1907, the mortgagees demanded payment of principal and interest due, amounting to over £19,000.

THE company endeavoured to make arrangements for the continuance of the mortgages, but without success, and in September last it decided to offer the whole of the property for sale by public auction, whereupon the mortgagees presented the petition for the winding-up of the company. The failure is attributed by the officers to the action of the mortgagees in calling in the amount due to them. The liquidation has been left in the hands of the Official Receiver, who further reports that the mortgagees have agreed to take over the mortgaged property at £17,500, the furniture, fixtures &c., at £500, and the stock at 10 per cent. off cost price. In the absence of any better offer the Official Receiver agreed to this arrangement, and the approval of the Court has been obtained thereto.

THE Camberwell Palace has been acquired by the New Camberwell Palace, Ltd. (which is controlled by the London Theatres of Varieties, Ltd.). The new company commences business from the 28th inst., but does not take over any of the existing contracts with artists or others.

MR. PHILIP A. LENNON, the manager of the Camberwell Palace, takes his benefit there on Tuesday next, the 22nd. There will be the customary two houses, with just a few extra turns.

WE are pleased to hear that the evergreen Will Oliver is out and about again after a turn of bronchitis.

MISS NELLIE WILSON is returning home, after her third successful tour in Australia, and is due at Tilbury to-day. She opens at the Camberwell Empire on the 28th.

AT the Lambeth County Court on Thursday several actions by agents for commission were decided against non-paying artists, and short orders were made.

MISS MARIE FINNEY, the sister of James Finney, who formerly shared the early successes of his excellent tank act, and went with him to America, died, we regret to say, at Oldham on Friday, the 11th inst.

MISS NELLIE NORWAY recently made a hit with her silver bells at the Hotel Cecil at the annual banquet of the New Vagabonds' Club. She had enthusiastic encores for both her items, and Mr. Max Pemberton, the chairman, told her "she ought to be the rage of London."

A MUCH-DESIRED addition is being made at the Oxford, where a handsome glass screen is in course of erection as a division between the stalls lounge and the hall. The business of artists on the stage will not in the future suffer from conversations in the adjoining apartment—a consummation devoutly to be wished.

THE acceptance by Mr. Joe Elvin of the position of president of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association will give universal satisfaction in the profession. Mr. George Chirgwin, "the White-eyed Kaffir," is replacing him as trustee. At the most recent meeting of the Association Mr. Alfred Smith was appointed agent at Leigh (Lancs.).

AN honourable peace, so we are informed, has been officially concluded between the International Artists' League and the Continental managers. The leader of the I.A.L., Mr. Berol Konorah, is officially recognised. All lock-outs and "boycotts" are ended, therefore V.A.F. members may accept Continental engagements without restrictions.

THE London offices of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association and the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund will be closed on Christmas and Boxing Days. All members of the M.H.A.R.A. must therefore place their names on the list on or before Wednesday, or, at the latest, the first post on Thursday morning. Vouchers will be sent to the stations at eleven o'clock on Thursday.

MR. JOHN BRABOURNE, whose death we announced in our columns last week, was for a short time a contributor to the variety programmes at the Lyceum, but his best efforts were reserved for the theatre. Poor Jack, according to an announcement this week in a contemporary, is to appear as Dame at the New Theatre, Cardiff.

IN consequence of the visit of Miss Vesta Tilley to the Wolverhampton Empire this week, houses are packed to suffocation. After Miss Tilley had sung her third song on Monday evening, "Jolly good luck to the girl that loves a soldier," the circle and stalls rose, and, amid the waving of hats, cheered and cheered again. One gentleman was heard to remark, "Vesta has indeed surpassed herself."

BILLIE BINT wishes to announce to all those who have written to us inquiring as to when he was chairman of the Oxford that he started after the hall was burned down at the end of 1873, and remained there till the death of Mr. Syers, the proprietor, one of the best that ever lived. Billie Bint left the Oxford the end of 1876, and the chair was then taken by Mr. Rouse, who was chairman previous to Billie Bint in 1873. Billie is quite well and in good form, singing as well as ever.

ENTHUSIASTIC scenes were witnessed at the Chelsea Palace on Saturday last, the cause of which was a telegram, read by Chirgwin, from some of the regular patrons of the Palace, expressing their regret at Mr. Asher's resignation as musical-director (a position he has held since the opening of this hall), and also wishing him every success in the future.

THE telegram was a signal for the whole of the audience to rise, and in a moment the whole assembly were singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a jolly good fellow." Chirgwin finished this extra turn by singing "Say au revoir." These remarkable scenes were renewed at the stage door after the performance was over, and after some persuasion Mr. Asher made an impromptu speech, which satisfied the excited crowd.

A GRAND testimonial concert will be held at the Chelsea Town Hall early in the New Year for Mr. Asher's benefit. It has already received great support from many influential gentlemen, and is headed by a donation of ten guineas from Mr. Alfred de Rothschild. Subscriptions and applications for tickets should be made to Mr. W. Fairhall, hon. sec., 527, King's-road, Chelsea, S.W.

MR. HOWARD DE WING has now taken up the management of the Montpelier Palace, Walworth, which has been beautifully decorated, and is to be endowed with a set stage. This is in course of construction at a cost of £240. Everything is being done to improve the conditions under which entertainments will be presented, and under which audiences will enjoy them. Comfort will be a first consideration, and the tariff will be so arranged that excellent programmes will be within reach of the humble toiler. The hall never looked better than now, and Mr. Howard De Wing promises capital pictures and good artists. There is to be a special Christmas production. The present proprietor is Edwin Stephens, also proprietor of Eel Pie Island, Twickenham.

MR. B. WOODGER, secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires on behalf of the committee to thank the following ladies and gentlemen for their kind assistance:—Mrs. O'Brien, of Rule's, Maiden-lane, for £1 3s. 3d.; Fred D. Harris, Baring Hall Hotel, Grove Park, Bromley, 19/6; Empire, Camberwell, 6s.; Mr. P. A. Lennon, Palace, Camberwell, 13s. 8d.; and Mr. Thompson, Empire Theatre, South Shields, 19s. 6d., from M.H.H. pence collecting boxes. Also Fred Ginnett, New Palace, Watford; Fred Thorne, New Palace, Oldham; Harry Ball, Hippodrome, Birkenhead, for taking boxes at those halls (per Fred Neiman); also a donation from Harry Barnard, hon. treasurer M.H.H. Fund of £3 3s.. Era appeal cards should be sent in for the first published list appearing shortly. The secretary, Ben Woodger, will gladly send a card to any willing worker for this grand charity, on receipt of post card to 31, Wilson-rd., Camberwell, London, S.E.

KELLY AND ASHBY sailed for America on the 9th, and will return to England in March to play a number of contracts.

THE Three Brothers Huxter open at the Hippodrome, Leicester-square, on Monday next for one month, this being their last London engagement prior to their departure for America, per White Star liner Oceanic.

MR. AUGUSTE VAN BIENE has forwarded a cheque for five guineas to Mr. Cyril Maude for the Actors' Benevolent Fund. Part of this sum represents the amount Mr. Van Biene collected when he played in the streets on Nov. 18. Mr. Van Biene will be seen at the London Coliseum early in January.

MR. CHARLES COBORN, who brought his date forward a week to oblige Mr. Buchanan, of the Alexandra Theatre, Greenock, has been scoring heavily there with his songs, and, although the time was short to fill the vacant week, he has settled to appear in Glasgow, where he always meets with a hearty reception.

MR. FRED CONNOR, proprietor of the circus, Douglas, Isle of Man, opens again this Christmas at the Crystal Palace with his circus company, commencing on Boxing Day, and, judging by the list which appears in our call column, the company is a strong one, embracing as it does the very cream of riders and clowns.

CHARCOT has jumped with a bound into prominence and popularity. This can only be ascribed to the fact that he possesses personality and originality, and his up-to-date sensation, the driving blindfolded of a 48 h.p. motor-car through the busiest thoroughfare of a town, is right out of the beaten track for nothing like it has ever been seen on the variety stage.

MR. CHARLES CLIFFORD, the favourite harpist, has returned to town to be home for the Christmas holidays. He is looking fit and well, and speaks of his recent tour in Scotland and Ireland as having been very successful. Some of the halls Mr. Clifford has been visiting for quite a number of years. We hope to have the pleasure of hearing him play at some of our London halls again before he starts his 1909 tour.

THE famous Dunedin troupe of cyclists had arranged to have a rest this week, as they have been continuously in engagements for many months past, but an important telegram from the Hippodrome caused wires and broughams to be sent to various parts of London to collect the troupe. On their reappearance in the evening at the Hippodrome they renewed their great popularity.

FOR Christmas week and the matinée on Boxing Day there will be a very strong programme at the Alhambra. Leonora is rehearsing for the new play without words, due in the New Year, and appears in Narcisse. Mlle. Britta, now an established favourite, remains the premiere danseuse in the romantic ballet, Paquita.

OTHER items are the Max Wessely Troupe, in their juggling pantomime; the Ten Ji Japanese company of magicians; the Four Black Diamonds; Henry Helme, the French vocalist; and The Two Flags divertissement, still as popular as ever. The cinematograph productions of eminent French actors and actresses will be changed, Mr. Alfred Moul presenting the third of the series, The Red Hand, in which Severin, Max Dearly, Mlles. Napierkowska and Mistinguette represent this morbid drama of Montmartre. The evening at the Alhambra is fittingly ended by Jury's pictures.

THE London office of William Morris had the pleasure of receiving a cablegram from Washington on Wednesday morning informing them that Harry Lauder had been received at White House by the President, and that during his stay in Washington he had been the guest of the Vice-President, Speaker Cannon. Mr. Lauder's courtly condescension is well known, and we feel sure that President Roosevelt will appreciate it as deeply as His Majesty Edward Rex. The same office has also received welcome news regarding the enormous success of Vesta Victoria and D'Arc's Marionettes.

A MOST enjoyable evening was spent on Thursday evening, Dec. 10, at The Equestrian, Blackfriars-road, the proprietors of which are Messrs. Fred Baugh and John Stubbs. Several important local gentlemen and the managers of the London halls of the Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit sat down to an excellent repast, after which Councillor David Israel, who was supported by Mr. Fred Baugh, dilated on the popularity and good fellowship Mr. Stubbs had gained since he came amongst them, and called upon Mr. Baugh to make the presentation to Mr. Stubbs of a handsome engraved testimonial on vellum and a diamond Masonic jewel laid upon a spade guinea—a very pretty token.

MR. BAUGH, in his usual jovial manner, commenced by good humouredly chaffing the recipient, but soon settled down to seriousness, and trusted that Mr. Stubbs would live many years and receive many more such testimonials.

MR. STUBBS, who was visibly affected by the many expressions of goodwill and fellowship that had been showered upon him, said that the one item that appealed to him most strongly was the manner in which the members of the Surrey Music Hall staff had subscribed. The evening was enlivened by some well-rendered part songs by the Clyde Quartette.

AT Cork police-court, a prosecution was commenced on Saturday against fourteen persons, who are charged with illegally picketing the Palace, Cork. Messrs. Dobbins and Ogilvie, who are also proprietors of the music-hall, dismissed two men who refused to carry goods during the recent strike amongst the carters of the Cork Steam Packet Co. Messrs. Dobbins and Ogilvie refused to reinstate these men, and since Nov. 12 the music-hall had been picketed, with the result that the audiences were seriously depleted.

THE case occupied the day, and was adjourned to Dec. 29. Witnesses were examined to show the connection of accused with the picketing proceedings, which in the defence was not denied, as their case is that the music-hall is a corporation, and the proceedings should have been for an injunction. An offer was made by the Crown solicitor, who prosecuted, that if the picketing was stopped the case would be dropped. The defendants immediately declined. Picketing was proceeding on Saturday night.

A VERY interesting item has been added to the entertainment at the Hippodrome by Sir Genille Cave-Brown-Cave (the Cowboy baronet) and his company. "Texas Tex" first appears in a "roping" act; then Chief Hampa, a Sioux Indian, does some interesting bow and arrow shooting on horseback and on foot; a Mexican illustrates the use of a stock-whip; the method of punishing a horse-thief is shown; and some really surprising feats of horsemanship are performed by a cowboy, who picks up three handkerchiefs in succession from the ground while careering around the arena at full gallop. The efforts of a very vigorous bucking horse and mule create excitement and amusement; and a pretty quadrille on horseback concludes the entertainment, which is applauded and enjoyed.

MR. ALBERT MARSH will present his great dramatic sketch, seen last week at the Holloway, Empire, for the first time, to Birmingham audiences on Monday. It is called Chums Till Death.

MISS HELEN TRIX has in study a new and novel number, which she will astonish Yuletide visitors to the Tivoli with. Miss Trix declines more information on the very good grounds that to publish particulars would be to give pirates the chance they are always on the look-out for.

AT the New Hippodrome, Birkenhead, the contract for the fibrous plaster, decoration, electric lighting, fire curtain, seating, draperies, carpets, scenery, and stage fittings was carried out by Fred Wilkins and Bros., Ltd., 54, Whitechapel, Liverpool, who have been congratulated on the artistic richness and beauty of their work.

MR. GEORGE FULLER, now a great sufferer, is patiently and cheerfully awaiting the end, and sends kindly greetings to friends. He desires through our columns to express his deep appreciation of the great kindness of Mr. Eugene Stratton and Mr. B. P. Lucas, of the Bedford. Mr. Fuller would be glad to hear from, or to see, friends at 72, Delancey-street, Regent's Park, N.W.

THE Alhambra's new musical play without words will be produced on Jan. 4. Mlle. Leonora is to have a singing part in it. It is a little Italian story with a characteristic Italian setting, and a big chorus of peasants. Mlle. Leonora and Miss Julia Seale will be two wandering minstrels; and Mlle. Leonora will further demonstrate her versatility by playing the mandoline. There are two other principals appearing in the production, the music of which is by a well-known French composer.

MR. G. ERIC WILLIAMS (of Webber and Williams, vocalists and musical speciality artists) is the only one-handed accompanist in the world, having lost his right arm some years ago. He also had the further misfortune to lose one of the fingers of his left hand, and yet his manipulation of the keyboard shows remarkable dexterity and command of technique. The act has been very successful this week at the Gaiety, Glasgow.

CLEMPERT is continuing his London success at the New Palace, Plymouth, where he puzzles soldiers, sailors, and police with his escape from the Siberian torture jacket and his death-defying water escape, his endurance in staying under water for so long causing a great sensation in the town. Clempert has received offers from South Africa and Australia, but his dates in England prevent him accepting.

THE booking at the Empire Theatre for the Christmas holidays is so great as to exceed the records even of this house of phenomenal successes. For Boxing-night the demand, indeed, has exceeded all calculations. A Day in Paris—the very best of all the Empire ballets—with its amazing Apache dance has been smartened and brought up to date.

FOR the dramatic turn, the management have succeeded in enlisting the services of Mr. W. J. Locke, one of our foremost dramatists, who provides the comedietta A Blank Cheque, which is noticed in our columns. Miss Lalla Selbini, who achieved a furore in America, bids fair to repeat it at the Empire in her amazing pot-pourri act; and the Perezoffs, among the finest jugglers in the world, will reappear in their wonderful restaurant scene. The Four Amaranths, a squad of beautiful dancing girls, will be seen in a delightful pas de quatre, and Messrs. Hayes and Merritt are back for their droll billiard table trampolene act.

MLLE. DE DIO has been specially engaged by Mr. Martin Beck to star with the Orpheum Road Show, and during Christmas week will be at the Orpheum, San Francisco, California. Sam M'Kee, the New York leading critic, in writing of De Dio, says:—"What Loie Fuller did to create a sensation in New York comparatively a short time ago would now be considered tame if given on the same stage with De Dio's 'Terpsichore's Dream.' De Dio is a fairy, a butterfly, a creature of the air, sailing from flower to flower of gorgeous but always tasteful colours. She has the beauty and the vivacity of youth."

MISS MABEL SINCLAIR, England's premier lady ventriloquist, on her first appearance at the Majestic, Chicago, on Monday, Nov. 30, made the greatest success every achieved by any ventriloquial artist in America. Miss Sinclair, who has been fulfilling a starring engagement over the Orpheum circuit, is now touring south, and will terminate twenty-two weeks' genuine success on Feb. 8 at the Orpheum, New Orleans.

ON behalf of the committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford Street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (Secretary) wishes to thank the following:—Sir Edward Moss, a guinea towards the children's Christmas-tree; Mrs. G. H. Chirgwin, 10s. 6d. for same; Miss Irene Rose, collecting 3s. 3d. for Christmas-tree; Mrs. Herbert, Robsart Street, Brixton, collecting 12s. 6d. for Christmas-tree; Miss Lottie Albert, donation 2s. 6d. and gift of pretty teacloth; Madam Haydee, collecting 5s.; Mrs. Bennett, collecting 2s. 6d.; Mrs. J. Horne, parcel of clothing; Mrs. Johnson (Smith and Johnson), parcel of clothing; Mrs. James Horne, subscribing and collecting £1 towards helping a sufferer into a home for consumptives; Miss Maud Dunedin, 10s., subscribing and collecting 10s. for the same good cause; Harry Blake, parcel of clothing; Mrs. Horne, donation towards the Christmas-tree; Mrs. Crowther, 2s. towards Christmas-tree; Mrs. Edwards (Albion House), toys; Mr. Wal Pink, £1 for Christmas-tree; the Rev. Arthur Brinckman, confectionery for children; Miss Lil Hawthorne, parcel of presents; Mrs. Fred Ginnett, box of children's new boots and shoes; Mrs. Vernon Cowper, 5s. for Christmas-tree; Huntley and Palmer (Reading), cakes, &c.

WILL all friends of the charity please note that a Christmas-tree, tea, and treat will be given at the Horns, Kennington, on Wednesday next, 23rd, at one o'clock, to the poor children, and any gifts, however small, will be gratefully received by the Music Hall Ladies' Guild? Miss Cecilia Loftus has kindly promised to be present. All friends invited to come and help make the children happy for this day.

IN view of the forthcoming election, will all members please send their addresses to Miss May so that she can post their votes? All are welcome to the tea and receptions held every Wednesday, from four to five o'clock.

WEYMOUTH'S New Pavilion and Theatre, a municipal enterprise, is to be publicly opened on Monday next by the Earl of Shaftesbury, who will be accompanied by the Countess. At 1.30 p.m. the Mayor and Mayoress (Mr. Councillor F. Sefton Smith and Mrs. Smith) will entertain at luncheon Lord and Lady Shaftesbury and a few guests, and the architect, Mr. Littlewoods, will present his lordship with a golden key and invite him to perform the opening ceremony. A musical programme will be contributed by a strong and talented company of artists engaged by the Corporation through Messrs. Ashton and Mitchell's Royal Agency.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

No fewer than seventeen unmistakable successes in the three pantomimes of one city alone—Glasgow, to wit—have been placed to the credit of Messrs. Francis and Day. "Oh! Oh! Antonio" is literally the rage at the Theatre Royal, the Grand, and the Princess's, and the titles of the other songs that are in everyone's mouth are "Sue, Sue, Sue," "I'm afraid to come home in the dark," "I shall sleep well to-night," "It's a lie!" "Shakespeare," "Bombardier," "Every fellow's in love with a girl," "I'm the best pal I ever had," "Maggie of Dundee," "Shadowland," "It's the Gay Gordons," "Drinks," "My girl's a Yorkshire girl," the "Parrot duet," "So what's the use?" "Johnny Macintyre," and "How do, Matilda McGee?"

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY have in the press a particularly striking song of that great artist, Miss Ada Reeve's, entitled "Find the Man," by Ralph Roberts and Harold Lonsdale.

THE beautiful waltz, "Cecilia," composed by Henry E. Pether, which has been placed on the market by Messrs. Francis and Day, has been orchestrated for military band (to the order of Messrs. Boosey) by Mr. Michael Retford, who shares with Warwick Williams the reputation of being a past master of the art of scoring for brass. A special effect for the tubaphone has been incorporated in the arrangement.

AMONG the new songs about to be issued by Messrs. Francis and Day are "Why be ashamed of him now?" (sung by Miss Billie Burford), by Charles Collins and Fred Godfrey; "It's a lie!" by Sax Rohmer; and "Shakespeare," by Sax Rohmer and H. E. Pether (both sung by George Robey); "Robin Redbreast" (Harry Champion), by R. Gorman; "My Cornish Fisher Girl," by J. P. Long and Charles Hilbury; "I'll love you best of all," written, composed, and sung by George Ridgewell; and "When I got up this morning" (Dan Crawley), by T. W. Connor.

MISS KITTY COLYER'S new chorus number, "Goodbye, Jennie," by Will Hyde, has during the current week been voted by Manchester Tivoli patrons the "real thing." On the occasion of her souvenir night many people were unable to obtain admission. Messrs. Francis and Day have the song in the press.

MISS VESTA TILLEY at Wolverhampton has packed the Empire nightly from floor to ceiling, and her newest song, "That's the time a fellow wants his ma," by Archie Mills and Edgar Bateman, has earned the highest encomiums from public and Press, Maurice Scott's melody being particularly catchy. Mr. Scott has again collaborated with Edgar Bateman in a song for this great artist, a number entitled "Out in the open air," and Miss Tilley is now "letter perfect" in H. E. Pether's polka song, "To see if it was fit for father," also by Edgar Bateman. All three songs will be issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

THE combined staffs of Messrs. Francis and Day's Charing Cross-road and Denmark-street establishments had a right merry evening on Saturday night last at the Crown Hotel, adjoining the Hippodrome. After an excellent repast, worthy of the house's reputation, a most enjoyable time was spent, under the chairmanship of F. W. Leigh. Speeches were strictly barred, and harmony reigned supreme, among the songs rendered (to the able accompaniment of Charles Lucas) being "Don't forget the chorus," by F. W. Leigh, and "Fol-fol-li-a-tee," "The girl I love," and "I've got the ooperzootic," by Arthur Francis; "In the shade of the old chestnut tree," "I wonder where he gets his ideas," "Why go abroad?" and "I shall sleep well to-night," by Fred Osborne (son of the one and only Charles of that ilk); "My old shako" and "The Trumpeter," by Leonard Bellamy; "Sing me a song of flowers," by William Eyke (the firm's own fresh-water truth-teller); "£ s. d." and "Take me on the flipflap," by Charles Wilmott, accompanied by the composer, Hermann Darewski; "Everybody knows it's there" and "The coster's pony," by Edgar Bateman; "We've all been doing a bit" and "I knew I'd got something to do," by J. Bewell; "Here at my post" (Barker, P.C.), Charles Godfrey's old song, by Charles Griffiths; "Tom Bowling" and the Judge's song from Trial by Jury, by Charles Rooker; "So what's the use?" by John Abbott; "Every fellow's in love with a girl" and "What a Dial," by Bert Lucas (who also with Fred Osborne rendered in comical style a parody of "Alice, where art thou?"); and "We don't want more daylight," by Charles Lucas. "Hearty good wishes to one and all" was the burden of a wire handed to the chairman, a message which when read out made everybody feel that Christmas and David Day were almost in the room. Mr. John Smith, the firm's manager, skilfully evaded the "barring clause," and proposed the health of the Chairman in the happy manner inseparable from' him.

J. F. LAMBE'S seasonable song, "When the berry's on the holly," published by Messrs. Francis and Day, is in great demand just now. The stalwart Irishman was seen in the Central Avenue of Covent Garden on Thursday being decorated with sprigs of the same by more than one neat-handed colleen.

MR. ALF. ELLERTON has written a screaming gag act for Baron or Dame, entitled "Turkish baths at home." It was written on Monday, and accepted by Mr. Robert Arthur, and also the Camden, Clapham, Bath, and Cheltenham Theatres, by Wednesday morning. Its rapid acceptance proclaims its merit. Mr. Ellerton is also placing many copies of "Tommy's ready—all's well," a stirring patriotic number, published by Francis, Day, and Hunter.

THE case of McGlennon v. Solomons, which was heard at the Guildhall on Tuesday last, is a very important one to owners of copyrights in songs. It was there decided that the words of a song, if published without the music, do not come within the Musical Copyright Act of 1906. This is a very serious flaw in the Act, and it is to be hoped that the question will come before a higher Court. Apparently, as the law is now stated to stand, the hawker can sell with impunity copyrighted songs, so long as the music does not form part of it. This is a grave injustice to song-writers and publishers.

AT the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, three of the greatest hits of the evening were "I don't care if there's a girl there," sung by Miss Jane Eyre, and that quaint alphabetical song "A to Z," sung by Will Evans; also "Have you got another girl like Mary?" The Star Music Co. are the publishers.

MISS ADA REEVE will sing two of the Star Co.'s great pantomime ditties, "I don't care if there's a girl there" and "Have you got another girl like Mary," at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool.

MR. ERNEST LEIGH, the energetic representative of the Star Music Co., has been successful in fixing no less than sixteen numbers of the company's songs at the Brixton Theatre, where they are producing Dick Whittington on Boxing Night. The charming principal boy, Miss Maud Esmond, will feature, among other numbers, those two big winners "I don't care if there's a girl there" and "Have you got another girl like Mary?"

THE OXFORD.

Most of the principal stars of the variety firmament have departed for the realms of pantomime in order to brighten the Yuletide festival with quip and crank, song and jest; but Mr. Blyth-Pratt has no lack of laughter-makers in his current programme. The audience have a joyous time during the progress of what is termed by its creator, Mr. Herbert Darnley, "a Spanish musical comedy." It is in four scenes, and the wild fun of the whole thing is exhilarating in the extreme. We have the picturesque environment of a mountainous region in the Iberian peninsula, with its rich colouring; and the brightness of the ensemble, the buoyancy of the music, and the light-hearted gaiety of everyone concerned keep the spectators in a state of pleasurable excitement—that is to say, when they are not in fits of uncontrollable laughter. Mr. Cecil Morton York, as Colonel Montano, in command of the battalion in pursuit of the festive robbers, does not take his part any too seriously, and his mock fierceness supplies a capital foil to the unvarying frivolity of those under his orders. We are concerned principally with the doings of Pepo, the head waiter, a part played by Mr. Charles H. Bell with a resourceful energy and a command of droll knockabout buffoonery that could not be excelled. Such hurricane energy is rare, and rarer still is its alliance with real comicality of expression. Messrs. George E. Hall, Mark Sheridan, jun.—a chip of the old block—and Laurie Leslie are other aide-de-camps in the rollicking conspiracy to evoke laughter. There are handsome dancing girls, whose energy and grace are of considerable value in the concerted scenes, and Miss Annette Sellens as Carmeneta sings exceedingly well. The scene in the mountains, where the two waiters become, as it were, "territorials," with quaint ideas of drill, and still quainter manœuvres, reaches the heights of pantomimic fun. The Brigands of Tarragona work loyally together, and their exertions are crowned with gratifying success.

Early in the evening one enjoys Mr. Herbert Lloyd's burlesque on vaudeville, which shows a keen sense of humour; Mr. Fred Land's lyrics, founded on nursery rhymes, have a vein of whimsicality to recommend them; Mr. Russell Brandow is an alert and smart acrobatic dancer; Lyons and Cullum submit a variety act, into which some clever imitations are introduced, the lady dancing prettily in short skirts; and Bowden and Stol's comedy is of the acrobatic order, their feats being as clever as their behaviour is quaint. In their act it is the unexpected that happens, and the happenings are generally droll. The Eight Welsh Miners are starring a great success in "The Soldiers' Chorus" from Gounod's Faust, and in some standard old glees.

Miss Gertie Gitana, whose turn is fully described in our notice of another hall, has won the right to her designation of comedienne by her brightness and buoyancy, and her success at the Oxford is as remarkable as it is deserved. Miss Victoria Monks repeats her success, "Moving day," but does not improve it by resorting to unnecessary horseplay. Mr. Ted E. Box, comedian, with his wonderful whistling, catches on in his cobbler's song; Mr. Sam Mayo is responsible for "drowsy drolleries" that keep audiences thoroughly awake; Selbo is a clever and interesting club juggler, his act being also prettily set; and Miss Yvonne Lamor, Mr. Fred Shephard, Miss Ella Lane, Mr. Dave Carter, the Four Eugenes, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope are other attractions in a very crowded bill. Mr. Leon A. Bassett, the musical-director here, puts much verve into the rendering of the spirited and stirring "Copenhagen Grand March," which ushers in the variety programme, and The Merry Widow selection is well worth listening to.

THE EMPRESS, BRIXTON.

Undoubtedly the success of the evening at this popular house is scored by that dainty and clever little comedienne Miss Gertie Gitana, aptly described on the programme as "the star that never fails to shine." This week she is delighting Brixtonites with her singing and dancing. She is giving two numbers, "Sweet Jessie dear" and "Iola mine," both of which are rendered in her most effective manner, and earn for her unstinted applause. She is responsible for some neat and graceful dancing, and on concluding the applause is deafening, and she has to appear many times before the curtain.

The most humorous item of the evening is the one provided by that increasingly-popular comedian Sam Mayo. The Four Eugenes, in a refined display of aerial gymnastics, show great skill; Julia Reeve is a chic comedienne; mimicry of the highest order is given by Henry A. Moore; and The Pawnbroker is being presented by Joe Peterman, who is supported by a most capable company.

Lil Hawthorne, the popular principal boy, is successfully making a bid for public favour. She is scoring heavily with a couple of numbers, both of which suit her to a "T." They are "Just someone" and "The boy who stuttered and the girl who lisped." The latter she renders most effectively, and fairly brings down the house. The Lyric Mummers are the possessors of most pleasing voices, the lady especially singing and acting with marked effect; the songs of Miss Ida Barr, a prepossessing comedienne, are well applauded.

An amusing musical sketch entitled Baby's Birthday is meeting with a most favourable reception. The scene is the interior of a toy-shop. A lady enters wheeling a bassinette, in which there is a baby. It appears that this is the birthday of the infant, and the mother has arranged with "father" to meet him there to purchase some remembrance for the occasion. Within she finds a most charming assistant, and of her she inquires if her husband has been. The assistant replies that she has not seen him, but says that there is another shop down the street where the assistant is noted for her beauty. Knowing her husband's flirting propensities, the wife hurries away, and when she is gone the husband himself appears upon the scene. Finding that he is alone with the assistant, manlike he makes love to her, his flirtation being interrupted by the reappearance of his wife. As soon as she has gone the husband appears disguised as a bear. The assistant then sings a pretty song, set to tuneful music, entitled "Teddy bear," and on concluding both dance in a neat and graceful manner. The husband then, thinking that it is time to seek his wife, departs, leaving the coast clear for a man to appropriate the baby, which is mistaken for a large mechanical doll. Husband and wife then enter, and a discussion goes on as to what shall be bought for the kid. Presently the discovery is made that it is not in the perambulator. The infuriated mother turns on the girl, and whilst a heated argument is proceeding a policeman states that he has seen a man trying to leave a live baby on someone's doorstep. He has arrested the man, and brought him to the shop. Explanations follow, and everything works out satisfactorily. The cast, which is well chosen, includes Miss Maud Denny, Miss Rita Yorke, and Messrs. George Wilson, Joe Helwar, and Dick Claude, all of whom work most effectively for the success of the sketch, for which there should be a long and brilliant future.

Other items in the programme include Ida Hetherington and company in Wedding Mishaps; Charles Harvey, an amusing comedian; and Harry Boden and Harry Ford's company in a laughable farcical episode entitled The Best. A most pleasant evening is brought to a conclusion with an interesting series of pictures on the Bioscope.

EUSTON PALACE.

There is an excellently-written and excellently-acted new playlet at the Euston this week. It was presented for the first time on Monday by Miss Beaumont Collins and company, and bears the title:

"THE LEAVES OF MEMORY."

Major Philip Gay ..... MR. GEORGE BLUNT
Frank Egerton ..... MR. GEORGE INGLETON
Foster ..... MR. FRED KNIGHT
Ruth Challoner ..... MISS BEAUMONT COLLINS

The scene is given as the drawing-room of Ruth Challoner's house in St. John's Wood. That lady is the mistress of Frank Egerton, a blackguard, who has been kicked out of the Army. At the opening of the sketch it is apparent that Ruth is in an extremely perturbed state of mind. The cause of her unhappiness is the news she has just read in an evening journal of the suicide of a young gentleman who lost a considerable sum of money at cards at her house the previous evening. She knows that her confederate, Egerton, received the money from the youth by unfair play. Ruth dreads the disclosures which may possibly follow on the inquest, and the lesson of the suicide is brought so forcibly to her mind that she decides to give up the unsatisfactory life she has been leading. A visitor comes in the person of Major Philip Gay, an old admirer of ten years ago. He is not aware that she has been and is being supported by a man who is not legally married to her, and he tells her that he loves her more than ever. Will she consent to be his wife? She gives an equivocal answer, and then, as she hears the bell ringing and realises that Egerton is waiting outside, she anxiously bustles the Major out of the room, telling him that she will explain everything later. Egerton comes in, and there is a highly dramatic scene between the two. The woman informs Egerton that she will no longer be a party to the carrying out of his evil designs, and he taunts her with her dependence upon him. In an access of fury she orders him to quit the house, in spite of his reminder that he is the actual tenant, and that he paid for the furniture, &c. Egerton goes, leaving behind a small phial which he had intended, had Ruth permitted, to have used for the purpose of inducing unconsciousness in one of his fresh victims. Ruth now determines upon suicide, for she fails to see any way of redeeming the past. She is about to drink the deadly potion, when a hand is placed on her arm, and to her surprise she finds that Major Philip Gay is by her side. He had hidden behind a curtain, had overheard the conversation with Egerton. He understood all, he still loved her, and he would marry her in spite of everything—for the leaves of memory are rustling in his imagination, and he has happy recollections of the past. Miss Beaumont Collins acted admirably in the rôle of Ruth Challoner, and she brought out the tragedy of the character with convincing earnestness. Mr. George Ingleton furnished an interesting study of the blackguardly Frank Egerton, and Mr. George Blunt is gentlemanly, gallant, and lover-like as Major Gay. In the minor rôle of the butler, Mr. Fred Knight submits a capital and characteristic impersonation. The scene of the drawing-room is a very luxurious and beautiful one.

There is plenty to attract attention in the remaining items. Miss Addie Adell, who looks charming in an Irish costume, sings a couple of songs which are ever associated with the Emerald Isle—"Come back to Erin" and "Killarney"—and succeeds in gaining the good opinion of her audience. Mr. Dion Wade arouses merriment by his quaint delivery of the song "Why can't a lady do that?" and Cole and Rags present an astonishingly clever eccentric juggling act, in which balls, rings, umbrellas, and other articles are handled with marvellous dexterity. Bi-Bo-Bi is quite a versatile musician, and his performance of popular selections on the frame of hanging bells is delightfully melodious and a pleasure to listen to. In equally capable manner he plays other instruments to which we are unable to give a designation. Perhaps Mr. Bi-Bo-Bi will oblige? Miss Dora Lyric has a distinctly entertaining number in "Winkles and Watercress," and this, as well as her succeeding song, "Monte Carlo," is delivered with much expression and tunefulness. Mr. Sam Mayo, in addition to his own amusing vocal efforts, is organising an amateur singing concert for the best impersonation of himself in either of his two songs, "I'm going to sing a song to you this evening" and "You must be tired of me, I know." There are three money prizes, and the final "heats" were arranged to take place in the second house last night. The competition is proving highly popular and highly diverting to the spectators. Mr. George Newburn gives characteristic imitations of well-known stars in their favourite ditties, and Mr. Russell Brandow smartly executes a series of difficult dances with infinite credit to himself. The Xentrix also are seen and admired in an exceedingly pretty and well-arranged Terpsichorean act, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope displays several interesting subjects.

SADLER'S WELLS.

Some of the adventures of Sexton Blake, the detective, who is so popular a personage of fiction to the readers of some of the Harmsworth periodicals, are made the subject of a playlet, which is to be seen for the first time this week at Sadler's Wells. The sketch is from the pen of Mr. C. Douglas Carlile, and bears the title,

"THE CASE OF THE KIDNAPPED KING."

Sexton Blake ..... MR. C. DOUGLAS CARLILE
Tinker ..... MR. LEE GILBERT
Pedro ..... HIMSELF
King Otto ..... MASTER GEOFFRY LEWIS
Prince Cloris ..... MR. HARVEY NORTON
Baron Vohnan ..... MR. J. LANGFORD
Prince Stephen ..... MR. CHAS. A. CARLILE
Princess Thyra ..... MISS CARLOTTA DE YONSON

There are four scenes. The first introduces us to Sexton Blake's office in Baker-street. To the famous detective there comes Princess Thyra, mother of King Otto of Merslau. That lady is much distressed on account of the plots against her and her son, the latter, a boy, having been kidnapped in a plot in which Prince Cloris and Prince Stephen, a hunchback, are concerned. The Princess now seeks the aid of Blake, with the object of discovering the whereabouts of her son, and of putting an end to the treachery that is on foot. Blake undertakes the commission, and promises to go to Merslau that day. When she has departed there enter a couple of members of the revolutionary party, who also seek the services of the detective at any price the latter may name. Blake, however, refuses to assist them in their evil plans, and manages to evade them when they attempt to make him a prisoner. In the following scene, the Palace at Merslau, Princess Thyra reproaches the hunchback, Stephen, with his wicked deeds, that daring member of the royal house having been guilty of several murders. He professes an affection for Thyra, and tells her that if she will marry him the succession of her son will be assured. She refuses him, for she is scarcely likely to wed a man who, apart from his many other crimes, murdered her husband. In this scene Sexton Blake appears disguised as a mariner, but eventually reveals his identity to Prince Cloris, whom he compels, at the point of a revolver, to sign a passport. Ultimately, through the detective's ingenuity and boldness, aided not a little by his assistant, Tinker, the young King Otto is restored to his mother, the prime movers in the plot are killed or otherwise dealt with, and everything ends happily, with fresh laurels to the detective. Mr. C. Douglas Carlile acted in vigorous style as Sexton Blake, and Miss Carlotta de Yonson pleasingly enacted the rôle of Princess Thyra. Mr. Harvey Norton as Prince Cloris, Master Geoffrey Lewis as the young King, Mr. Chas. A. Carlile as the hunchback, Stephen, all submitted able impersonations, while Mr. Lee Gilbert was amusing as Tinker.

Mr. Pete Murray, the acting-manager, offers an interesting list of other attractions this week. Miss Sable Fern delights the house with her rendering of "Trust in me, little girl," and "Oh, Mother Eve!" and Mr. Tom Odlin is exceedingly entertaining in his songs, "What a cheek!" and "The son of a millionaire." Miss Vera Crackles makes a hit with her ditty, "A little bit more," and Rochdale and Roya offer a capital duet and dancing act, the verses on the subject of "Ayesha" being excellently delivered. Leo and Roland perform some smart hand-balancing tricks, the ascent of a silver ladder by one of them holding the other being a remarkable feat. Mme. Adele Fillis and company present the scena, The Africander Maid, in which we are shown a trained horse, who gives evidence of wonderful intelligence. Mme. Fillis presents a charming figure as the Africander Maid. Miss Rose d'Aulby, the chorus vocalist, enchants her hearers with her rendering of the ballads, "Gibralter" and "Red Wing," and Mr. Will Belasco furnishes an agreeable musical act. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show, among other pictures, A Fisherman's Daughter.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

AT the Prince's Theatre, Glasgow, that refined and dashing principal boy, Miss Flora Cromer, is making the whole audience sing that haunting carol "Carolina Brown of Chinatown," which is published by the Star Music Co.

THAT quaint comedian Mr. John Humphreys, on Boxing night at the Adelphi, will sing the Star Co.'s catchy burlesque "Won't you waltz 'The Merry Widow' waltz with me?" Miss Ella Retford is also scoring heavily with this number in Glasgow.

MESSRS. SHEARD AND CO. inform us that Miss Margot Beatson (soprano) met with great success on Sunday last with Stanley Gordon's fine song "The last voyage," at the lifeboat concert given at the Coliseum, Glasgow. Also that Miss Tessa D'Alberte has selected Trotère's song "I love you more" for introduction in Messrs. Little and Darcy's Dalston pantomime Red Riding Hood. Miss Fay Reyne will also sing "Roses everywhere" as Fairy Queen in the pantomime Cinderella at the Pavilion, Mile End.

MR. LLOYD EDGAR, the director of "The Savoy ards' Entertainers," writes Messrs. Sheard that they have made their biggest success with the vocal duets "The merry vagabonds" and "Love the cuckoo," which have gone terrific.

THAT popular composer H. Trotère is a most conscientious worker, and never lets a chance escape him of making improvements in his songs whenever possible, even after publication. Messrs. Sheard have just issued an improved edition of his new song "The old warrior," which considerably strengthens it for the better. "It is a curious thing," says Mr. Trotère, "but my song, 'The deathless army' didn't go as I first published it, and it was not until after a fresh edition with my improvements had been published that the song began to grow into the great success it eventually became." Let us hope "The old warrior" will be a parallel case. Mr. Frank A. Wood will introduce the new version of "The old warrior" in Mr. E. Dottridge's pantomime at Oldham.

MR. FRANK PROBIN (baritone) writes Messrs. Sheard that having been so successful with their song "When the ebbtide flows" he is going to sing it in Messrs. Bliss and Bliss' pantomime Mother Goose at the Opera House, St. Helens.

MESSRS. SHEARD desire to announce that coloured lantern slides are now ready for their popular songs "Hold me tighter, Mr. Lighter" and "Jennie, don't swing on the gate." Messrs. F. A. Fullagar and Co. are also preparing slides for "Little silver moonbeam," "When the primrose comes again," "Don't break your loving heart for me," and "If I were a fairy queen."

MESSRS. SHEARD have accepted for immediate publication a new march two-step by C. Vanesta with the somewhat striking and up-to-date title, "The conquest of the air." The title-page will be ornamented with photos of the latest Zeppelin airship and two or three of the best aeroplanes.

MESSRS. SHEARD have acquired the British and Colonial rights of the great Continental waltz successes of the day, "Charme," "Valse Boston," by Th. Pinet, "Valerie," waltz, by Camillo Linka, and "Les Dernières Gouttes," valse, by Karl Kratzl. Quadrille band conductors should write in for band parts. They also report a continually increasing demand among chefs d'orchestres for their famous American waltz. The wedding of the winds," by John T. Hall. Band parts of this waltz may also be obtained of Messrs. Sheard and Co.

THE NATIONAL MUSIC PUBLISHING CO., 132, Charing Cross-road, W.C., are congratulating themselves on the success achieved by their one hundred guinea song entitled "When the leaves are tinged with gold." Mr. Fred Elton, who at present retains the music hall rights, is being encored nightly at the Camberwell Palace and the Granville, Walham Green. The demand has far exceeded the anticipation of the publishers, who expect phenomenal orders after its production in the various pantomimes, numbering over sixty. The song is also being produced nightly on various song-sheets, Messrs. Fullagar, of Cecil-court, having manufactured the slides, which are really most effective.

LOWENWIRTH AND COHAN continue to achieve success with "My little Eva," another of the "National" publications. This song created such a success at the Princess Theatre, Glasgow, last year, that it has been secured by almost every pantomime producer in Great Britain.

QUITE a furore was caused at the Music Hall, Greenock, on Monday evening last. When Will Godwin introduced his latest chorus success, "When I've a hundred pounds," he was called before the curtain no fewer than four times. The National Publishing Co. look forward to this number as another of their absolute "certainties." It is from the pens of E. W. Rogers and J. Chas. Moore.

WILKIE BARD, comedian, has secured the sole London rights for pantomime of "Put me upon an island where the girls are few," of which he will make a special feature at Old Drury. The National Music Publishing Co. have been fortunate enough to secure this number; and that quaint Scotch comedian Neil Kenyon will introduce in the same pantomime "You all want something to cuddle," published by the same firm.

THOSE well-tried successes, "I wish I had a pal" and "Call round" (by kind permission of Miss Victoria Monks), will be made free for pantomime on application to the publishers, the National Publishing Co., together with their latest craze, "Kate, won't you roller skate?"

"He's a white man, yes, and he's the right man too" applies to all principal boys who are singing this song in pantomime. Messrs. B. Feldman ask us, in their name, to wish all "White men" a very happy Christmas, and, incidentally, we may mention they included The Era in this category.

RARELY does it occur that one firm should supply the same artist two consecutive years with the success of the year. This extraordinary coincidence has been accomplished by Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., who were responsible last year for "Put me amongst the girls," and also this year's sensation, "I want you to see my girl," both launched to fame by Mr. Charles R. Whittle, who, in a recent letter, writes, "All Chatham is 'I want you to see my girl' mad. This number seems destined to be one of the crazes of the pantomime season.

ONLY four months ago, Mr. Bert Feldman purchased "A tiny seed of love," and at once realised that he had found the song of his life. His enthusiasm was evidently justified, for to-day it is the most discussed song in the profession. Ere long it will have invaded America, and also South Africa.

THE latest craze is roller skating, and Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have just purchased a song on this subject from Godfrey, Mellor, and Gifford. It is composed in their best style, and is another of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s "certs."

A POPULAR PAIR.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks have made the inevitable plunge into the variety theatres, and under the ægis of Mr. Alfred Butt have found a most appropriate pied à terre on the stage of the Palace Theatre, where so many musical comedy heroes and heroines have before discovered the delights of playing to the larger public of the halls. Their advent at the fine house in Cambridge-circus drew an immense audience on Monday, when the bewitching grace and sweetness of Miss Terriss, and the delightful irresponsibility, geniality, and buoyancy of Mr. Hicks once more exerted their charm. The trifle that has been written round the happy pair is from the pen of Mr. Paul Rubens, who entitles it The Fly-by-Night, a musical aero-play, with an 'Aero and an Aeroine. Of course, there is a story, which is set forth in a wonderful scene—the roofs of London by night, in the neighbourhood of Piccadilly-circus, which has been painted with a deal of cleverness by Mr. W. Hann. There are but two characters—Cicely the daughter of the editor of The Conquering Aero (who has offered a prize of £20,000 to the winner of an aeroplane race), and Rupert, one of the competitors, an old friend, whom she has not seen for years.

Cicely is watching on the roofs for the winning aeroplane, when Rupert descends from his machine in search of petrol. Cicely does not know Rupert in his aerial costume; but with the facility of musical comedy protagonists, they soon become associated in song and dance and patter, and assisting them are sixteen daughters of other London editors. Miss Terriss sings an artistically "dozey" song entitled "I am so solitary." Cicely joins Rupert in the duet "Things are not always the same," and has a capital number in "London." The ready gags of Mr. Hicks, and topical references, with occasional imitations of actors and a funny burlesque of the Apache dance, are immensely enjoyed. With the resourcefulness that is possessed by Mr. Hicks, we may be sure that the framework of the little piece will be furnished with more funny material, and as time goes on dull moments will be eliminated.

The prettiness of the whole thing, its airy gaiety and its modernity should specially appeal to Palace audiences; and Mr. Butt, who has done so much for the dressing and mounting of Fly-by-Night, may be congratulated on having secured such a Christmas attraction for his admirably-conducted theatre. We hardly need say that, with the greater freedom of the variety stage, Mr. Hicks's untiring energy, prompt readiness at gag, and sunny temperament, are allowed full scope. And the delicacy of Miss Ellaline Terriss's art, her expressive delivery of her songs, and her sly touches of burlesque are all in the purest spirit of comedy. The sixteen young ladies, a fascinating chorus, are costumed in the most fetching gowns, and make a pretty picture. The "'air" is by Willie Clarkson, who manages the wigging in his own incomparable fashion, and an excellent rendering of the music is secured by Mr. Herman Finck and his capital orchestra, the ensemble secured being excellent. On the opening night Miss Terriss was handed up half a dozen beautiful bouquets and a miniature airship in violets, and Mr. Hicks made a short speech of thanks after bringing on the author.

THE METROPOLITAN.

We were glad to note the return to duty of Mr. Jack Edgar, who is in much improved health. The popular manager is presenting an unusually varied programme, in which sketches play a prominent part. The first of the playlets to grip the attention of audiences of the Edgware-road palace is from the pen of the clever Mr. Frederick Fenn, the author of The Convict on the Hearth. It is entitled

"THE CONQUERING HERO."

Arthur Denison ..... MR. LEON M. LION
Helen ..... MISS NELLIE REDWOOD
A Constable ..... MR. H. PRICE
A Burglar ..... MR. FRANK COLLINS

On the theatre stage at its production at the Comedy in March, 1902, it was known as Judged by Appearances. It has a slight plot, but the dialogue is smart and the characterisation interesting. Arthur Denison, in an unreasonably jealous frame of mind, provokes his wife to air her views on hero worship, and to throw out a hint that he is a coward. His temper being completely roused, he threatens to commit suicide. Helen is not in the slightest degree alarmed, and ridiculing the idea, goes to bed, leaving him to carry out his purpose. It is impossible for him to do it, and with a loaded revolver in his hand he has to confess himself a coward. But the advent of a burglar, who covers him with a formidable shooting iron, inspires him with an idea. The cracksman shall shoot him; and, what is more, he will give him fifty pounds to do it. But Mr. Burglar is not going to put a noose round his neck, and Denison, who hectors and bullies him, is standing over him in a threatening attitude when the wife enters, and the spectacle of her husband cowing a great, hulking brute, who is whining for mercy, convinces her that her darling is as brave as a lion. Mr. Leon M. Lion as Arthur Denison and Miss Nellie Redwood as Helen play well into each other's hands, and Mr. Frank Collins is a capital burglar, the constable being artistically presented by Mr. H. Price.

Another sketch, or rather duologue, from the pen of John Cutler, K.C., is entitled

"A MATTER-OF-FACT HUSBAND."

Bella ..... MISS ELLA DIXON
Henry ..... MR. WILLIAM DEXTER

The husband of the title has no patience with his wife's yearning for romance, and cures her by disguising himself as a hero of foreign extraction. Under a mask he makes love to her, and after giving her a lesson discloses his identity. The trifle is brightly interpreted by Miss Ella Dixon and Mr. William Dexter.

Chirgwin is the star turn here, and others who entertain include Archie Rozer, who is applauded for his somersaulting; Minnie Mace, a dainty dancer; Joe Dale, light comedian; Leslie, Lyn, and Willie, in well-harmonised trios; Mamie Fenton, with a Scotch song and stories; Sibb and Sibb, in double trapeze act; Walter Wade, a vocal comedian, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, with some of the latest films.

FOLLOWING the lead of other towns, roller-skating will be inaugurated at the Pier Pavilion, Southampton, next week. Winslow's skates will be used, and the innovation should prove a great attraction.

MISS ELLA RETFORD has scored a success in pantomime, with a song entitled "Peggy, the pride of the mill." Everybody who remembers "She's a lassie from Lancashire" last year should at once secure this number for pantomime.

MR. MAURICE SCOTT writes: "I notice in your issue of Dec. 12 a paragraph in 'Songs, Writers, and Singers' column saying Mr. Kenneth Lyle is the composer of Miss Vesta Tilley's great success, 'That's the time a fellow wants his ma.' I also notice that Mr. Lyle has an advertisement in the same issue (a report taken from the Weekly Dispatch), in which he would infer that Mr. Lyle is the composer of the song. I have written to the Dispatch contradicting this. I enclose you a published copy of the song in question. You will see that I am the composer of same."

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

GEORGE GRAY AND THE V.A.F.

In the King's Bench Division on Monday, before Mr. Justice Darling and a Special Jury, Mr. George Gray brought an action against the Variety Artists' Federation, Mr. C. C. Bartram, the editor, and Messrs. Odhams, the printers of the Performer, and Mr. Edmond Edmonds, Mr. Joe Elvin, and Mr. Paul Martinetti, trustees of the Federation, to recover damages for libel contained in the issue of the paper on Feb. 20, 1908. Defendants admitted that they published the libel, and relied on Section 4 of the Trades Disputes Act. They said that the words did not bear the meaning alleged, and urged that they were a report of a public meeting, bonâ-fide held, for discussing matters of public concern. Part of the words, they said, were true in substance and in fact, while the other part consisted of fair and bonâ-fide comment. Counsel opened the case, and plaintiff went into the box, when a consultation took place between counsel, and the case came to an abrupt termination. Mr. Hume Williams, K.C., Mr. W. Payne, and Mr. J. D. Cassels (instructed by Messrs. Morris and Rickards) were for the plaintiff; and Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., Mr. Doughty, and Mr. Nicholson (instructed by Messrs. Judge and Priestley) were for the defendants.

Mr. Hume Williams explained that the plaintiff was best known in connection with a sketch, The Fighting Parson, which had attained a very considerable measure of success. He sought to portray a clergyman, not as the effeminate, somewhat comic parson of plays like The Private Secretary, but as a healthy Englishman, prepared, if need be, to back up his religion with his fists, a character which always enlisted the sympathy of the audience. Mr. Gray become a music hall artist in 1900, and had been very closely identified with the various associations and schemes for mutual support and benevolent objects in the profession. In 1903 he was the chairman and auditor of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, and two years later was very largely interested in the association which settled a kind of general contract for artists. He also took a part in starting a benevolent society, which he presented with £1,000. In 1906 the Variety Artists' Federation was formed, and Mr. Joe O'Gorman became chairman and the plaintiff vice-chairman. Shortly after it came into existence it became the proprietor of the Performer, which up to then had been run by other people. Mr. Gray at first thought the Federation would be what he had desired the other society would be, and that its funds would not be devoted to furthering strikes if any should break out. In 1907, however, a quarrel took place between music hall artists pretty well all over the country and the proprietors of music halls. It assumed an acrimonious form, and a strike was threatened. Fortunately it was obviated, and the question at issue was referred to arbitration. What took place at the arbitration led to the uttering of the slander by Mr. O'Gorman and its publication in the newspaper. At the arbitration, Mr. Clemart and Mr. Pink, who were officers of the Federation, attended on its behalf, and Mr. Gray was called as a witness. During the hearing some evidence was given to the effect that this particular sketch, The Fighting Parson, was one which belonged rather to the theatre than the music hall stage. Mr. Gray thought that if that was the view which obtained in the profession he could not rightly continue his membership of the Federation, and he resigned. This year the question arose as to whether artists who gave their performance gratuitously to charity should do so absolutely without remuneration, or whether 2½ per cent. of the proceeds should be given to the Federation for its sick funds. The matter was discussed in the profession, and widely divergent views were expressed. On Feb. 20, 1908, Mr. O'Gorman, as chairman of the Federation, made a speech, which had been reproduced in the Performer, and in respect of which Mr. Gray now complained. Mr. O'Gorman, after dealing with the question before the association, went on to demolish one by one all those people who took a different view from himself. He first dealt with Dr. Bodie, who thought that the artist should give his services altogether gratuitously. He then referred to Mr. Stoll, and made the following statement complained of:—

"Now they came to Mr. George Gray. Mr. Gray said he had received a great number of confidential letters. The chairman did not like to tell any man that he was wilfully lying, but he would believe George Gray when he produced those confidential letters, and when he agreed to allow him (the chairman) to publish the letters he had received from him during the strike, which were also marked private and confidential.

"This gentleman never wrote a letter since he had first taken to desecrating clerical cloth in which he did not take the Lord's name in vain. In one letter he would talk of the King of Kings, another reminded you of the debt you owe your Maker, but that was nothing. Mr. Clemart and the speaker took a certain action over the committee election a year ago, and Mr. George Gray wrote to the president of the Grand Order of Water Rats saying that their conduct was not in accordance with the sacred tenets of Christ. Had the meeting ever heard of such blasphemy? Mr. George Gray came to the arbitration board, when Messrs. Pink, Clemart, and the speaker were representing the interests of the Federation. Mr. Stoll asked him what he had to complain about. He, with his usual mock piety, said: 'Nothing; I am here in the interests of the poor half-starving artists who do not receive a living wage.' Mr Stoll, with considerable warmth, said: 'Let me inform you, Mr. Gray, that it is not Oswald Stoll who does not give a living wage; nobody works on the Stoll tour under £5 a week, but it is you who do not pay the men who work for you a living wage.' At this point a member announced that he had worked for George Gray for 25s. a week, out of which he was compelled to buy his M.H.A.R.A. ticket. The chairman remarked that, as the meeting could see, Mr. Stoll had George Gray weighed up to a nicety."

As a matter of fact, the shorthand note of the proceedings did not contain any suggestion of such a statement by Mr. Stoll, and the latter would be called to say he never made it. Mr. Gray was very much hurt at the speech. He had written to the association asking whether the officials who had attended the arbitration had been paid for their services, and urging that the funds should not be devoted to such a purpose, and he could only imagine that that was the cause of the attack. On Feb. 27 he wrote:—

"Dear Sir,—In the cause of justice, I trust you will permit me to reply to the scurrilous statements in the report of a meeting of Feb. 20, statements calculated to do me grievous moral and financial harm. It was stated that Mr. Stoll had said to me before the Board of Arbitration, 'That you do not pay the men who work for you a living wage,' and that a member of the V.A.F. (by the rules a bonâ-fide artist) had worked for me for 25s. a week and been compelled to buy a M.H.A.R.A. ticket. Such statements are false. Travelling as a theatrical company, and scheduled by the railway companies as such, I have never had need for M.H.A.R.A. tickets, although in conformance with the rules of that association I yearly subscribe for four tickets, and for which I personally pay. But, unfortunately, there have been certain artists in straitened circumstances, who have, in many towns, asked to be permitted to go on as supers, and at the end of the week, needless to say, they had not received super wages. Only a few weeks back, one whom I had known to have 'topped' the bills at the principal halls of London, and wearing a V.A.F. badge, approached me, and, to quote his own words, 'I would rather super than ask for charity.' He dressed with some of my principals, and on Saturday night I personally paid him—not super money. His eyes filled with tears, and, grasping my hand, he said, 'Thank God, I can now get my props.' He was grateful; I was repaid. There are others, many others; some also grateful, some not.

"I have received a letter from Mr. Stoll repudiating the words above mentioned, thus: 'I may say that I have not the slightest recollection of having used them, and, if taken with this, the verbatim reports of the meetings do not contain them, it is pretty obvious they were never uttered.'

"As to the suggestion of desecrating the clerical cloth and taking the Lord's Name in vain, I leave myself in the hands of the intelligent, and to the opinions of bishops and clergy, from whom I hold letters thanking me for upholding the character of the cloth as a man, and not as usually upon the stage, as an anæmic idiot."

Mr. Justice Darling: Is that supposed to be a quotation from a bishop—the anæmic idiot?

Mr. Hume Williams: No, but a bishop might have done worse than to write it. The following is the plaintiff's letter to the Rats which was alleged to be blasphemous:

"Dear Rats,—I have received enclosed and other circulars. I sincerely hope they have not been circulated under the auspices of the lodge, because, in my humble opinion, such proceedings would be degrading and humilitating to the Order, and utterly and entirely against the ritual. The religion of Water Rats, as understood by me, is to do good to others, speak ill of none, and, on all fours with the ancient creed of Masonry, which aims at the performance of the tenets and teachings of Christ—'the greatest good to the greatest number.' The Federation was formed for the betterment, social and otherwise, of the calling which we follow. The Federation is a democracy, and not an autocracy. All are units, and all should be bound in one unanimous bond of Christian Socialism. . . . . Let us be Water Rats in soul and deed, according to our ritual—a ritual that should be more carefully studied and, more often than it is, recited and inwardly digested.—In the cause of freedom and the federation, I am, impartially and fraternally, RAT GEORGE GRAY."

Plaintiff concluded his letter by saying:

"Undesirous of doing anything to financially cripple an institution which always had my sympathy and support, I have instructed my solicitors merely to apply for a public apology, failing which there will be nothing left but to vindicate my position by recourse to law."

The attitude taken up by Mr. O'Gorman was shown by his answer, which ran:

"Dear Sir,—I regret having to depart from my resolve to refrain from writing letters to the Press, but I must for once, in order to reply to another of those mock-missionary epistles from ex-V.A.F. 2,000, with which we are now getting so familiar. The latest, you will agree, is quite typical. He says a poor artist, wearing a V.A.F. badge, to whom he gave (if he did) a cheque for a thousand pounds—I mean, not 'super money'—said, as 'his eyes filled with tears, and grasping my hands, "Thank God, I can now get my props." He was grateful; I was repaid.' How saintly! St. Peter by this time must have ordered a beautifully-designed halo for St. George III., ex-vice-chairman and ex-V.A.F. 2,000. . . . Now, sir, this philanthropic ex-V.A.F. 2,000, through the late solicitors of the Federation, writes demanding an anology. In reply, I most emphatically decline. I withdraw nothing.—Yours fraternally, JOE O'GORMAN, Chairman of the Variety Artists' Federation."

Mr. Marshall Hall objected to this letter, as Mr. O'Gorman had been struck out of the action and judgment given in his favour.

His Lordship (to Mr. Hume Williams): I have been wondering why you did not sue him for slander. Blasphemy is a crime at common law, and therefore Mr. O'Gorman would be liable to an action for slander.

Mr. Hume Williams explained that he presumed those advising the plaintiffs thought the plea of privilege would be a good one, and the action was dismissed on their application.

Counsel went on to say that on the paper appeared:

"Our policy, in all things, fair; to everyone, just; to all, defence; to opponents, courteous; to friends, appreciative; to right the wrong; to protect the weak; to assist all; to malign none."

Mr. George Gray, the plaintiff, examined by Mr. Payne, said that he had been an actor for twenty-five years, and in 1900 he took to the variety stage. He had since acted in The Fighting Parson and other sketches—the former all over the United Kingdom.

His Lordship: Where is it most appreciated?

Plaintiff: Everywhere, my lord.

Describing the Fighting Parson, witness said that he wore the costume of a clergyman. As to the plot, magistrates had said it was highly elevating and moral.

Mr. Marshall Hall: That is heresay.

The plot, continued witness, was very simple. There were two brothers in it, one rakish and the other of the Joseph Surface type. "In the end," said witness, "I thrash a man who plays the part of a bully."

His Lordship: Being still dressed as a clergyman?

Witness: In a cassock, my lord. In the first part of the play I am dressed as a huntsman.

In the course of further evidence witness said that he gave £35 to the funds of the strike in the variety artists' dispute——

His Lordship: The question will have to be decided whether this is an action which can be brought against a trade union at all, whether a trade union cannot libel anyone it pleases.

After a consultation between the parties and counsel, Mr. Hume Williams said that he was glad to be able to inform his lordship that the case was at an end. Mr. Gray had never been anxious to make money out of these proceedings, and it was only the attitude assumed towards him in the issue of the Performer of March 5 which made it necessary to bring the action. The defendants now, under the advice of Mr. Marshall Hall, had consented to pay £100 to any theatrical charity which Mr. Gray should name, pay his costs, and unreservedly withdraw and apologise for the statements complained of.

Mr. Marshall Hall said that he did not want to discuss the question whether the Federation were liable as a trade union or not. They had used words which were not justifiable, although without malice, and the proper thing for them to do in the interests of the Federation was to assent to the course indicated.

Mr. Hume Williams asked that a juror should be withdrawn.

In consenting to this course being taken his lordship said that this was the most that he could allow. Section 4 of the Trade Disputes Act, 1906, was in the following terms:

"An action against a trade union, whether of workmen or of masters, or against any member or officials thereof, on behalf of themselves or of other members of the trade union, in respect of any tortious act alleged to have been cited by or on behalf of a trade union shall not be entertained by any Court."

This meant that courts of law had been absolutely deprived of any jurisdiction to hear a claim against a trade union, and any wrong which they do in the course of a trade dispute, and even if they consent to make some reparation the statute—as it seemed to his lordship, and he should hold so until he was corrected by the House of Lords—made it impossible for a court of law to enter any judgment whatever in a cause it is forbidden to entertain, even for costs for or against a trade union, if the trade union be sued for a tortious act which it is alleged to have committed in the course of a trade dispute. In this case a trade union was by name made party to the action. The defendant, O'Gorman, had been dismissed, and the others were sued as trustees and officers of the union. Whether witnesses could have been prosecuted for perjury if uttered in the course of such an action he did not know; he should say not. He was not sure whether this was a judicial proceeding at all, or whether, when he first saw the words "trade union" in the pleadings, he ought not to have said, "I cannot entertain the action." He could give no judgment nor make the Court a party to any sort of arrangement.

To the jury his lordship said that they were going to be paid a guinea each, but he did not know whether they were legally entitled to it.

CLAIM AGAINST MARIE LOFTUS.

In the King's Bench Division on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Lawrance and a special jury, Miss Marie Loftus was sued for damages for alleged breach of contract. The plaintiff was Mr. Thomas Allan Edwardes, the well-known Midlands proprietor. The breach was alleged in connection with Miss Marie Loftus's non-appearance at the Hippodrome, Stoke, in November, 1907.

Mr. M. Shearman, K.C., and Mr. Charles A. McCurdy appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., and Mr. Charles Doughty for the defendant.

Mr. Shearman said the contract, dated Oct. 11, 1907, was for one week, at a salary of £70, with two appearances nightly and one matinée as a "character artist," subject to the rules and regulations of the establishment—"no play no pay."

The contract had this condition:

"Any artist totally failing to fulfil this engagement shall forfeit to the management twice the amount of salary stated therein as liquidated damages; and in the event of partial failure to fulfil this engagement, a proportionate share of the hereinbefore mentioned damages shall be deemed to be forfeited; or an action at law may be entered into to determine damages, at the option of the management. No excuse on the ground of illness will be accepted unless accompanied by a certificate from a properly qualified medical practitioner."

Miss Marie Loftus did not keep her engagement on account, it was said, of bad health. She was ordered a sea voyage, and went to South Africa, where she had an engagement at £200 per week. No doctor's certificate was sent. Her other defence was that the contract was rescinded.

It appeared that in March, 1907, when she was to appear at Grimsby, she telegraphed to plaintiff's manager:

"Voice very bad. Can you make the date the 25th instead of 18th? If not feel I cannot help you. Unable to open at Wolverhampton this week."

That contract was off, and it was now said that the cancellation also covered the contract for November at Stoke.

Mr. Marshall Hall observed that Mr. Shearman generally appeared for ladies in distress; he was their recognised champion; and, no doubt, he would do all he could for the lady in this case as she thought she had a grievance. They had heard before now of ladies with grievances. Some ladies, for instance, tied themselves to chairs and vowed they wouldn't be removed.

Mr. T. A. Edwardes, giving evidence, said he owned theatres at Sheffield, Derby, and Stoke, and was managing-director of the Grimsby Palace Theatre Company. He gave evidence as to the contract. He was in Italy when Miss Marie Loftus sent the telegram to Grimsby about her voice.

Cross-examined by Mr. Marshall Hall: Your manager was left in full authority in your absence?—Absolutely.

Miss Loftus, received a telegram: "Contracts are off"?—Mr. Taylor, the manager, would have no power to send such a telegram.

Do you know that Miss Loftus was ill with gouty laryngitis, so that her life was despaired of, and do you know that the only thing that would save her life was a sea voyage?—At a big salary. (Laughter.)

Does not Miss Loftus often earn £150 per week?—Sometimes.

Six weeks were spent in travelling. Do you know that the cost of living in South Africa is double what it is here?—I can't say.

Do you know she had to take a special dresser and a call-boy?—I can't say.

What was the star turn you engaged instead of Miss Loftus?—"The Sorrows of Satan." (Laughter.)

Nothing personal in your sorrow! You had a good week?—No.

Your sorrow was greater at the end than at the beginning? (Laughter.)—I don't know.

Mr. Herbert James Taylor, at present manager of the Devonport Hippodrome, said that in the spring of 1907 he was manager for Mr. T. A. Edwardes. He received the telegram from Miss Loftus about her voice, but did not answer it. He denied sending a telegram, "All contracts are off."

Mr. Edwardes, recalled, said he engaged Mrs. Brown-Potter to take the place of Miss Loftus.

Miss Marie Loftus gave evidence. In March, 1907, she received a reply telegram which, to the best of her recollection read, "Contracts off. (Signed) Allan Edwardes." Her doctor ordered her to go to South Africa for the voyage. She had then no South African engagements. An agent fixed up one for her.

Mr. Marshall Hall: Everyone knew you were going?—Yes.

Photographs of your departure were in the illustrated papers and flowers were sent to you?—Yes.

When the writ in this action was served her nephew wrote:

"Miss Loftus desire me to say you must have forgotten the wire you sent, and which she has filed, to the effect that all contracts are off."

She found afterwards that by some mistake this telegram had not been filed.

Cross-examined: She kept the telegram from March until September, 1907, when having shown it to her agent to prove that he was not entitled to commission, she destroyed it.

Dr. D. J. Monroe, of Brixton, said that in 1907 he ordered Miss Loftus to take a sea voyage. He thought there was a danger then of her losing her voice.

Miss Catherine Loftus, niece of the defendant, said she distinctly remembered opening the telegram about contracts being off.

Mr. Tom Price, theatrical agent, gave evidence that Miss Loftus would lose money by her South African tour.

The jury returned a verdict for Miss Marie Loftus, and judgment was given accordingly.

"THE DUCHESS OF DEPTFORD."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—My attention has been called to a description in your issue of Dec. 5 of a sketch produced at the Standard, Pimlico, and styled The Duchess of Deptford. The plot, according to details given, is practically identical with that of a sketch produced by me as far back as December, 1900, at Chatham, under the title of Two's Company ——, and afterwards revised and rechristened A Tea House Flirtation. Under this title the said sketch was performed by my company and self at various London and provincial variety theatres, including a tour of the Moss-Stoll halls. The main idea was obtained from an old French farce.—Faithfully yours,

G. H. SMYTHSON

THE V.A.F. SUED FOR LIBEL.

In the Queen's Bench on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Darling and a special jury, the Variety Artists' Federation and its trustees, Mr. Edmond Edmonds, Mr. Joe Elvin, Mr. Paul Martinetti, and Mr. C. C. Bartram, editor, and Messrs. Odhams, printers of the Performer, the organ of the federation, were defendants in an action in which Mr. A. R. Rickards, a member of the firm of Morris and Rickards, formerly solicitors to the federation, sought to recover damages for libel alleged to be contained in the Performer. The issue in question contained a report of a meeting, at which the financial position of the paper was discussed, and where the words occurred:

"In connection with the unfortunate libel action into which we were precipitated by the ill advice of our former legal representatives."

Mr. Hume Williams, K.C., Mr. M. O'Connor, and Mr. J. D. Cassels (instructed by Messrs Greenwood and Greenwood) were for the plaintiff; and Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., and Mr. Charles Doughty (instructed by Messrs. Judge and Priestley) appeared for the defendants.

Plaintiff denied that an article alleged to have been submitted to him before insertion in the Performer, and which it was asserted he had passed as not libellous, had ever been shown to him; he never saw it until it was read in court.

Mr. Bartram gave evidence that the article was submitted to the plaintiff, and passed by him. The federation had a legal committee, whose members were changed every month, as performers came to London from the provinces.

His Lordship: I understand that artists come to London, and have a "turn" on the legal committee, and then return to the provinces. (Laughter.)

Mr. Hume Williams: Is it looked on as part of the entertainment? (Laughter.)

Witness: We take our federation very seriously; we do not take it as an entertainment, we reserve that for the stage.

By the Court: Before he became editor of the Performer he was on the music-hall stage. On the Saturday night he did his last turn on the stage, and on the Monday he took up his position as editor.

His Lordship: What sort of entertainment did you give?—I was a juggler, and worked with a partner.

When you joined the federation, you went on juggling till you became editor?—Yes.

You knew nothing about libels and such like?—I had put in my apprenticeship in a newspaper office, and I had written as a correspondent of the various music-hall papers from the various places I visited; but the real depths of the law of libel I did not thoroughly understand. (Laughter.)

Though I gather you had been apprenticed to it? (Laughter.)—I had been apprenticed to the type-setting department.

Mr. Doughty pointed out that the only charge made against Mr. Rickards was that on one occasion he had given ill-advice. It was also pleaded that the report was privileged.

Mr. Williams quoted from an article in the Performer, referring to a particular music-hall, in which it was stated:

"The stage is so old that one expects to see the performer disappear cellarwards with a crash." (Laughter.)

His Lordship. That would often be a relief to the audience. (Laughter.)

Mr. Williams went on to read:

"The curtain is a rag that might have been painted by one of Noah's sons with a leaning towards art." (Laughter.)

His lordship, in summing up, said that Mr. Marshall Hall had submitted that no action could be taken against any trade union for any wrong, even libel, assault, malicious prosecution, or false imprisonment. If that were the law it gave a trade union the privilege to commit untold wrong and inflict inconceivable damage on other people, and to remain absolutely untouched by any law of the land. There was no direct authority on the point. It depended on the meaning of the Trades Disputes Act of 1906. His lordship held that trade unions were amenable if they committed such wrongs unless they did them in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute. If such acts were committed by a trade union in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, Parliament had enacted that it should enjoy absolute immunity. It was not for his lordship to criticise the law, but only to lay it down to the jury. He had ruled against the defendants in this case because there was no suggestion that the words which were alleged to be a libel were published in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute. It was in that respect that they differed from the subject-matter of the action brought by Mr. Gray on Monday. The jury must therefore judge of the case on its merits.

After retiring for about two hours the jury found for the plaintiff, damages £25, and in answer to his lordship added that they thought the libel was published without malice, that the words published were a matter of public concern, but that the publication of them was not for the public benefit.

His lordship then entered judgment for the plaintiff for £25 and costs.

DEATH OF MR. FRANK HEATH.

We regret to announce the death on Wednesday of Mr. Frank Heath, at his residence in Teignmouth-road, Cricklewood. Mr. Heath, who was fifty-two years of age, had been ill for eight weeks with inflammation of the brain. Specialists were called in, but their opinions of the case were not hopeful, and a fatal termination was feared from the first.

Mr. Frank Heath was for a number of years chairman at the Metropolitan, during the time that Mr. Wm. Bailey was the manager, and his genial manners and kindly disposition made him many friends amongst the habitués of the hall. He was an old and much esteemed member of the Music Hall Sick Fund, and was one of its most energetic and experienced representatives on the management committee. When a few years ago Mr. Wm. Bailey resigned the post of hon. treasurer to the oldest professional Fund Mr. Heath accepted the vacant position, which he was compelled to resign two months ago, when attacked by the disease which has caused his death. Deep sympathy will be felt for the widow and children of the deceased in their irreparable loss. The funeral will take place at St. Mary's Catholic Cemetery, Kensal Green, on Monday at 12.30 p.m., starting from the residence at 11.45.

MR. SIDNEY BACON has secured a long lease of the St. James's Hall, Kingston-on-Thames, which he opens to-day with a cinematograph entertainment. The Victoria Hall, York, opens under his management on Monday with a similar show. Mr. Bacon's new venture at Middlesbrough has proved a pronounced success, and the old-established hall is crowded at every performance.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Coming Events.

The executive officials of the Showmen's Guild are now busy preparing for the great annual meetings of the society. In accordance with the rules and constitution, the annual business committees will take place at Manchester. The date of the public meeting there is Jan. 13, and the place of meeting will be the Memorial Hall, Albert-square, at 4 p.m. The business committee will meet at 11 in the forenoon of the same day at the Guild committee room, the Black Lion Hotel, Salford.

The President-Elect.

An extremely interesting event at Manchester will be the election of the new President of the Guild. At the recent committee meeting at Manchester the unanimous choice of the Executive Council was Mr. Patrick Collins. It is confidently anticipated that the nomination of the Council will be endorsed by the whole body of members. Mr. Collins has accepted the nomination, and in an interesting letter to the Guild Chaplain says:

"I thank you and the committee for the confidence you have shown in me by proposing me as President of the Showmen's Guild for next year. If elected, I will accept the honour and do my best to further our cause. But you know I am a very busy man, and occasionally you will have to excuse me attending meetings. I know that in you I shall have so enthusiastic a helper that my official duties will be comparatively easy and light. Were it not for that I could not have seen my way to accept the responsibility. But as we shall combine forces I shall endeavour to make next year a record year for the Guild. It shall not be my fault if we do not succeed in this."

The Annual London Meetings.

These gatherings will take place, as usual, at the World's Fair, Mr. T. E. Reed, sole lessee, having placed (with his customary zeal for the Society) the whole resources of the hall at the disposal of the committee. The public meeting will take place at half-past eleven in the forenoon of Jan. 20. The committee are asking the retiring President, Lord George Sanger, to be present, and to formally hand over the presidency to his successor, Mr. P. Collins. If the venerable leader of the showman world can be prevailed upon (subject, of course, to health considerations) to do this, it will be a ceremony and an occasion of great significance—the man who for years has borne the burden and heat of conflict for his brethren of the road—committing into younger hands the responsibilities and the work that he has so worthily maintained.

The Retirement of Lord George Sanger.

An extremely important part of the business of the London meeting will be the tendering of the thanks and gratitude of the whole body of showmen to their life-long friend and champion, George Sanger. The executive committee feel that the end of the last year of their revered President Lord George Sanger's presidency is the fitting time and appropriate occasion to unite in words of gratitude and abiding loyalty to their great leader.

The Significance of the Coming Events.

No movement can grow and prosper unless it contains within itself strength to suffer great changes, to bear great losses, and to continue to face serious periods of crises. The organised showmen of the Empire have been skilfully piloted through the tremendous period of twenty years of struggle and strife against the adverse forces massed against them. Lord George Sanger has stood by them with the power of his great name and well-won reputation, with his open-handed generosity, with his acute and ever-ready counsel. Can we wonder that Showland was loth to face the grave possibilities of his retirement? Nay, it was out of the very depths of their loyalty and affection that during the past few years they have persistently refused to accept his repeated warnings and his oft-asserted determination to really retire. It was in a sense selfish of them to wish to retain him; but, after all, at its heart foundations it was a noble selfishness. We never wish to part with those whom we reverence and love.

The Linking Up of the Past and the Future.

If Lord George Sanger will be able to gratify the wish of his people and personally conduct the new President to the chair, it will be the linking up of the past and the future. Just think of the two chief actors in the scene—the aged leader of a now well-organised army of workers (over 70,000 strong) committing into the hands of a comparatively young man the reins of supreme power and government. This is exactly as it ever ought to be. This is the true sequence of well-ordered life and progress. This is the right outcome of the serious warning of both President and Chaplain at the last meeting in the now historic room at the World's Fair.

Great indeed was the loss the Guild faced at the beginning of 1908, but great has been the expression of strong determination to meet the situation as men, and to make the Guild strong for its work.

Men, under the pressure of time and things, must come to the end of their strength and powers. Great movements embodying the eternal principles of truth, liberty, and justice never die. It is right and just that it should be so. It is for each one in his time to do his best for the good of mankind, and to do his best, confident that others would follow him—perhaps reaping where he has laboriously sown. Yet still the good abides, and the world (despite all that the pessimists tell us) grows better and wiser.

Stories of Showman Life.

A reference to our advertising columns will show that the long-expected sixpenny book of stories from the pen of the Guild Chaplain is now ready. It may be obtained direct from The Era offices by post for 7½d. It will also be on sale at the railway bookstalls and the booksellers' as soon as arrangements can be made for the purpose. The author determined to publish this first series of his sketches of show life at the popular sixpence in order that they might reach the British public. His primary object in writing the stories was to vindicate the life and character of all sorts and conditions of showmen and show-women. Every phase of life on the fairground is shown in its true colours, yet ever with a brother's care for the inner working of the heart life and the home life of showland.

He has lived amongst showmen, not as a detective to reveal to a wider world the faults and failings of his people, but "to point a moral and to adorn a tale" that shall prove to be true to life. Men and women, loving, hating, working, succeeding, failing, just as other mortals do, yet withal true men and women; friends, lovers, fathers, mothers, and children—just ordinary people, yet perforce extraordinary (such is the scenario of showland) to the people not on the stage of actual experience.

If showpeople wish to provide the antidote to all the poisonous trash of the ordinary "goody-goody" books libelling caravan and show life, then now is their chance—send out in great numbers the Chaplain's garland of showman stories.

MEN OF MARK IN SHOWLAND.

MR. FRED BIBBY, OF MANCHESTER.

To speak to showmen of such a well-known character in the world of shows and its allied industries as Mr. Fred Bibby, of Manchester, reminds one of the old tag, "What's the good of carrying coals to Newcastle?" For the whole of his busy life the great "Banner King" of Showland has been a conspicuous and celebrated figure. This is not only because of his undoubted business ability and large interests in the firm of J. Bibby and Co., of High-street, Manchester, but more especially on account of the unceasing interest, great gifts and abilities which he has (without fee or reward) devoted to the vindication of the character of showmen, and to the protection of their interests whenever attacked.

We remember with great gratitude how in the very early days of the United Kingdom Showmen and Vandwellers' Protection Association (now universally known under its short title "The Showmen's Guild") Mr. Bibby worked with untiring zeal for the promotion of those principles of trade combination which eventually led to the establishment of the showmen's Trade Society on the strong basis which now marks its existence and acceptance as the recognised authority in Showland.

Originally intended for the legal profession, Mr. Fred Bibby was articled to a Manchester firm of solicitors, and we understand was just on the point of beginning what promised to be a brilliant professional career when, owing to the exigence of family affairs, he was obliged to relinquish the ambition of a legal career and to assume the headship and direction of the firm of J. Bibby and Co.

Mr. Fred Bibby's training and business acumen have been of the greatest possible value in the extremely important work he has done for the organised showmen. He has also considerable literary ability, and wields a powerful and convincing pen when it is needed in the defence of his showmen friends. He has the honour of being the pioneer in the now fully-occupied field of "Showmen Trade Directories, Gazettes, and Year Books." He published a Trade Directory and Gazette of the Fairs in the early 'nineties of the last century, at the very beginning of the Showmen's Guild.

When the Committee of the Guild determined to publish its own Year Book, Mr. Bibby very generously (and characteristically) ceased to publish his own book, and since the starting of the Showmen's Year Book has taken an extremely kind interest in its success.

As a public speaker Mr. Bibby has attained considerable eminence; his powerful appeals for the good of Showland are leading features of the annual meetings of the society at Manchester and London.

There is no doubt that, but for the restrictive rule that the presidents of the Guild must be bona-fide showmen, Mr. Fred Bibby would have been called to occupy the supreme seat of control and direction on the Executive of the Showmen's Guild.

MR. FRED BIBBY AND PARTY CARAVANNING.

Our interesting picture illustrates Mr. Fred Bibby in a new (old) character—a caravanner. We congratulate the Caravan Club of Great Britain and Ireland on its famous member—and not by any means amateur—vanner.

Mr. Fred Bibby has been associated with the theatrical and musical world for many years, and has identified himself with most of the charity fêtes in the district, being an excellent organiser of these. He has also acted as judge in cycle parades and similar contests, having made his first public appearance in the entertainment world when only four years of age, since when he has filled every roli from actor to provider of entertainments. He is an I.P.M. of the Alexandra Lodge (No. 993) of Freemasons, vice-president and one of the founders of the Levenshulme Operatic and Dramatic Society, patron of the Salford Harriers and of the Levenshulme Orchestral Society.

Horwich Fair Ground.

President Kemp's Cinematograph is the attraction this week, and full houses at every performance are the rule. A sacred concert is announced for Sunday next.

Notes from Wales.

Mr. H. Steel Parry's Electric Bioscope has proved such an attraction at Bridgend, South Wales, that its visit has been extended to this week. There is a seemingly endless variety of charming films in stock, which never fail to elicit applause and to induce visitors to recommend it to their friends and come again themselves. A pleasing variation is afforded by series of lantern views, described in song by the gramaphone.

The Phœnix Theatre at the Carmarthen Pleasure Fairground has been again well patronised during the week. Mr. Harry Cowell, who performs the dual part of stage-manager and tragedian, as well as the rôle of proprietor, has the happy knack of judging the popular taste of his patrons, with the consequent result that he is rewarded with crowded houses. This week the programme was as follows:—Monday evening, The Dumb Man of Manchester; Tuesday, Leah; Wednesday, The Maid of Cefn Ydfa; Thursday, The Sorrows of Satan; and Friday, Uncle Tom's Cabin. For Saturday afternoon a children's pantomime, Little Red Riding Hood, was announced, and for Saturday evening, The Four Knaves of the Pack.

Maestag.

Messrs. Dooner and Son are here paying a return visit, and exceptionally fine business is being done. Some fine pictures are being exhibited, including that wonderful film, The Birth of Christ. The variety part of the entertainment is contributed to by Chant and Chant, comedy duettists, and Miss Nellie Anderson, top-boot dancer.

FAMOUS SHOWS AND SHOWMEN.

THE STORY OF ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF BRITISH SHOW LIFE.

By the Rev. Thomas Horne
(Chaplain to the Showmen's Guild).
[Copyright.]

CHAPTER IX.

Period 1825-1850.

In attempting a strictly historical survey of the show life of the nation in the nineteenth century, we have divided our subject-matter into four great divisions of equal length as regards the time covered, but of necessity (as we near our own day) of increasing importance. It is a note of all true life that however it may have periods of reaction, and perforce of retrogression, there must be within it principles of vitality and progress. In other words, good things never die. This is true of show life and the great hold which our fairs, feasts, and wakes have upon the national life. In the dark hour of persecution, nigh unto death, but the innate power of his true life, the showman lived through it all.

The period we have already traversed (1800-1825) witnessed a gigantic struggle. A false political economy for a time dominated the Government of the country, and the industry of the fair-ground was amongst the national crafts that suffered most from this false and narrow-minded view of national life. In our treatment of the first quarter of the century under review we essayed to give the student of the growth of show life in Great Britain some accurate basis for authentic historical research. We referred to the terrible sufferings of the people of our Motherland, and indicated some of the sources of national upheaval.

The People's Insistent Cry for More Liberty of Life.

The period of twenty-five years (1825-1850) that we are now endeavouring to deal with was pregnant with great effort for the liberty of the individual. Religious, social, and political revolutions of the most far-reaching consequence succeeded after much strife in laying the foundation of the Empire as we know it to-day. Just to enumerate some of these, Roman Catholics, Nonconformists, and Jews were relieved of religious and political disabilities; the great Reform Bill—the charter of our political liberties—was passed; slavery was abolished; and new systems of poor law and municipal government were established.

The opening year of our period—1825—was marked by a terrible time of trade panic, followed by riots in the manufacturing districts, with the consequent repeated mistakes of the then governing classes in dealing with the workers of the nation. We can well imagine the awful sufferings of the poor travelling showmen of those days, hounded from place to place by a governing class still tainted with the heresy of feudalism, with no refuge of popular sympathy and support to fall back upon, because the working classes were suffering starvation themselves, and were too much engrossed in the struggle for political freedom to give any time to the lighter and brighter sides of life. A discontented and poverty-stricken people had neither time nor means to encourage the showman.

The Showmen's Struggle for Liberty of Life.

The great struggle of the mercantile and the industrial classes for political power and industrial liberty had in a more restricted measure its counterpart in Showland. Just in the same way as the merchant and the worker were throwing off the shackles of feudalism and asserting, and by strenuous struggle obtaining, greater freedom, so, too, the showman of this fighting era was waging a war with the forces of privilege and caste, resisting the cruel exactions of such bad survivors of a bad past as "The King's Trumpeter" and "The Master of the Revels," who, by virtue of hereditary office, were able to impose a tax upon travelling entertainers and musicians of all sorts. The revolt of the showman against these exactions led to exciting scenes at Bartholomew's Fair early in the century. The King's Trumpeter, finding increasing difficulty in obtaining his tax from the showpeople, obtained a proclamation from the Lord Chamberlain setting forth the power of the King's Trumpeter over street musicians and ballad-mongers. When the Trumpeter ungallantly used force to a show-woman who was blowing a trumpet on a show at the fair, the lady, with great vigour, retaliated by knocking down the King's Trumpeter. Of course, the lady had to pay—most reformers have to pay—but the demonstration had its effect, and in due time the office of King's Trumpeter, with its emoluments and privileges, came to an end. Other struggles marked these early years of the nineteenth century. The great towns, led by the City of London, began to interfere with the rights of the people and the rights of showmen by arbitrary restrictions upon, and in some instances abolition of, the Charter privileges of the fairs. 1825 saw the abolition of Greenwich Fair. The fourteen days' liberty of old Bartholomew's Fair had been arbitrarily cut down to three days, and a vicious system of killing the fairs for show business by imposing exorbitant tolls became the approved method of public bodies when they wished to abolish a fair. Yet through all these difficulties and all these struggles shows and showmen not only survived, but grew and increased their hold upon the national life. The great showmen of this period were reaching the height of their success. Richardson, Scowton and Ball with theatrical booths; Wombwell, Atkins, and Ballard with menageries; Ducrow, Samwell, Saunders, Bradbury, and Clarke with circuses; and Lane, Keyes, Frasier, and Capelli with conjuring booths. With these were the always attendant satellites of the star concerns, the exhibitors of freaks and minor novelties. Such, in brief, were the elements of show-life in this country, when our second great division of our history—1825-1850—begins. A younger generation of showmen were coming into notice, and were serving their full apprenticeship to the craft. These included the Brothers Nelson and James Lee; Johnson, who was Nelson Lee's partner in the Richardson show later on; Hilton with menagerie, Holden with glass-blowing exhibition, Ewing with waxworks, Groves with art museum, Crockett with wild-beast show, Wild, Bannister, Holloway, Milton, Batty, Cooke, and others with shows and circuses in the provinces. Of these we shall treat in their turn.

Whilst the great characters of the Showman World of the first twenty-five years of the century were yet on the stage of life, and others equally notable in their day and generation were crowding to the front, there were others even more famous who, as yet, were not known even by name. We refer to the Henglers, Newsomes, Manders, and the greatest of all—the Sanger family. The record of these great ones of the travelling show, circus, and the fair-ground will more fittingly claim our attention towards the end of the first half of the nineteenth century.

It, however, were impossible for us to summarise the material at our disposal at this eventful epoch of national life without mentioning names that have become household words.

So with this excursus into the historic records of showland, we now turn to the detailed record of the twenty-five years before us in chronological order and importance of occurrence.

The City Determined to Abolish Bartholomew Fair.

The forces making for the abolition of London's great Carnival Fair, held in Smithfield, were a long time gaining strength and in achieving their fell purpose. As early as the year 1798 the City Corporation, after discussion, set aside a proposal to restrict the fair to one day's trading. The defenders of the fair rightly contended that such a measure would arouse a concentrated expression of public remonstrance that would in all probability lead to riots dangerous to life.

Henry Morley, in his book "Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair," says:—"In the course of a trial at Guildhall in the year 1827, involving the rights of Lord Kensington, it was stated, on Lord Kensington's behalf, that considering the corrupt state of the fair, and the nuisance caused by it in the neighbourhood of Smithfield, he should throw no obstacle in the way of its removal, and was ready to give up his own rights over it on being paid their value. His receipts from toll were stated to have been thirty or forty pounds a year, and their estimated value five or six hundred pounds."

In the years between 1798 and 1830 almost every fair was marked with the recrudescence of the persistent efforts of the Abolitionists to do away with it.

To finish our history of the measures taken to abolish the fair so far as it concerns the first thirty years of the nineteenth century, it remains to be told that the Corporation of London did buy the tolls from Lord Kensington in the year 1830. The fair rights vested in Lord Kensington, and all the rights and interests in Bartholomew Fair were thus concentrated in the one authority—the Corporation of the City of London. It is singularly significant, when we consider the almost absolute powers of the greatest Corporation in the land, that although they had the complete control and all rights and tollages of the fair in their hands as early as 1830, it was not until the year 1855 that the Abolitionists gained their purpose.

Historically, this reference to the slow growth of public opinion leading to acquiescence in the death of the fair is a wonderful proof of how deep rooted the love of the show really is in the minds of the British people.

Hone, the Diarist.

In the year 1825 this painstaking chronicler was so convinced that the end of the fair was nigh at hand, that in his "Table Book" he carefully sets down for the information of posterity the shows and amusements at the fair in that year. He says that the fair began on the Saturday (and thousands visited the Fairground on the Sunday) when, of course, all trading was strictly forbidden. Describing the toy stalls, he speaks of them as being as large and as well stocked as some of the bazaars that still travel the great fairs of England. The principal show was Richardson's portable theatre. "Richardson's platform," he says, "was lined with green baize, festooned with crimson curtains and lined with fifteen hundred variegated lamps." The money-takers sat in Gothic alcoves at the receipt of custom. The band was apparelled as Royal Beefeaters, and the outside attraction was a brilliant parade of his dramatic company, dressed in the splendid costumes suitable to their various parts in tragedy, comedy, or pantomime.

Wombwell's menagerie was also noted by Hone, with its splendid front and full brass band. The great rival show, Atkins's menagerie, was announced as having with it "that colossal animal, the wonderful performing elephant, upwards of ten feet high, five tons weight. His consumption of hay, corn, straw, carrots, water, &c., exceeds eight hundred pounds daily."

A band of eight musicians played the outside music attired in scarlet Beefeaters' coats and skin caps. A trumpet-voiced doorsman, despite the brazen music, volleyed forth: "Don't be deceived. The only lion and tigress in one den that are to be seen in the fair, or the proprietor will forfeit one thousand guineas."

The circuses were those of Samwell and Clarke, both of them excellent concerns of their kind.

Mr. Hone tells us that at this fair he saw the mermaid in a sideshow. He quaintly describes the disillusionment he experienced when he tried to verify the beautiful sketches of the sea siren painted on the outside canvas of the booth, with the shrivelled-up monstrosity, half-monkey, half-fish, exhibited by the showman within.

The other concerns were a peep show, exhibiting pictures of the murder of Mr. Weare and of the visit of the Queen of Sheba to King Solomon, a "Penny Giant," and penny tumbling at Ball's theatre.

At this fair, for the first time, the swings and roundabouts were excluded, this obviously being part of the policy of gradually killing the fair. The ostensible reason, however, was to preserve a greater open area for the people, and that the shows might be displayed to greater advantage.

The Great Extent of the Fair.

The extent of the fair may be gauged from the following interesting account given by Frost in his record of the old London fairs:—

He says: "As the fair existed at this time (1825) there were small uncovered stalls from the Skinner-street corner of Giltspur-street, along the whole length of the churchyard, and on the opposite side of Giltspur-street; there were like stalls from the Newgate-street corner, along the front of the Compter Prison. At these were sold fruit, oysters, toys, gingerbread, baskets, and other articles of trifling value. They were held by the small fry of the stall-keeping fraternity, who lacked means to pay for space and to furnish out a tempting display. The front of these standings were towards the passengers in the carriage-way.

"Then, with occasional distances of three or four feet for footways from the road to the pavement, began lines of covered stalls, with their open fronts opposite the fronts of the houses, and close to the kerbstone, and their enclosed backs to the road.

"On St. Sepulchre's side they extended to Cock-lane, and thence to the Smithfield corner of Giltspur-street, then, turning the corner into Smithfield, they extended to Hosier-lane, and from thence all along the west side of Smithfield to Cow-lane, where, on that side, they terminated in a line with the opposite corner leading to St. John-street, where the line was resumed, and continued to Smithfield Bars, and there, on the west side, ended.

The Fair Still a Trading Mart.

"Crossing over to the east side, and returning south, these covered stalls commenced opposite to their termination on the west, and ran towards Smithfield, turning into which they extended westerly towards the Pig Market, and thence to Long-lane, from which point they ran along the east side of Smithfield to the great gate of Cloth Fair.

"From Duke-street they contained along the south side to the great front gate of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and from thence to the carriage entrance to the hospital, from whence they extended along Giltspur-street, to the Compter, where they joined the uncovered stalls."

Frost gives interesting particulars, which we briefly summarise, for they are of interest to show us the still considerable amount of genuine trading—that is to say commerce in articles of utility or adornment that still obtained at the great fairs. Besides the legitimate articles that we associate with fairs to-day, and known under the generic name "fairings," such as gingerbread, confectionery, al-fresco refreshments, and trinkets, there were the open stalls of the regular traders, much in character with the open window and kerbstone stalls we now find in the people's markets in the London suburbs.

These traders did big business with all kinds of useful articles. The fair was taken advantage of by the great crowds attending it in order to obtain the yearly store of large and small articles of general consumption and utility.

The Great Quadrangle of Shows.

The shows were built on the sides of a great quadrangle, the centre space being kept entirely free for spectators and persons making their way to the exhibitions. The whole area of Smithfield was occupied by the exhibitions, big and little. Officers were stationed at the great entrances to the quadrangle to prevent carriages and horsemen from entering the fairground. This wise regulation was much appreciated, and the City officers enforced it with rigour.

In collating the extremely meagre historic records of this period of showlife, we have had to spend a very large amount of time, yet we are satisfied that, however dry (and to some) uninteresting this historic research work may appear, we could not deal adequately with our subject and fulfil the purpose we have in hand of a reliable history of showman life (not sketchy romance, but the actual facts that prevailed at the period we are now dealing with) without marshalling these somewhat tedious details for the information and possible use of our readers in the future.

Whilst we have been separating the wheat from the chaff in this excursus into the historic past and describing the stalls lining the streets of the City of London, and brightening with their gaudy display the sombre aspect of the world's greatest mart, we have been strongly reminded of the present day Oxford (St. Giles') Fair. If any student of showlife wishes to realise what the old fairs of England were like when they were pitched in the heart of the town, he has only to go to Oxford Fair.

There he will find the street stalls, bazaars, refreshment tents, and the hundred and one other things that constitute both the ancient and the modern glory of a popular fair.

If the student would form an accurate mind picture of the palmy days of Old Bartholomew Fair he can do it at Oxford.

TOY CITY AND FUN FAIR.

The proprietors of the well-named Toy City and Fun Fair are to be congratulated for their enterprise in converting the major part of Earl's Court Exhibition into a huge winter garden, replete with light, warmth, music, and laughter. It opened on Saturday to a huge audience. The entrance is in the Warwick-road, facing Earl's Court station, which is accessible from all parts by tube, train, or 'bus, and Fun Fair and Toy City will doubtless prove not only a huge success, but a veritable boon to pleasure-seekers who wish for a cheap day's continuous enjoyment for themselves and families.

The Dolls' Pageant in itself should prove a unique source of enjoyment and instruction to children and adults alike. It consists of a large number of tableaux, arranged and lighted like miniature scenes in a theatre, with the actors and actresses represented by dolls, exquisitely modelled and dressed with painstaking accuracy. Part of the profits of the Dolls' Pageant will be presented to the Home of Rest for Girls and Women at Shanklin, Isle of Wight, the Patroness of which is H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, Governor of the Isle of Wight. The tableaux are grouped into historical and fictional sections, including delightful representations of nursery rhymes and fairy tales, pictures, and plays. Every child in London should be taken to see this delightful exhibition during the holiday season, which may be described as a miniature Madame Tussaud's.

Then there is a grand cinematograph theatre, with up-to-date, topical, and humorous pictures constantly on view. Twice daily a pretty fairy play in pictures will be presented.

There are toy and sweet stalls galore, Christmas trees to delight the youngsters, and Father Christmas and Santa Claus selling toys.

Cingalese natives give a glimpse of Ceylon in their performance in the Cingalese Theatre, and a group of fierce Madingo warriors present a picture of their savage life in the hinterland of Sierra Leone.

Ye Olde English Fayre is redolent of good old-fashioned fun and laughter. Collins' flying pigs and cockerels, the Brooklyn Cake-walk, and the other attractions prove a constant round of merriment, and the noise and laughter baffle description.

In the Grand Continental Circus there are three full shows daily, at which some of the most famous riders and circus artists in the world appear, including Mr. H. Yeldon, Mme. Montero, and Miss Ginnett.

The Variety Theatre is to be congratulated upon the excellent vaudeville and variety entertainment which, under the management of Mr. Arthur Coomber, is presented thrice daily, at 2.30, 5.30, and 8 p.m., on the concert platform in the Ducal Hall. Jock McPherson is an able exponent of Scotch humour, and a graceful wire-walking act is performed by Mme. Onra and Gilleno. Little Trilby and La La Williams are quaint and amusing in a Dutch song and dance, and Miss May Hoey is a really graceful exponent of Eastern dancing. Miss Maggie Robertson and a chorus of talented children gain great applause with coon songs, and the excellent playing of Miss Mabel Fellarie, solo violinist, and the sweet voice of Miss M. Lemon, as well as the clever comedy of Bell and Dare, are included in the entertainment.

The latest thing in aviation is provided by Wright's toy aeroplanes, of which demonstrations are given at frequent intervals during the day.

These are only a few of the 1,000 attractions to be seen at Fun Fair and Toy City, which promises to be the talk of London during the winter season.

Mr. J. Calvin Brown—the originator in England of the amusement parks now spreading over the country, by the formation of the White City, Old Trafford, in 1906, and who was managing director of the White City, Ltd.—has purchased the whole concern, and will in future personally operate that amusement resort. He is busy negotiating for novelties for the ensuing season, which is to commence next spring. The patronage of this kind of amusement during the last season has been such that he has every reason to look for a very bright future, especially as he supplies a kind of resort which was for years wanted in the district. Meantime the skating rink and ballroom are open, and doing well.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

LITTLE TOY, GLORIOUS DREAM, is the title of an interesting and seasonable dramatic film. A bevy of children are gathered round the Christmas tree. In the street a poor woman and her little child look sadly at the happy crowd of little mites loaded with their toys, who are going home laughing and chatting together, heedless of the distress of the beggar woman. At last a small boy stops in front of the little girl, and asks his father if he can give her some money. The poor mother thanks them for her child, and the two go to a baker's; but a penny hawker displays to the astonished eyes of the beggar girl such beautiful things that she looks at the tempting toys with sorrow. Her mother, guessing her thoughts, thinks that for another day they will have no bread for dinner, but she will give her little child the coveted toy. The child sleeps happily with her toy in her arms, and by and by in her dream the wall disappears, and in its place the roofs are seen, and Santa Claus comes with a quick step, dropping toys here and there into chimneys. He comes towards the little girl, and heaps toys all about the room. This is happiness indeed! But the dream vanishes and she cries. Her poor mother goes out again, and vainly tries to melt the hearts of the several passers-by. She is trying to dry her little daughter's tears, when the kindly boy of the day before arrives in her garret, and, acting as Santa Claus, he gives the poor woman and her little girl a lot of useful presents and toys.

ROVER'S CHRISTMAS.—With their baskets on their backs and their "picking-up" sticks in their hands, a party of ragged children search in the dust bins for anything worth taking, while their faithful dog, Rover, frolics about in the wind. The dog and children have grown together, sharing the same pleasures, and, their respective feelings being developed to about the same extent, they all rejoice in a sunray or the snow which falls softly. On Christmas Eve the children stop in front of a toy shop, where a gorgeous display of toys keeps them riveted. These toys seem to the poor children like so many unattainable fetishes from another land. A stern shop assistant sends them away. Their mother is waiting for them at home. The soup is ready, but this is a sad Christmas Eve for the poor, who feel more acutely than ever the want of money which prevents them enabling their little ones to hail with joy the otherwise merry Christmastide, the season of gratified wishes for the more fortunate children. As her boy is going to hang his little stocking near the fireplace, the mother takes him in her arms, and explains between her loving kisses that Santa Claus will not visit them this year. The little man, who knows already the meaning of the word "deception," heaves a deep sigh, and goes to bed to hide his sorrow. Rover has been a mute witness of the scene, and in his faithful heart he thinks he would like to give the children joy. He retraces his steps to the toy shop, and helps himself to a beautiful harlequin, a well-dressed doll, and a drum, which he takes home. After this he goes to sleep, pleased with himself for his good day's work. There is great rejoicing the next morning when the two little rag-pickers wake up and find the beautiful toys—a miracle of Santa Claus, certainly.

A GOOD TIP.—The beginning of this film is a sylvan idyll. Peter loves Enid and lets her know it. They are engaged, but the creditors of Enid's father come and trouble their pastoral; the writ of distraint has been served, the sale will take place shortly, and after that they will be utterly destitute. This is only a stroke of the author's imagination, which enables him to show on the screen the Deauville races, with their processions of elegantly-dressed men and women of fashion that move about in this fresh Norman scenery. Peter, having overheard a bit of conversation and made use of the good tip which was not intended for his ear, stakes, wins, and arrives in time to prevent the home of his fiancée from being broken up.

THE MAN OF FREQUENT FALLS.—The man of frequent falls, always running after his balance, goes from fall to stumble, dragging down with him every passer-by, to the merriment of the onlookers. He is carried to the police station, which he enters with a fall, after breaking in a door and upsetting the balance of three policemen.

LIVING DOLLS.—This production treats the spectator to some clever "trick" scenes. We are taken to a bazaar in Fairyland. The shop assistant removes from their boxes lots of dolls, marionettes, harlequins, &c., which become alive and move about and disappear at the assistant's bidding, and perform a wild dance before going back into their respective boxes again.

HIPPOPOTAMUS-HUNTING ON THE BLUE NILE.—In this film the Pathé operators have exhibited real skill in photography, inasmuch as they took, from a short distance, several views of one of the most hideous monsters on earth, the hippopotamus. The beast appears in the water, emerging and plunging by turns, whilst the sportsman push their small boat towards it, and throw the harpoon, which sinks into its thick skin. The animal is doomed. It is taken to shore, there to be cut up, and its fat will be a grand treat for the negroes. Its teeth, however, the ivory of which is of a better quality than that of the elephant, are carefully put away.

THE LADY OR THE TIGER.—The King of Sylvania, having issued an edict against conspirators, Prince Dalny (in love with the King's daughter, Wanda) is invited to visit former classmates of his. Being ignorant of their designs he is made captive, tried, and sentenced to death. Wanda pleads with her father, but the only concession she can obtain is that the Prince shall choose between two cell-doors; behind the one to be placed a beautiful woman, behind the other a man-eating tiger. If he chooses the woman, it will be marriage; if the tiger, death. Wanda is beside herself with grief; but her favourite maid, whose lover is Captain of the Arena Guards, arranges to learn from him in which cell the tiger is placed, so that Wanda may signal from the royal box to the Prince. The momentous day arrives, and the unusual spectacle draws a vast crowd to the arena. The Prince is led forth, when Wanda realises that, if she saves him from the tiger, she will lose him through a forced marriage. She suddenly leaps into the arena to open the door of the tiger's cell and die with her lover, the Prince, but a signal from the King causes the guards to stop this rash impulse. The King then descends into the arena, causes the doors to be flung open, when it is seen the tiger is in a cage, the other cell being empty!

THE KING'S PARDON.—This subject introduces a romantic picture of the Cavalier period in England, telling of the devotion of two brothers who are left alone early in life, and are separated. One goes to sea; the other enters the service of a London merchant, and rises to a position of trust, when a robbery takes place, and, being first on the scene, he is falsely accused of murder. He is tried and condemned to death; but, meanwhile, the real culprit meets with disaster, comes to grief, and being brought to the hospital in a dying condition, a confession is obtained from him. It now becomes a question of reaching the king's palace in time. A messenger hastens forward, but on his way back is thrown from his horse, and lies unconscious in the road. The elder brother has, in the meantime, arrived home, and joyfully hurrying to find his boyhood's playmates, is met by the sad intelligence of his brother's trouble. Making his way to London he finds the King's messenger unconscious. Playing the part of the good Samaritan, he is rewarded by being entrusted with the King's pardon. He reaches his brother's side at the critical moment, and, producing the papers, a doubly joyful recognition takes place.

SAVED BY SANTA CLAUS.—This film is most appropriate to the Christmas season. It shows a couple of children being put to bed on Christmas Eve by their parents, who come in later to place dolls and other gifts in the fireplace. The dolls do all sorts of wonderful things, including dances and acrobatic feats. The children wake early, and, seeing the presents, jump out of bed. One seizes the lamp, and while handing a toy to the other child sets the curtains of the bed on fire. Father Christmas appears, and with the dolls, now grown to full size, sets to work to quench the flames. Then the dolls reassume their former size, and the film concludes with the picture of the parents affectionately embracing their youngsters.

THE LITTLE CHIMNEY-SWEEPS' CHRISTMAS.—Here we have another appropriately seasonable production. Two little sweeps are inspecting with covetous eyes the presents on a Christmas tree at a house where they have just finished cleaning the chimneys. They leave the house and go to their own humble home. They notice from a calendar that it is Christmas Eve, but there are no presents to cheer their life. They fall asleep, and meanwhile the dog climbs up the chimney and along the roof back to the house with the Christmas tree. He brings back some of the toys, and takes another journey. The children wake to find that Santa Claus has not forgotten them, and the father and mother are astonished, and wonder how the things arrived.

POOR GIRL'S CHRISTMAS is yet another reminder of the festive season. A poor girl is playing a harp in the gutter outside a shop displaying Christmas novelties. She vainly pleads for alms, but is passed by. The scene changes to the exterior of a church on Christmas morning. As the worshippers come out their hearts are touched by the poor harpist, and they give freely. The last to leave is a rich woman, who passess by and is driven away. She, however, drops a valuable necklace, which the poor girl picks up. After struggling against temptation, she decides to change it for money to give a Christmas dinner to her old mother, who is dying. She asks a friendly policeman the way to dispose of it, and he directs her. Meanwhile a footman is sent to seek the missing necklace, and is told about the girl. He has her arrested, and when taken before the Chief of Police her old friend arrives and tells his story. The rich woman's heart is touched, and she goes home with the girl, to find the mother dead. Finally we see the girl in luxury acting as companion to the rich woman.

FIRE PREVENTIVE AND EXTINGUISHING APPARATUS.—The committee of judges, presided over by Mr. Walter Reynolds, L.C.C., who last week at the Hippodrome examined certain inventions calculated to prevent or extinguish cinematograph fires, have drawn up the following recommendations, which are to be submitted to the London County Council:—

1. That all kinematograph projectors must be fitted with two metal film boxes of substantial construction, to or from which the film shall travel. Such boxes must be made to close in a manner which will prevent the ingress of fire, and fitted with a film-slot capable of preventing the passing of flame to the interior of the film box. All films when not on the machine, and whilst still in the operating box, shall be stored in such closed metal boxes.

2. That the film-gate shall be of sufficiently massive construction and radiating surface and the passage for the film sufficiently narrow to prevent flame travelling either upwards or downwards from the light opening. The committee were of opinion that if these precautions were adopted in addition to those at present in force the safety of the public would be assured as far as humanly possible. Some modification of the rules would be possible if the use of non-inflammable film were universal.

IF these recommendations be accepted by London's central governing body, they will be embodied in the L.C.C. theatre and music hall regulations already in force. We understand that the metal film boxes referred to in the first recommendation are free of patent rights, and the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association intends to suggest to the trade that a standard and interchangeable type of box shall be employed.

AFTER an absence of many years, the Old Gaol Ground at Salisbury has once more found travelling showmen on it. The first attraction located is Haines's steam and electric galloping-horses and combination of amusements, including swings, shooting galleries, shies, and various throwing games, and stalls, &c. Good business is being done, as the ground is in a most central and populated part of the city, and we shall expect to find the present occupiers are making a long stay.

THE new Central Halls at Leigh, Hindley, Wigan, Nelson, &c., are still doing big business by The World in Motion Co., under the directorship of that well-known showman, Thomas Whiteley.

WE notice that the well-known advance manager, Fred Sharpe, is managing the Central Hall, Nelson, for The World in Motion Co.

Tuby's Coliseum at Goole.

OUR correspondent writes:—Tuby and Son's No. 2 aggregation of amusements will finish a successful month of business at Goole next Tuesday, the show especially having had a good time, showing to crowded audiences nightly.

THE KING'S PARDON.

An early English romance of two brothers, whose devotion was proven by the hand of Destiny, although since boyhood the paths of their lives were widely separated. From across seas the elder brother arrives in the nick of time and saves his brother (falsely accused of murder) from execution by presenting a pardon from the King. On the day set for execution the real culprit has confessed his guilt.

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

APPLICATIONS.

25,818.—Tom Heffernan and George Burges Digby Head, of London. Improvements in and relating to gymnastic apparatus, swings, and the like.

25,862.—Edward Louis Anstie, of London. Improvements in toys for war or other games.

25,867.—Douglas Spencer Cox, of London. New amusement device.

25,872.—George William Hanlon and Sydney Bacon, of London. Improved stage entertainment.

25,929.—Hector Macfarlane, of London. New or improved device for the purposes of amusement and entertainment.

25,951.—Westcote, Raymond Lyttleton, of Liverpool. Improved apparatus for turning the leaves of music and the like.

25,962.—Max Conradt, of London. Improvements in game apparatus.

25,966.—Charles Blish Winder of London. Improvements in and relating to shooting-gallery targets.

25,983.—Alfred George Gay, of Bristol. Table disc quoits.

26,048.—Joseph Eisenmann, of London. Improvements in puppets or dolls.

26,127.—Edward Percy Alabaster, of London. Improvements in and relating to apparatus for displaying colour effects, signs, and the like.

26,141.—Robert Williard Pair, of London. Improvements in tracker-boards for musical instruments.

26,147.—John Thomas Lawrence, of London. Improvements connected with dolls, puppets, toy figures, animals, fishes, and the like.

26,388.—Jules Moret, of London. Improvements in devices for playing the game of "catch-ring."

COMPLETE SPECIFICATIONS ACCEPTED.

24,225.—De Mare. Kinematograph metal ribbons or films.

4,506.—Northcott and Westlake. Game of indoor football.

4,913.—Jeffrey. Targets for miniature rifle ranges.

11,420.—Brown and Brown. Method of and means for producing apparently animated pictures.

18,341.—Clease. Apparatus for promoting muscular or physical development.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

15,865.—Amusements. Hartley, C. J., of Stone, Staffordshire, and Bishop, R.H., of London.

Relates to apparatus in which cam-shaped wheels, mounted on horizontal axis, are provided with circumferential tracks for cars. Rotation of the wheels imparts to the cars a motion which, to the occupants, is similar to the motion of cars running on an ordinary switchback railway. The rim of the wheel is supported on radial spokes, which are braced together by an hexagonal framework. The wheels are driven from an engine through an intermediate train of gearing, which permits of two speeds of the wheels for a constant speed of the engine. The cars are provided with rollers, which run under guard-rails. Instead of wheels the cars may have runners or sliders, engaging in channels formed by overhanging angle-irons. The cars may be also formed to represent ships, the track wheels in this case being submerged in water. In the arrangement shown in Fig. 10 the track consists of two portions carried by separate wheels. To produce the illusion of fast travelling, sections of any desired scenery carried by an endless band, as shown in Fig. 16, driven from the track wheels, are run at a rapid speed past the car

15,977.—Periscopes; camera obscuras. Denston, H. F., of London.

The apparatus described in a prior specification is modified by substituting a reflector of spherical, parabolic, or other curvature, other than a cone, for the prism. Fig. 1 shows a parabolic mirror, the image produced by which is observed by a telescope (e), (f) the image may, however, be projected upon a screen or photographic plate. The appliance is mounted on a ball joint.

16,340.—Railways for recreation. MacCulloch, A. G., of London.

Model horses or the like, of life-size, are mounted on carriages which run on inclined tracks, and means are provided to retard all the horses but one, selected by chance, which therefore wins. Horses (b), Fig. 3, are sprung on carriages (b), mounted on spindles (*b*1), which carry small-grooved wheels (*b*2), Fig. 6, to run on rails (*a*5), and a heavy fly-wheel (*b*3), Fig. 3. The frame (b) has leading and trailing spindles (*b*4), one or other of which runs on the rails (*a*5), the wheels (*b*5) running between. The tracks slope considerably at the beginning, and continue to slope moderately to the finish. As the horses run down the slope, the fly-wheels revolve rapidly, but progress is slow owing to the small size of the wheels (*b*2). The horses start together and would finish together, but all except one are retarded by coming into contact with yielding obstructions mounted on a spindle (d) provided with a fly-wheel (*d*1), which can be rotated by a motor (e). In addition to the above obstructions, the horses may be impeded by arms (*b*9) coming into frictional contact with the wheels (*b*3), owing to imperfect balancing on the part of the riders. The obstructions may consist of bristles (*d*4), Fig. 8, or the like, mounted on wheels (*d*2) placed in the path of the fly-wheels (*b*3). Each wheel (*d*2) has a flat (*d*3) on it, and the wheels are so mounted on the spindle (d), Fig. 3, that the flats are symmetrical. The fly-wheel (*d*1) is set rotating rapidly, and is then stopped by a brake (f), operated by a lever (*c*2), which at the same instant releases detents (c) from the carriages (b). Several modifications of the obstructing-device are described. In one form the bristles are placed on hinged bars (*d*6), Fig. 9, which are kept in position by the wheel (*d*2). In another form the bristles are replaced by a sliding obstruction, counter-balanced by a weight or by a spring, contact being made by a bar on the frame (b). In other modifications the faceted wheels (*d*1), Fig. 3, are replaced by star-wheels (*d*2), Fig. 23, which control counterweighted obstructions (*d*6) pivoted at (*d*5). A detent (*d*1) x x locks the fly-wheel as it stops. In other modifications, spring obstructions are drawn down by the star-wheel by means of bell-crank levers. As soon as a horse completes the course, a lever (M1), Fig. 30, is operated by the wheel (*b*3), to display a hidden disc (m). In other modifications, a detent is tripped, or an electric circuit is closed to accomplish the same object. The horses are returned to the starting-place by a chain (g), Fig. 3, or the like provided with hooks (*g*4), to engage a chain (*g*5) on the carriage (b). In a modification, shown in Fig. 16, a turntable (j) and separate return tracks (*a*5*) are provided. In this case, a second turntable (k) is necessary, capable of lifting the horses back to the starting level from the lower level (*a*5*). The lines (*a*5) may run into one another after leaving the turntable, to form one line and diverge again at (k). In order to ensure a quick return, the carriages (b) run on wheels (*b*13), Fig. 19, instead of on the small ones (*b*2) as usual. The track may be made circular, elliptical, or the like, and may have a ringed portion (*a*4*), Fig. 23, which can be raised by a hydraulic or other ram (l), as shown, suitable detents (c, *a*8) being provided to retain the carriages thereon.

CINEMATOGRAPHY IN COLOURS.

A remarkable advance in the fascinating study of colour photography was demonstrated by Mr. G. Albert Smith before the Royal Society of Arts, recently, when he showed the results of his researches and experiments on the production of animated photographs in natural colours. The use of three-colour screens, or light filters, proved unworkable, but after long experiment Mr. Smith found that carefully adjusted screens of dark red and green rotating before a film sensitised to all colour waves, in a bioscope camera, gave a suitable negative. From the negative a positive transparency was made, and this was passed in the path of rays of light, coloured by a similar two-colour rotating disc. The result was to throw on the screen pictures in all the hues and tints of nature. The reds and browns were wonderfully faithful, the sheen on the coats of well-groomed chestnut horses, the play of the sunlight on the varnished sides of a yacht, and the uniforms of soldiers being reproduced with charming effect. Some of the blues and greens were, perhaps, not quite true, but the pictures shown were the first results, and further experiment will doubtless soon remove even this slight defect.

A NEW CELLULOID SUBSTITUTE.

A clever French engineer and inventor sends us interesting particulars of a celluloid substitute, which, if he is able to substantiate his claims under practical tests, seems likely to prove a notable addition to the materials available for various manufacturing purposes, and especially for the making of kinematograph films. So far as we can judge from our own necessarily elementary experiments with small samples, the substance seems to merit fuller examination and serious attention. We give a free translation of our correspondent's remarks:—"I send you annexed a descriptive account of my 'Cellolite.' You are the first to whom I have given these particulars, and I do so in order that you may make use of it for the information of your readers. This material, which I am shortly going to manufacture in England, is a product which advantageously replaces celluloid in all its uses, as you can satisfy yourself from the samples which I am sending you, and I am in negotiation with one of the largest houses in England to form a syndicate to exploit it. I will keep you informed of what is done. It was only after much work and laborious experiments that I succeeded in producing this industrial substitute for celluloid, and I desire to put you in a position to give your readers the first news of this discovery. I propose to call this substitute 'Cellolite.' It is not only non-flammable, but also transparent, and I consider that the problem of making non-flammable films for kinematographs is solved. The substances which replace the constituents of genuine celluloid have the same properties, whilst not having similar flammability. The requirements of the operator of the kinematograph apparatus, as to strength and toughness, have been equally provided for. 'Cellolite' does not ordinarily burn at all, but if lighted persistently a small flame results, which smoulders without smoke, and goes out of itself after a few seconds, whereas ordinary celluloid burns with a fierce hissing and with the greatest rapidity and much smoke. 'Cellolite' can be made in hard slabs as well as very pliable, like indiarubber. It does not break, is very transparent, so much so that it might be used instead of glass, and one of its principal qualities is that it is waterproof. There is then, indeed, a great future to predict for this subsance, as 'Cellolite' could be advantageously used instead of celluloid in all its uses and applications. Moreover, the great point is that the cost of manufacture is small—indeed, less than one half that of ordinary celluloid." The inventor has also promised us very shortly some electrical wires covered with this substance, which admirably replaces the silk, up till now used as an insulator. We shall be glad to hear more of the development of this promising invention.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR FAIR AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

There is to be abundance of fun for everybody this Christmastide in the South Nave at the Crystal Palace. By arrangement with the management, Mr. Charles Hyatt, the up-to-date amusement caterer, is busy preparing a Yuletide Fair on a big scale, and hopes to have everything ready for the fun to commence on Saturday next. There will be amusements for old and young alike, and plenty of variety. Prominent features of Mr. Hyatt's fair will be the "home-training" bicycles—a capital novelty—by means of which riders can enjoy a spin a-wheel and keep themselves in "condition." Then there will be park swings in plenty. These look so nice and easy-going that we don't anticipate there will be many fair damsels this Yuletide shouting, like Maria of the old song, "O George, tell 'em to stop." They will be more likely to want a second turn. And in the matter of swings, the children are being especially catered for, as Mr. Hyatt is going to have special juvenile swings, absolutely safe.

One of the best "catches" at the White City—the Haunted Castle—will be brought fresh from its Franco-British success to Mr. Hyatt's Fair, and Miss Nellie Hyatt's Juvenile Motor Track will be another source of pleasure to the youngsters. Children of larger growth—and who is there won't enjoy the fun?—can have a ride on a galloping horse or running cockerel, for the old favourite "merry-go-round" will again be available. Many will doubtless also enjoy finding the "ins" and "outs" of the American Muddle-Maze, and then there is to be an amusement, with just a spice of daring in it, in the shape of an aerial flight. Mr. Hyatt has spared no expense in having everything newly decorated, and all his attendants will appear in brand new Midshipmen's costumes, the order for which has been carried out by Messrs. Bulter and Sons, of Upper Norwood.

In addition to the Fair, which will occupy nearly all the South Nave, there will be abundant fun procurable in the Novelty Court, which the popular caterer has so lavishly decorated with work by the scenic artist, Mr. Alfred Smith. The miniature Bisley will be open, and there will be ring games, hand billiards, French bagatelle, darts, parlour quoits, and the popular racing motor-cars. And of course everybody will be asking everybody else to "Houp-la."

In the Centre Transept, facing the Royal Boxes, Mr. George O. Starr is arranging for an Old English circus. This will be curtained in and well warmed by a monster heating-pipe, and there will be accommodation for about 2,000 people. Everything that can possibly be done for the comfort and convenience of visitors to the Palace is being done, and the grown-up people as well as the children are promised a really good show. A Children's Carnival is also being arranged. The monster Christmas Tree will, of course, be again in evidence. This is a present from Sir Jeremiah Colman, and reaches a height of 89ft. It holds about 3,000 toys, and is a source of great delight to the thousands of children who visit the Palace.

"THE RINKERIES" IN ALDWYCH.

The roller-skating rink which occupies the old temporary offices of the Morning Post in Aldwych, and which was opened on the 11th inst., is bound to become a very popular resort during the winter months. It is most conveniently situated, and is being conducted under the direct personal supervision of a gentleman who has been actively associated with many of the most successful of modern rinking palaces, and he is aided by a large staff of selected experts in skating. The management has spared no expense in the matter of artistic furnishing, the decorative features being admirably designed with a view to the character of the pastime. There are spacious promenades from which a perfect view of the entire skating surface may be obtained, and admirably-appointed lounge rooms for both ladies and gentlemen have been provided. The skating surface represents a glistening sheet of polished hardwood, specially imported from the United States, over an acre in extent, and is one of the finest skating surfaces ever laid. Each length of this rock maple is tongued and grooved and laid with such precision and accuracy that the joints are almost invisible, as they are certainly imperceptible to the most sensitive skater. The proprietors of the new rink have entered into important contracts for the supply of the world-famed Barney-Berry skate, one of the finest examples of skilled mechanical ingenuity ever presented in this particular direction. They are lighter than any other skate manufactured. Their construction has been carefully and thoughtfully considered in every mechanical detail. Each afternoon and evening the assemblies of skaters will be afforded the pleasure of listening to the strains of a first-class military band, which has been specially engaged with a view to presenting the highest class of bright and lively music. In every department the most serious thought has been given to securing for "The Rinkeries" a position of pre-eminence as a select and exemplary place of amusement, originated and equipped in a manner which points to its being a popular place of amusement and recreation.

Managers in search of novelties for the holidays, by referring to our advertisement columns, may see that Chevalier T. H. Crowther, world-renowned skater, &c., &c., who gives an entire variety show on the wheels, is at liberty, and, with the addition of a couple of hundred pairs of extension roller skates, can guarantee to give amusement to an audience of either sex or any age, either at home or abroad. The Brighton Press state that other skaters may crow their loudest, but Crowther is king of them all.

A BOOK ON MAGIC.

We have received for review from A. W. Gamage, Ltd., Mr. Will Goldston's "Magician's Annual," a marvellous collection of clever articles on conjuring and illusions. We take from it a most interesting exposé of the alleged miracles performed by the Indian conjurers. Alvaro, the author, quotes from an interview with Mr. Charles Bertram which appeared in the Strand Magazine, when Mr. Bertham said:—"It must be borne in mind that Indian conjurers travel in little groups of four or five, and each, as a rule, does his own trick. This allows one man to prepare his apparatus without observation while another is going through his performance, so that seemingly these people do their tricks without any previous preparation. Again, they carry about with them a lot of bags, bits of old cloth, and blankets, which, although the uninitiated public does not know it, are of the greatest service to them in getting rid of things which have served their purpose."

"In the mango-tree trick the performer first picks a piece of a mango tree about six inches high, with a tuft of three or four little leaves. This is pushed up inside the little rag doll, which is hollow in the middle, and which is always used by the Indian conjurer instead of the magic wand of the European. Then he gets a large piece of the tree, about eighteen inches high, to which is attached by artificial means a little green mango, or, if out of the mango season, a green plum, which serves the purpose equally well. This branch he wraps tightly in a large piece of wet cloth, to be used at the proper time. He also provides himself with two mango seeds, one of which is perfectly normal, and the other as like it as possible in size. This latter he slits in the centre, and puts in a little wedge of wood to hold it open, while at the other side he affixes three or four little bits of string, and he bares down the end of both the branches so that they will fit into the slit in the prepared seed.

"Having made all his arrangements, the conjurer advances with four little bamboo sticks, tied round the top with a piece of string, after having handed them round for inspection. Round these he puts a piece of thin material, which hangs over the top and covers the front and two sides loosely, but not the back, thus forming a sort of tent which is open behind. This tent is about three feet high, and the thinness of the cloth allows the interior to be dimly seen through.

"The juggler next gets a tin pot like an ordinary corned beef can. This is filled with earth and is handed round for inspection. On the earth he pours water, so as to make it wet—in fact, a thick mud. As soon as the audience is satisfied that the pot contains nothing but this mud, he hands round the first seed for examination, and allows someone to put it into the wet earth. He then comes to the front of the tent, lifts up the cloth, puts the pot into the tent, and lets the cloth drop over it. Suddenly he appears to notice that the audience can see through the cloth, so he takes up a large piece of thick coloured cloth, in a fold of which is the large piece of the mango branch, and covers the thin cloth with it. Then he lifts both cloths together, and you see the pot still there and unchanged. He now procures a 'chatty,' or pot of water, and sprinkles it with his hand into the tent to water the seed, and so hasten its growth.

"Here ends the first part of the trick, for the seed is supposed to take some time to germinate and grow. To pass the time the conjurer comes in front and begins doing some other tricks, for example, the cups and balls, or the diving duck, or the transformation of three seeds into a scorpion or small snake—all very elementary tricks indeed, which I will tell you about later. Having done this trick, the conjurer goes behind the tent, taking his mystic rag doll, in which there is more than meets the eye, with him. Under cover of the tent, squatting on his haunches, he pulls out of the doll the first little sprig of mango with the three or four leaves on it, and inserts the prepared end of it into the slit in the mango seed. He then takes out the original seed from the pot, stuffing in the other one into its place. He next lifts up the curtain from the front, waters the pot within, and takes it out to show to the audience, which is astonished to see the original seed has grown up in so short a time. He even takes the old plant out of the pot and shows the bits of string, now covered with mud, which to the casual observer look like tendrils, or little roots growing from the seed. He now replants the seed, putting the pot back by way of the front of the tent, which he lifts up for the purpose, and takes the chatty of water from the front to the back of the tent, and pretends to water the plant from there. This opportunity he uses for taking out the big piece of plant from the cloth; after removing the small piece of mango, he sticks the big bit into the aperture in the seed, for which purpose you will remember I told you he had previously cut it to the right size. This branch he now puts into the pot, and the little piece which he has just shown he wraps up in the corner of the cloth from which the larger piece was taken.

"Although the tree could now be shown full grown to the audience, he does not discover it yet, but goes on with another small trick which may occupy as much as ten minutes. At the end of that time he takes the chatty for the third time, as if to water the plant, again lifts up the front of the tent, this time to find, to his own apparent amazement, that the plant has grown, and on it there is actually fruit.

"Here the second part of the trick may be said to be finished. The tree is now as big as it will grow, and the Indian takes it and shows it to the audience. Then he takes it round to the back of the tent, and puts it in on that side. Once more he pretends to water it, as if he thought it would grow more; but while he is doing this he really pulls up the plant, wraps it in the wet cloth again, and throws a piece of carpet or a blanket carelessly over it, and at a convenient moment an accomplice, or member of the four or five men working together, picks it up and gets it away while the attention of the audience is being held by some other trick. And that is the whole of the famous mango trick."

"The Corkscrew," a coster episode, originally produced at the Paragon a few months ago, is this week being played at the Hammersmith Palace, where it is meeting with a large measure of success. It is a pathetic little sketch, written in a most convincing manner. Maggy Purvis, a cripple nicknamed "Corkscrew," has been befriended and afterwards made a chum of by Bill Johnson, who in telling her of his love for "someone" leads her to believe that he intends to make her his wife. When Mary Jones is introduced to her she understands that such great happiness is not for her, and as they depart she collapses sobbing—alone again in life.

It is difficult to speak too highly of the performances of both Mr. Nevill Graham as Bill Johnson and Miss Cecile Anson as Maggy Purvis. Both draw excellent pictures of poor costers' lives, and steer clear of the easy mistake of over-acting the characters. Miss Severn is good as Mary Jones.

Miss Sylvia Cavalho continues to add to her reputation by her performance of Priscilla in The Fortune of War, which character is eminently suited to her personality. Her successes on the legitimate stage in such varied and opposite parts as Zaza, Kitty (in The Marriage of Kitty), and Mercia, also Yo-San in The Darling of the Gods certainly stamp her as an actress of exceptional versatility.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The committee of the National Association of Theatrical Employees have prepared a circular for distribution relating to the new sick, funeral, and share-out fund, and they will be glad to send copies to anyone who will undertake to distribute them. All those connected with the various stage departments, the box-office, advertising departments, and attendants generally are eligible to join in accordance with the conditions agreed to. Those who desire to join should make application as soon as possible, and not later in any case than Jan. 1. The secretary pro tem., Mr. Wm. Johnson, of 29, Wellington-street, Strand, will supply full particulars.

The accounts of the sixth annual concert in aid of the Employees' Benevolent Fund, given in His Majesty's Theatre on Sunday, Nov. 29, have been audited and presented to the committee, who have adopted the report and statement as follows:—

The total amount raised this year for these benevolent funds exceeds £200, that is, from two concerts and the Theatrical Sports. The Open Benevolent Fund has received over £65 of this amount.

A general meeting of the members of the Carpenters' Branch will be held on Sunday evening in the Salisbury Hotel, St. Martin's-lane, at 8.30. In view of the importance of the business on the agenda, it is desired that all members will attend.

The Heads of Departments Association has lost one of its oldest members in the person of Mr. J. H. Ashburner, who was for many years master carpenter at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross. Mr. Ashburner died after a short illness, and was buried last Saturday, his widow receiving £20 from the funds of the Association. At its last meeting the committee passed a vote of condolence to Mrs. Ashburner. It was decided that the annual general meeting of the members be held on Jan. 28, and that nominations for the officers and committee be invited. Members desiring to submit a resolution to the meeting to give notice of same by Jan. 11 so that all members may be notified fourteen days prior to the meeting. The question of the annual dinner was left over in view of a proposal to arrange a river excursion in the summer as a more suitable occasion for the social intercourse of members and their wives. Several applications for membership were granted.

Mr. William Barbour, electrician at the St. James's Theatre, who accompanied, with other members of the staff (twenty in all), the St. James's company to Sandringham, met a former colleague in the person of Mr. McLaren, the chief electrical engineer at Sandringham. Mr. McLaren was at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, many years ago when Mr. Barbour was employed at that House. The St. James's staff appear to have had a very pleasant time at Sandringham.

A well-attended meeting of cinematograph operators was held on Tuesday at the offices of the Association. A number of applications for membership were granted. Mr. S. J. Henry gave a most lucid report of the demonstration of fire-extinguishing appliances at the Hippodrome, for which he received a hearty vote of thanks from the members present. It was decided to call the annual general meeting for Tuesday, Jan. 5, 1909, and nominations for the officers and committee for the ensuing year were received, and will be notified to the members with a ballot paper. Members are requested to keep the secretary informed of their private addresses.

The remains of the late Mr. John H. Ashburner, for nine years master carpenter at the Broadway Theatre, Deptford, and seven years at the Victoria Opera House, Burnley, who was also at Carlisle with Mr. Milton Bode, were interred in the family grave at Brockley Cemetery on Saturday, the 12th. The illness was very short. The funeral was attended by many relatives and friends, and flowers were sent by the widow, Mrs. Ashburner; the brother and sister of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. Mat Ashburner; Mr. and Mrs. Yates, and the Broadway Theatre. The Broadway Theatre staff was represented by Mr. Harry Paton.

W. J. Churchill, who appears at the Hackney Empire next week, tells a funny story of his early experiences. He and the late Dan Leno were boys together at Leeds, and the two, in company with another lad, named Willie Twist—no relation to Oliver—used to run about, as Mr. Churchill humorously puts it, "with a pair of no shoes on," to save leather. Their families visited Featherstone, near Pontefract, to present the drama before the natives, and they were accommodated on a stage with a few tallow candles stuck about for footlights. These went out continually, and the show would stop while one of the company felt for matches and lit them. "One dark night we lads were leading the way with a lantern, and saw some blackberries on a hedge, for which we dived at once. The united families trooped after us, following the light, as usual, and some fell into the ditch.

"One day Leno, Twist and I were in Roundhay Park, Leeds, playing at acting a drama in the woods. I was the hero, Twist was the girl, and Leno the villain. My part consisted of climbing out into the branch of a tree, and appearing in time to save the girl, Susan Annie Jiggapigs, from being murdered by the villain. I remember Leno saying, 'I will see your haughty spirit dragged into the dust,' and just as he lifted the knife, the keeper appeared with a nice ash plant which he laid with beautiful judgment right across the place where the patches were on our trousers."

"Bob" Fitzsimmons (together with his beautiful wife) will make his bow for the first time as an actor to a London audience on Monday at the Oxford. The pair will appear in a dramatic playlet, entitled A Man's a Man for a' That, written by John J. Cowan, Mrs. Fitzsimmons playing the part of Miss Vivian Wainwright. The action takes place in Jack Wainwright's apartments, and "Bob" will give an exhibition of ball-punching and general athletic exercises.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

Mr. E. Dagnall, supported by Miss Cynthia Brooke and Mr. Charles Goodhart, is at the bottom of the bill this week in a sketch by Luke Jellings and George Bellamy, entitled

"SLIPPERY JIM."

Slippery Jim .....MR. E. DAGNALL
Mrs. Templeton .....MISS CYNTHIA BROOKE
Mr. Templeton .....MR. CHARLES GOODHART

The plot of the trifle is briefly as follows:—On the curtain rising a man is discovered forcing a window. He gains access to the apartment, and then we find that this is Slippery Jim, who is there for the purpose of removing any portable articles of value, having the advantage of a detailed plan. He is busy at work when the telephone rings, and as the noise alarms him, he answers it in a feminine voice and receives a message from a man at the Carlton Hotel, who wants to let the lady of the house know that he has returned from Klondyke, having "struck it lucky," and is desperately anxious to see her. Slippery Jim writes the message down, and leaves it beside the telephone. At the same moment the sound of a carriage is heard, and the burglar, seeing no way out of it, dashes into a cupboard. Mr. and Mrs. Templeton, the owners of the flat, enter, and it is very soon evident that he is a brutal, overbearing man, and a scene quickly develops; in the midst of it the wife picks up the telephone message and starts to read it, when the husband rushes forward, tears it out of her hand and throws it in the fire. Then we learn that it was from the man who had been Templeton's partner in Alaska, but who, according to him had died at the goldfields. Matters in the household are getting intense, when there is a noise in the cupboard. Templeton throws the door open, and the burglar comes out with his revolver ready, and recognises Mr. Templeton as Arkwright, the man who had married his sister, and broken her heart, having deserted her for the past eight years. He tells Mrs. Templeton her marriage is no marriage, and on the husband threatening to go for the police, Mrs. Templeton says the moment he says a word about Slippery Jim she will have him arrested for bigamy, and then orders him out of the house. The burglar meanwhile commences to disgorge his appropriated property and is appeased with some notes, and he leaves after advising the wife to ring up the Carlton Hotel.

The sketch suffers a little towards the end from a tendency to hang fire, but with a little strengthening there it should prove admirably suited for its purpose. It had the advantage of capital acting, Mr. Dagnall himself being particularly good in his study of the title-rôle. Miss Cynthia Brooke admirably realised the unhappy wife, her performance being characterised by great charm and grace. Mr. Goodhart as Templeton played the blustering bully to the life, and was of great assistance. The playlet was greeted with enthusiasm.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

"Our Marie" heads the bill this week, and as a result the building is filled to overflowing at every performance, for Miss Marie Lloyd's popularity seems to increase and not wane with time. She gave four songs in her own inimitable way, and looked very bewitching in her four handsome dresses of the Directoire period. Her songs were "Don't grumble at woman," "Customs of the country," "I can't make my eyes be good," and "The Directoire girl." Mr. J. P. Ling, a humorous mimic with a good voice, gives imitations of various amateur artists at a charity concert, and is most amusing; the Three Welsh Girls, looking very attractive in national costume, sing "In Old Madrid" very sweetly, and afterwards give an excellent rendering of "I'll tie the leaves so they won't come down," illustrated with some very pretty pictures.

Popular Miss Alexandra Dagmar has a warm reception, and sings with her accustomed skill and spirit. Her patter is clever and amusing, and her rendering of "A marriage in Mayfair" proves her to be an excellent actress as well as a vocalist; Mr. Walter Bellonini contributes a very enjoyable turn with his smart juggling, plate manipulation, &c., and is very ably assisted by his page, Wal. Les Uniques, gymnastic pot-pourri on perpendicular ladders, is a clever and much-appreciated turn. Miss Arabella Allen is a clever impersonater, her Pete being an excellent effort; but her Shylock is indistinct and unsuited to her. Mr. Phil Parsons won much laughter and applause for his pleasant singing of well-written songs, especially "Choose her in the morning."

Percy Ford and G. W. Webb's company appears with great success in an incident of the American War between North and South, entitled The Spy. This is a well-written, well-acted sketch. Miss Millie Sylvestre gives a sympathetic rendering of the loving and grief-stricken mother, Mme. Halcon; Mr. Ernest Ball in the title-rôle—William Hinton—has a character which suits him admirably, and his finished acting carried the sketch through to a brilliant close; Mr. J. Negus gives a good performance of the Serjeant. There are some interesting pictures on the Bioscope.

EALING HIPPODROME.

A winsome personality, with more than a suspicion of pathos, is found in Miss Henriquette Maude, the "Little New Zealand Girl," who, after traversing alone half the world's circuit, is recounting to English audiences the varying experiences of her journey by field and flood. Miss Maude is accompanied in her travels by a charming series of "screen pictures," and we see her first in her island home, with her Maori friends, then the Australian continent is touched, and an excellent view of Sydney is presented. Across the Pacific is but a jump, and San Francisco is seen, both before and after the great earthquake. The transit is continued through the States to "skyscraping" New York, of which a magnificent picture is shown. The "New Zealand Girl" has an entrancing tale to tell, and the house followed with rapt attention the striking episodes of her voyage on foot—for she had no money to ride—through the wilds of Texas. Afterwards, in the picturesque dress of a Texan rancher, Miss Maude recites Mr. Frank Desprez's dramatic poem, "Lasca," and wins a decided success. The Player Company produce, in two tableaux, the celebrated comedy of David Garrick. Mr. A. Player, in the name-rôle, gives an excellent interpretation of the famous actor's part, both as the gentleman and as the intoxicated guest. Mr. George Greig is the narrow-minded Alderman Ingot to the life, while a dainty and lovable Violet is found in Miss Lois Christine. The sketch is well to the liking of an Ealing audience, and is received with marked approval.

With such a generous commencement, Mr. J. A. Molloy does not fail in other parts of his programme. The Great Rex Fox is a "King Reynard" indeed; he dubs himself "ventriloquist"; he is that, but he is a great deal more, for on the wire he does wonders of equilibrism in the way of poising lamps upon his toes, playing the mandoline, and generally behaving as if stilt-walking on a wire was the simple affair of everyday life. Mr. Harry Brown, coloured comedian, is still asking "Is everyone happy?" and his query seems as popular as ever; Mr. Will Musgrave repeats his successes, "It's a good job I had mother with me" and "When the Sergeant came along." The Zenary Bros. give a fine display of hand and wrist acrobatics and balancing; in their quiet, undemonstrative style these expert brothers get through some really fine work, and well earned the reception accorded to them.

Cadwell and Verne are responsible for an amusing episode of mistakes and transformations, and are also admirable merriment-makers. Miss Grace Merton, who gives with great charm "Killarney" and "Scenes that are brightest," has a sympathetic voice, and her rendition of these ever-popular numbers gave great satisfaction. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, as usual, presents some capital films, that of the Pedicure being particularly funny. Mr. A. Malcolm Park's band give the "Austria March," in excellent style.

CROUCH END HIPPODROME.

The management here, with their untiring enterprise, manage to keep their programmes well up to the high standard of excellence which it has become the custom to expect from them, and the bill presented this week is a very fair sample of what they achieve. The orchestra, a strong item here, under the direction of Mr. Archie Howells, "opens the ball" with Auber's "Crown Diamonds," an overture that is very much appreciated; next follows Jessie Ward, a pleasing juvenile ballad singer, who renders in capital style "The song that reached my heart" and "Take me with you in your dreams"; the Almas, in their act as equilibrists and tumblers, in which the male member performs some wonderful balancing on a pyramid of chairs, are much applauded for an intrepid and novel turn. Probyn and Bates, in a humorous skit, entitled The Dude and the Soubrette, display comedy qualities of no mean order. The gentleman is a clever contortionist, and contributes a comical legmania dance.

Three sketches are being presented this week—all above the average. Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard, in their comedy sketch Coming Home, provide endless amusement, and both are very clever, making an emphatic hit; the Carina Sisters, two very refined artists, give an excellent turn with their musical mélange, which includes selections with flute, piccolo, Japanese fiddle, violin, piano, and tubular xylophone. A particularly well rendered solo on the piccolo brings down the house. The turn was not by any means the least appreciated among the various and attractive items which adorn the programme. Chas. Carr, singing and dancing cowboy, meets with a good reception in his song "Prairie Flower." There is genuine art in his dancing, for which he is loudly and enthusiastically applauded. Talbot and Pearce, in their delightful Japanese musical duologue, Yo-San, are highly appreciated. They carry special scenery, which, with lighted Chinese lanterns, forms a very pretty picture. Be your troubles what they may, it is impossible not to forget them when Ambrose Thorne is on the stage. Dressed in immaculate fashion he sings truly humorous songs in a style quite his own. He contributes three songs, all good, "Under the clock," "Uncle Bill of Germany," and "Levinski," and still the audience want more. Cole and Rags, smart comedy jugglers, introduce some clever and eccentric tricks, the tramps' business being of the funniest order.

R. Cameron Matthews and company are here with the famous farcical comedy sketch The Honeymoon Baby, which keeps the audience in hilarious mood. It is, without doubt, one of the best comedy sketches on the halls, and all taking part in it are excellent, even down to the "kid" (a pretty little billy-goat). Some realistic pictures on the Bioscope complete an excellent entertainment.

TOTTENHAM PALACE.

At this fine hall in Tottenham things are progressing in right royal fashion, and Mr. T. S. Mayne, the genial manager, and all concerned in the enterprise are very rightly congratulating themselves on the general healthiness of business. A programme of excellent quality is being presented this week, and notwithstanding the approach of Christmas, when a falling-off in attendances is expected, excellent audiences assemble to sample the various good things set before them. Mr. W. Burgess presides over the orchestra here, which opens the evening's entertainment with a selection from The Belle of New York excellently rendered. Mr. Ernest Shand tops the bill this week, and was in the very best of form on Monday. Mr. Shand is a very popular comedian, and he must have been pleased with his reception in Tottenham. His first song, "In other lands," is very good, but "The bachelor," with its funny patter, is the cause of much laughter, and the audience would not be satisfied until he contributed a third item, "The last pub." He also had some quaint patter in this item, and causes much amusement when he asks his audience to reflect "if water rots your boots, what must it do to your insides?"

The Six Brothers Luck and company provide another important turn. They are presenting this week their latest act, entitled Lift-Ems, Ltd. It is of the rough-and-tumble order, smartly performed, and very well received, causing no end of fun. Miss Gwennie Hasto is a strong card for any management to play. She has a good song, "I've got a girl," and shows ability in her terpsichorean act. One feels a special kind of delight whilst listening to Mr. Ian Colquhoun, whose baritone voice is heard to great advantage in his rendering of "Father O'Flynn." He also contributed some Scotch gems, and is decidedly one of the hits of the bill. Anthony, who styles himself as the "swankiest swanker of all swanks," gives a very amusing and clever conjuring entertainment; and Clown Sarford and his dogs appeared with entire success. A popular item on the programme is the turn provided by Billy McClain's Coloured Aristocrats, including Mme. Cordelia, Mon, Carlisle and Baker. These versatile coloured artists contribute a diverting medley of song and dance, and two members perform a duet on a couple of pianofortes which please the audience immensely. Miss Florence Schuberth, a singer with a pretty voice and manner, pleases her hearers with her vocalisation. She has a capital chorus song, "Keep on rocking me, Charlie," and another catchy song in "If the lady is willing." Captain Max Gruber and Miss Adelina present a unique act with their performing horse, pony, and elephant; and Ruffell's Bioscope completes an excellent evening's entertainment.

MISS ANNA BEAUMONT is returning for pantomime to Aldershot, as one of the Ugly Sisters, after a successful music hall tour.

THE public appetite for sensational and dangerous performances received a tragic rebuke on the night of the 12th, at the Palace of Varieties Theatre, Berlin, when a Hungarian acrobat named Arvad Felik received fatal injuries in full view of 2000 spectators. Felik's "turn" was billed as a "jump from the sixth storey," and it consisted in springing from a small ledge on the roof of the theatre upon a long wooden chute inclined at an angle of 45 degrees. Having acquired great skill Felik recently began the dangerous leap blindfolded. On the fatal night, when performing blind-folded for the thirteenth time, he struck the edge of the chute with great force, and fell heavily to the ground. His injuries were of a terrible nature, and he died in the hospital during the night.

AN exciting fire occurred early on Monday morning at the Jersey Beach Hotel, Aberavon, and some thrilling escapes are reported. There was a rumour that Arthur Roberts had been seriously injured in the fire. It appears, however, that Mr. Arthur Roberts, who is at present at Swansea, was unable to make the journey to the Jersey Beach Hotel on Sunday night, as he had intended doing, and that it was Mr. Huddleston, an old member of the Arthur Roberts Company, who was injured. He was assisting in the rescue work when the nurse, Miss Wharton, whose spine is said to be injured, jumped from a window and alighted on him. He is now lying in great pain at a small restaurant near the scene of the fire.

GEORGE LEYTON AT NEW CROSS.

The "Special Military Night," at the New Cross Empire, arranged for Friday, the 11th, was a brilliant success. The primary object of the function was to do honour to the local survivors of the Crimean War and Indian Mutiny, who had been engaged during the week by Mr. Ernest Bridgen to support Mr. George Leyton in a military sketch. For some years past Mr Leyton has espoused the cause of these old warriors, and in every town in which he has appeared he has made it his business to seek them out, inquire into their circumstances, and relieve their immediate needs. His efforts have met with the support they deserve, and Mr. Leyton has been publicly thanked by the Mayors of many important towns and boroughs, and treasures a letter from Field-Marshal Lord Roberts, expressing his gratitude and pleasure that Mr. Leyton's efforts had been so successful.

The exterior and interior of the Empire had been profusely decorated for the occasion. Trumpeters of the Royal Horse Artillery sounded the "general parade" outside the building just prior to the appearance of the Mayor and Mayoress of Greenwich (Mr. and Mrs. Henry Richardson) and party. The Mayor and Mayoress were received by Mr. Bridgen and escorted to the box reserved for them. The veterans were drawn up on the staircase, forming a guard of honour. The Mayoress was presented with a beautiful bouquet by Sergeant Peter Redmond, in his 86th years, late of the 57th Regiment (1st Middlesex), who had been through the Crimean War from beginning to end, and had also seen service during the Indian Mutiny, and been wounded in New Zealand.

Midway through the programme Mr. Geo. Leyton introduced Trooper John Ford, aged 74, a survivor of the famous "Charge," who recited Tennyson's poem with dramatic fervour, and received a great ovation. "The Last Muster," Mr. George Leyton's scena, in which twelve local veterans took part, having been concluded, the curtain rose in response to the demands of the audience, and disclosed the Mayor of Greenwich, supported by Mr. Ernest Bridgen and Mr. Leyton, with the veterans lined up behind. Mr. Bridgen briefly introduced his Worship, who, in a few well-chosen words, expressed his pleasure at the opportunity afforded him of making the acquaintance of the survivors of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny. He was also pleased to be able to thank Mr. Leyton on behalf of himself, the Mayoress, and, he was sure, the whole of the audience, for the magnificent work he had done for these old men. He had been requested by the Mayoress to publicly thank Sergeant Redmond for presenting her with a beautiful bouquet. He was pleased to see the officers and men of the Woolwich garrison so well represented, and concluded by hoping the result of that gathering would be a financial success. The curtain having fallen, his Worship expressed the desire to be introduced to the veterans, who paraded at the back of the stage, and, after shaking hands with them and questioning them as to their various careers, he handed to each man a new half-crown, with his best wishes for their future welfare.

A BREACH OF CONTRACT.

At the Westminster County Court on Wednesday, Mr. J. T. McCallan sued Mr. Alfred Dove, the musical-director of the Moss and Stoll Empires, for £100 damages for breach of contract. Mr. Emile Cannot, in opening the case for the plaintiff, said that his client, an operatic singer, received a letter from Mr. Campbell Bishop, on Aug. 8, stating that he had the engaging of artists for the La Scala Operatic Company, who was going to run a company giving selections from Cavalleria Rusticana on the music-halls. The letter asked defendant to state the lowest terms he would take for a good tour, allowing ten per cent. commission for him. His client replied, and Mr. Bishop wrote that he had obtained the engagement on the terms asked. The next communication was a call for a rehearsal, signed by Mr. Bishop's wife, received on Aug. 22. Then plaintiff gave a trial show at the Hippodrome, Richmond, and it ran for six days, plaintiff giving twelve shows. At the end of the week, Mr. Dove, the manager of the "Scala Operatic Company" came to the plaintiff, and asked him to reduce his salary for the trial shows, and he agreed to take half, receiving £3 5s. The defendants had secured a tour, and Mr. McCallan went to Glasgow, performed, and got the salary—£6 10s.—which had been agreed between Mr. Bishop and his client. On Nov. 28 he performed at Manchester, with the defendant's company, and the next week they had no engagement, so he returned to London. He next saw that the piece was advertised to be given in Hull, and as he had had no call, he wired for one. He received the reply: "Regret, not required. Letter explains." No letter came.

Mr. Dove said Mr. Bishop was never in his employ, and had no authority to make contracts with artists.

The plaintiff came to him when they were stranded, and said he had an offer at the Waldorf Theatre, and witness advised him to take the engagement, as he had nothing to offer him. He only engaged his artists from week to week for the show.

His Honour considered that a contract was made, and that Mr. Bishop was empowered to make a contract at the rate of £5 10s. per week, for a tour, and that a tour had been carried out. He found for plaintiff for twenty-seven guineas and costs.

IMPORTANT COPYRIGHT CASE.

Before Alderman Sir T. Vansittart Bowater, at Guildhall, Edward Solomon, of Assam-street, Commercial-road, E., was charged, on remand, with selling and having in his possession for sale a quantity of pirated copyright "musical works," i.e., "Will you love me in December as you do in May?" and "Love me and the world is mine."

Accused was given into custody whilst selling copies of the words of the songs contained in a song-sheet, entitled "Christmas Songs," to hawkers in Aldgate.

Supporting the charges, Mr. Albert Strong explained that the prosecution was taken under the Act of 1906, which was framed and passed at the request of the music trade to stop piracies of copyright "musical works." The question in dispute was whether songs without the music could be included in the definition "musical works." His submission was that they could, and he would point out that the publication of these printed sheets of pirated songs affected his client financially.

Mr. H. Myers, for the defence, did not dispute that the words of the songs were the same as those contained in the musical copyright edition, but contended that, inasmuch as they were published apart from the music, they could not be regarded as a "musical work." How could they be when they lacked the very essential part, the music?

The Alderman dismissed the charge with costs against McGlennon, the prosecutor, observing that he had not been convinced that words alone constituted a "musical work." Had the music and words been published together it would have been different. As it was an important question to the trade, he would willingly state a case. Mr. Albert Strong appeared for the complainant.

THE Brothers Lyster informed the V.A.P. meeting at Nottingham that the person who wired to Bolton for money in the name of the Smarte Brothers tried a similar trick in the name of Lyster and Cook on Manager Smithson, of Barnsley. It is well that he has been discovered and arrested.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Copyright confusion is like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

WAVERLEY MARKET, EDINBURGH.

Rehearsal at 10 a.m. sharp for :—

The Saxon Trio, Zeynardt's Lilliputians, Burke, Andrus, and Frisco, The Holloways, Tambo and Tambo, Woodward's Seals, Frank L. Gregory Troupe, Hugo and Smit, The Five Mowatts, The Santerons, Amer's Band, and all side shows, entertainments, &c., engaged.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow :—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR ALL THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

ROVER'S CHRISTMAS.

Code Word, "GALANT."

Rover, the faithful ragpicker's dog, notices on Christmas Eve that his young masters look eagerly at the toys displayed at the window of a great bazaar. When they come home their mother tells them that it is no use their putting their stockings near the chimney, for Santa Claus has not got their address. The children go to bed with a sigh, but Rover, who seems to understand what is going on, darts out into the street and helps himself to different toys, which he takes home to his playmates.

412ft. The Subject, £6 17s. 4d. Toning, 10s.

LITTLE TOY—GLORIOUS DREAM.

Code Word, "GAMIN."

A poor woman and her little daughter are begging outside a house, where children are enjoying themselves round the Christmas-tree. A little boy is the only one to notice the poor people when he leaves with his arms full of toys and sweets. He gives them some money, and the woman, instead of buying bread for their supper, buys her little girl a penny toy, so that she should commemorate Christmas also. In her dream the child sees Santa Claus scattering heaps of toys about. When she wakes up she only finds the bare room, and no toy; but the kind little boy arrives with his father, and leaves with the mother and child a lot of useful things, which will afford for once one merry Christmas to the poor people.

560ft. The Subject, £9 6s. 8d.

HIPPOPOTAMUS HUNTING ON THE BLUE NILE.

Code Word, "GALBE."

Our operators have exhibited real skill in photography, inasmuch as they took from a short distance several views of the hunt. We are happy to be able to offer to our customers, who are fond of cinematography and sports, this interesting series of snapshots from the time when the monsters appear at the surface of the water to the moment when it is cut up on shore and their teeth put away for their ivory.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s. 0d.

A GOOD TIP.

Code Word, "FLIRT."

Peter and Enid are to be married shortly, but the girl's father having been served with a writ of distraint the sale will take place within a few days, and this disturbs the young man very much. Having overheard a conversation, he makes use of the tip, which was not intended for his ear, and after selling his own horse in order to procure money he goes to the Deauville Races, stakes, and wins. This enables him to save his sweetheart's home. The Deauville Races, a very fashionable function, are displayed in this picture, showing a crowd of well-dressed women and men of fashion.

740ft. The Subject, £12 6s. 8d.

THE MAN OF FREQUENT FALLS.

Code Word, "FOURCHE."

The man of frequent falls, always running after his balance, goes from fall to stumble, dragging down with him every passer-by. He is carried to the police-station, which he enters after breaking in a door and upsetting the balance of three policemen.

264ft. The Subject, £4 8s. 0d.

RUMKILN ASHORE.

Code Word, "FOOTBALL."

Gendarme Stone is watching for Rumkiln, the defaulter, to leave the public-house. The sailor is rolling terribly as he comes out. Stone lays his hand on him, but after a few steps the drunkard slips away and hides inside a carrier-tricycle. Stone jumps on top and orders Mark, the boy, to ride on, but as they feel very thirsty they halt at several bars. The outcome of this is that Gendarme Stone returns to the barracks with anything but a dignified appearance and without Rumkiln.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s. 0d.

THE TEST.

Code Word, "FISC."

In order to test the feelings of the fiancé her parents have chosen for her Miss Martha takes the place of her servant. Swaying between the love he experiences for the new maid and his position as a suitor of the daughter of the Earl of Hape, the young Marquis hesitates . . . until love wins the day, and sly Miss Martha allows herself to be found out.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s. 0d. Colouring, £4 15s. 0d.

MILLINERS' PRANKS.

Code Word, "FRACTION."

"Young lady (19), dowry £80,000, wishes to marry gentleman of means. Write J.P., 118, Corn Street." A number of old mashers answer this advertisement. The laughing girls keep the appointment, and they have such fun! Yet when the time comes for them to dismiss their admirers they find it pretty difficult to do so. A chase through the streets gives us a glimpse of gay Paris. At last our milliner friends manage to drench their followers with a watering-hose, and this puts an end to their pursuit.

379ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d.

AN UP-TO-DATE WIG CHASE.

Code Word, "FELICITE."

The huge success of our previous subject "Wig Chase" has induced us to publish again the same film, except that we have added to same different improvements, which will be appreciated by the public. The heroine of the revived "Wig Chase" leads the audience to the most picturesque spots in Paris, and the extraordinary and comic incidents she meets with are very laughable.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s. 0d.

LIVING DOLLS.

Code Word, "FILATURE."

At a bazaar, in Fairyland. The shop assistant takes from their boxes lots of dolls, marionettes, harlequins, &c., which become alive and move about and disappear at the assistant's bidding, then perform a wild dance before going back into their respective boxes again.

379ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d. Colouring, £3 15s. 0d.

RAPIDS AND WATERFALLS AT TANNFORSEN AND RISTA (SWEDEN).

Code Word, "FRELON."

Beautiful sceneries depicting waterfalls and rapids in Sweden, with a background of pine forests and rocks. The torrent whirls and gushes on a stony bed and precipitates its frothy whiteness in large volumes from a tremendous height into its lower bed.

396ft. The Subject, £6 12s. 0d. Toning, 15s. 0d.

ARABIAN POTTERY.

Code Word, "EXHALER."

Titles of the pictures:—Preparing the clay, baking, decorating the finished pottery, going to the bazaar.

478ft. The Subject, £7 19s. 4d. Toning, 6s. 0d.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1908.
Morning Advertiser, Jan. 20:—
That very useful, one might with truth add indispensable, publication, "The Era" Annual, has once again made its welcome appearance, and once again it is crowded with information concerning the theatrical doings of the past year. Those who purchase it (it is sold at the modest price of 1s.) will have in their possession a complete and succinct history of the year's drama in this country, and a record of the plays produced in Paris and Berlin. As an appetising hors d'œuvre to the solid information, the book contains a number of interesting short stories and amusing anecdotes by well-known actors and theatrical managers.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Andrew Melville's company, in Driven From Home, is here this week. Mr. Felix Pitt succeeds admirably as Anthony Raybrook; Mr. P. G. Beresford gives a capital representation of Walter Hatherleigh; Mr. C. Burdon acts with force as Geoffrey Waring; and Mr. Harry Cornwall as Jabez Thomas plays naturally and is very convincing. Miss Violet E. Lawson makes a charming and attractive Laura Raybrook, and later on wins high praise as the lad Walter Hatherleigh; Miss L. Ingles is good as Barbara Ashdown; and Miss Emily Custance as Margaret Bailey imbues the part with humour and charm. Mr. Fred C. Imbert as John Anderson is seen to advantage; and Mr. Percy Dawson is eminently successful as Willie, an outcast. Mr. Henry Helling as Adam Marley makes an excellent impression; and Mr. E. Finlay as Dick Saunders plays with intelligence and power.

THE NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Director of Entertainment, Mr. Fred Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—This house was formally opened on Monday night. A report of the opening will be found in another column.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—For the first three nights we had here Messrs. Herbert Skardon and H. Sherwood Martin's company in the sporting drama The Way of the World. Miss Sidney Crowe—who is an old favourite in Aldershot—again proved her high histrionic ability, and was seen to advantage as Lady Adela in several handsome dresses. Mr. Clarence Temple gave a powerful enactment of Matthew Malyon, the lion tamer; Mr. Herbert Skardon as Cecil Hardy and Miss Violet Lytton as the circus girl, Kate, were all that a hero and heroine should be; the comic element is safe in the hands of Miss Violet Vivienne (the Strong Lady) and Mr. D'Arcy Kelway and Mr. Victor Gordon as Jolly and Bluff respectively. The other parts were well filled, and the mounting, especially in the racecourse scene, was good.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Closed for preparation of pantomime, Dick Whittington, for production on Dec. 24 (Christmas Eve).

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The programme for Christmas week includes the visit to Ashton of Reano and his famous band of instrumentalists. It is really a feast of music of an artistic kind. In Reano's programme is that wonderfully descriptive overture "1812," by Tschaikowsky, which illustrates the declaration of war between Napoleon Bonaparte and Russia; also the famous "Marseillaise" as the French army marches to Moscow; the battle scene; the burning of Moscow; the bells of Moscow; the retreat of the French army; and the triumphant Russian National Anthem. Other pieces are the humorous interlude, "The Tom Cat; or, the Tired Trombones," very funny in performance; Rossini's famous Storm Scene and Marche Militaire, from William Tell. The lead of Reano is most definite, and his players individually and collectively are all under his immediate eye and ear, and answer promptly every movement of the famed strenuous conductor. The variety artists for the week are Mark Merry, a very "merry" comedian; Will Sullivan, a comic singer and patterer of some note; Capt. Roberts, the Army staff trumpeter, appears as a musician, an athlete, and a balancer, assisted by two ladies, two ponies, and his comical acrobat soldier boys Curt and Alexander. Miss Margaret Drew is a dainty singer of songs with catchy choruses; Horace Sade wins favour by some clever characteristic dancing; the Wakeman Quintette enact a musical comedy sketch. They are admirable song harmonisers and humorists. The Hebrew comedian, Lew Peterman, is unique in his stage business and song; and to crown a most excellent programme, we have the wonderful manipulators, the Wartano Trio, modern lady jugglers, in a novel act; and the Bioscope, as usual.

THE NEW PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Owen.—On Monday the new palace of entertainment, the Pavilion, opened its doors to the public. Under the blaze of electric light everything looked spick-and-span. The decorations pleased the eye. They are of Louis XIV period, gold and colours, fully described in special article. The new animated picture exhibition was good. The chief of the films shown on the canvas were the Martyrdom of Louis XVII. of France and the Sad History of the Little Dauphin, and The Myrmidons of the Great Revolution. The Eclipse of the Sun and Moon is the story of an ancient astronomer whose eagerness to pursue his studies of the heavenly bodies leads to his untimely death. Sailing in ethereal space are seen mystical beings and wonderful signs, the inhabitants of a fabled sphere, very interesting to the speculatively inclined spectator. The Strike of Workpeople of an Iron Smelting Works, and the fatal rivalry of a junior partner of the firm and a superintendent of the works, is a vivid depiction of vengeful jealousy and malice. Other serious pictures are the death of a sainted mother and the story of a Christmas waif and a bad father. Then we have a number of humorous episodes illustrated in The Unlucky Bridegroom and For the Peace of the Family, both a series of untoward accidents and disaster of a very diverting character. The Man with the Indiarubber Shoes is quite a phenomenon of high jumping, extraordinary leaps, and feats of aerial flights. In the course of his remarkable flights and leaps into space he knocks down all obstacles, and creates abundance of confusion and disaster to others. Rivers and lakes, high walls, and high buildings do not bar his progress. He o'ertops all. It is certainly most laughter-provoking. The Lover in Straw is another amusing episode, as shown in the man who was enclosed in a bundle of straw, and was the victim of rough usage and strange experiences. The vaudeville artists gave a varied show. First a couple of cross-talking, singing, and patter comedians engage the attention. Very smart in patter and catchy in song is the turn of Wills and Warlock. A speciality dance was a feature of these artists, accomplished seated on chairs. The Wyfes (George and May) appeared in a capital drawing-room sketch about the baby that came by parcel post, enclosed in a skip, to the wrong house, and naturally there ensued a quarrel between husband and wife. Joseph B. Montague, assisted by Hilda Blanche, enacted a sketch which excited much interest, the former as a bookie of the turf, and the latter as a celebrated expert in jiu-jitsu. The Five Zingaris, five shapely young girls, gave an Eastern scena in appropriate costume, song, and dance. They afterwards appeared in national costumes, representing the Dutch girl in sabots, the Yankee girl in stars and stripes, the Scotch lassie in kilts, the Irish colleen in Connemara costume, and the English lass in sailor costume. They danced the national step-dances with great vigour, and were heartily applauded. The audience included many official and noted local representative men, with ladies. The musical-director, Mr. Bert Beattie, played throughout the evening on the grand pianoforte, the sole musical instrument used for orchestral purposes at these entertainments, and it was noticeable that the player was an accomplished musician and an expert executant.

THE PICTUREDROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Manager, Mr. J. Marks.—A very pretty coloured series of pictures representing the story of Cinderella is the chief item of the performance at the Ashton Picturedrome this week, and pleases the audiences immensely. The Little Savoyard is a most pathetic story of an outcast boy; The Devil's Three Sins is an artistically coloured film, depicting a story of love, temptation, and victory; A Voice from the Dead gives a thrilling drama of real life, the representation of a flaming forge, the excitement of a strike, and the dramatic denouement all combining to make it a striking feature of the programme. Retribution is an effective domestic tragedy and pathos. The more artistic and sombre pictures are relieved by many of the comedy order, including Diabolical Itching (a screaming farce), How Jones Got a New Suit, Fido's Taking Ways, The Prize Camel, all manipulated with skill. A couple of young artists, the Musical Morrellis, give a pleasing entertainment on bells, fairy-bells, mandoline, Jap. violin, &c., and meet with a cordial reception. Lots are drawn at each house by members of the audience, and a ticket-number thrown on the screen, the lucky holder being presented with a dinner-cruet.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—This week's attractive selection of pictures, humorous and interesting, include, amongst others, Love's Strategy, A Kindhearted Shoeblack, A Suburbanite's Ingenious Alarm, Married for Money, An Aviator's First Trial, and an intensely dramatic film, A Showman's Wife. Mr. Charles Verner is still retained as vocalist, and his chorus songs are rendered in excellent style.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry Sanders.—This week's bill is contributed to by the following:—The Three Pirmans in a pantomimic absurdity on the horizontal bars and trapeze; Elroy, rightly described as the "armless wonder," who cleverly paints and sketches with his feet; Mr. Matt Wilkinson and company in a sketch, On the Flip-Flap; Miss Mabel Florence, comedienne; the Palace Choir; Mr. George Phillips, vocalist and dancer; the Two Clares, lady vocalists and dancers; and the Attergraph pictures, under Mr. Clayton's direction.

AYR.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—The theatre is being occupied this week by the Russell-Rosse Répertoire Company, which includes a very fine combination of players. The opening piece was Sydney Grundy's three-act comedy A Pair of Spectacles. Mr. David James, in the part of Benjamin Goldfinch, was admirable; as Gregory Mr. Maurice Denham gave a fine interpretation, hitting off the Yorkshireman to the life; Mr. James Gelderd's Dick Goldfinch was a clever assumption; Miss Ida Chapman made a sweetly pretty Mrs. Goldfinch; and the other parts were in capable hands. The same piece was played on Tuesday and Wednesday, and for Thursday Caste and for Saturday Our Boys was billed.

BARRY DOCK.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company is here in The Love That Women Desire. Mr. J. O. Stewart gives an excellent rendering of Squire Abingdon; Mr. Herbert Pearson fills the rôle of Philip Carnaby admirably; as Richard Abingdon Mr. Leigh Courtney is very successful. The success of the evening is Miss Dorothy Hildebrande as Patty Swift. She is extremely clever. As Frank Hardy Mr. Wilton Reed leaves little to be desired; Mr. J. W. Wilkinson (P.C. Sourberry) and Mr. John Hignett (Denis O'Rouke) make the most of their comedy parts; Miss Maud Hastings as Sybil Thorburn fills that character well; Miss Clynes is efficient as Madge Abingdon, and so is Miss Vere Rose as Maraquina. The drama is finely staged.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis H. Long.—On Boxing Day Mr George Edwardes's principal company were to commence a return visit here with The Merry Widow, the cast including Mr. Leonard Mackay, Mr. Lionel Victor, Mr. Tom Redmond, and Miss Octavia Barry.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—The bill for the week here includes the names of Cassie Walmer in "Good-bye, Ebenezer"; Jamie Piper, a clever young musician; Archie Pitt, a quaint and amusing comedian; the Fordyces, comedy artists and dancers; Babusio Brothers, who do some wonderful head-to-head acrobatic feats; Charles Banks and his intelligent dog; and the Arthur Gallimore Trio, who cause great laughter in their comedy turn; Raymond's Bio-tableaux retain the esteem of the audience.

BATLEY.—THEATRE.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Whitty; Manager, Mr. Alfred A. Taylor.—The attraction here this week is Love, the Conqueror, presented by Mr. Frank Lindo and company, which includes Miss Marion Wakeford as the heroine.

BELFAST.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. M'Cann.—Mr. Charles H. Lester's company opened here on Monday in the emotional drama A Life for a Life. Mr. Lester himself impersonates Don Leon Farnandez, alias Josh Harker, in a skilful manner; Mr. Richard Bosco may be congratulated on his able assumption of the rôle of Pedro le Calci; Miss Lydia Hart's impersonation of the part of Eulalie reflects much credit on this capable actress; and Little Winnie, by her assumption of Vonetta, completely captivates the audience. The humour of the piece is in the safe hands of Miss Gertrude Wasley and Mr. E. O'Grady, most amusing as Nancy Dora and Tim McCarthy. Mr. Harry T. Wood as Kit Oswald is admirable; and other rôles are capitally sustained by Miss Dorothy Riddell (charming as Kate Evelyn) and Messrs. W. Carr, Chris. Felton, J. Bernstone, A. Brown, Jack Mason, &c.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—Closed for rehearsals of annual Christmas pantomime, Jack and Jill, to be produced on Christmas Eve.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Will Sley and Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Phenomenal success has been achieved by Mr. John Tiller's pantomime, Jack and Jill. This is not surprising, considering the attractiveness of the production, with its beautiful scenery, capital songs, and a competent cast. The principals, Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss Nellie Rodney, Miss Cissy Iris, Miss Nelly Grimshaw, and Messrs. Horace Jones, Harry Cotton, Bruce Green, and F. and H. le Crew would be hard to excel in their various rôles; whilst the ballet in the fifth scene of The Gathering of the Clans, in which nearly fifty performers appear, is the talk of the city. Mr. Downs, the courteous manager, must, indeed, be congratulated on the huge success.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The leading attraction here is provided by Mr. Arthur Watson, Miss Flo Stanley, and company, who produce with every element of success their side-splitting comedy sketch, The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory. The return to this city of the inimitable Irish comedian Mr. W. J. Ashcroft has drawn great crowds, and, needless to say, the veteran has gained enthusiastic encores nightly. Mlle. Pollo is a graceful gymnast, her feats being very smart; and the Mayvilles return with their remarkably smart liliputian act. Miss Ina Lorrimer is a capital Scotch comedienne with good songs; and also here are Mr. Victor Travers, comedian, Mr. Charles Vincent, comedian, and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr Will White.—The holiday programme here reflects much credit on the popular manager, Mr. Will White, who is always most indefatigable in the interests of his clientèle. The famous Filmograph exhibits the following views: An Auto Heroine, Animated Posters, His First Row, Capricious Woman, Lost in the Alps, &c. Also appearing are Reason and Waite, clever comedians; and Mr. Geo. Griffan, a capital humorist.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Robert Wilson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—The programme here is certainly one to please the most fastidious. Under the direction of the management the following films have been exhibited: A Mother's Fault, Bachelor's Baby, Pheasant Farming, The Reprieve, Hypnotic Policeman, &c. In addition, Miss N. O'Hagan, the Irish colleen, appears; also Mr. Dan Ellis, a local comedian, who has been very successful.

CLIFTONVILLE HALL.—Resident-Manager, Colonel Fred T. Cummins.—The surprising success of the skating-rink continues, and the craze has spread to such an extent that the hall is crowded daily with many hundred devotees of the art. The popular manager, Colonel Cummins, announces many novelties, including "The Barnyard Carnival."

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Kelly gave a gala performance on Monday in aid of the Birkenhead Christmas Hot-pot Fund. The function is an annual one, and Mr. Kelly, with characteristic generosity, gives the whole of the proceeds to augment the income of a worthy charity. It was gratifying to find the house crowded to its utmost capacity by an audience which included the élite of the neighbourhood, and the entertainment was under the immediate patronage and presence of the Mayor and Mayoress. The artists, who (by kind permission of their respective managers) generously offered their services included Arthur Rigby, Edwin Adeler, Bobbie Allandale, Florence Imeson, W. G. Wesley, Joe Huds, Lisando Brothers, Mlle. de Rose, Hettie Gale, Little Ikey Moe, Ada Fawn, Jack Hylton, Jim Cunliffe, Harry Taft, Jimson's "Pets at Home," Charles Gardner, Massona, Arthur Kenny, the Zampas, Sammy Shields, Charles Rowen, the Sages, Leslie's Cadets, Elliott and Kennedy, Fred Poplar, Walker and May, Maggie Walsh, Harry Wright, Belle Moody, Crutchley and Jones, Karlyna, Mary Lamont, and the Brothers Martin. An item of exceptional interest was a performance of Sir Conan Doyle's little play, Waterloo, admirably represented by members of the Birkenhead Dramatic Company. The band of the 5th King's Liverpool Regiment, under Mr. J. Heron, gave a selection, and the resident orchestra, under the direction of Mr. J. Callaghan, was augmented for the occasion. On subsequent evenings the theatre has remained closed to admit of the necessary preparations of Mr. James Kiddie's pantomime Cinderella on Boxing Day.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—The Gotham quartette of comedians and vocalists are a strong attraction, and Miss Ada Fawn, a charming and accomplished comedienne, is also a general favourite; Little Ikey Moe, a smart young Hebrew comedian, is a leading feature, and a good combination includes Beau and Bell, in their scena Past and Present; Jim Cunliffe, light comedian; Barney Vox, ventriloquist; Heeley and Meeley, in their act Two Lucky Tramps; Jack Hylton, comedian; and Brown's Royal Bioscope.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—Mr. Jake Friedman, Anglo-Dutch comedian, and his very capable company, in the operetta Happy Holland, worthily secure premier honours. Other excellent turns are those of Mr. Charles Gardiner, comedian; the Zampas, duettists and dancers; Harry Taft, whistling comedian; Jimson's "Pets at Home"; Massona, juggler; Arthur Kenny, cyclist; and the Hippodrome pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Robertson.—The Girl with the Angel Face is here, played by Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and James Willard's company. Angel Leigh is represented with fine skill by Miss Florrie Green; Mr. Fred Evison repeats his clever character study of Jasper Death; Miss Mildred Carr as Mollie Maitland is very welcome; the rôle of Ena Wentworth is enacted with admirable sympathy by Miss Phyllis Dailley; Mr. H. Naylor Grimson in the dual rôle of Sir John and Thomas Wentworth is equal to his onerous duties. High praise can be accorded Mr. Austin Mortimer, Mr. Dobell Lyle, Mr. Allan Charles, and Mr. Dicky Bird for their respective performances.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—The Girl Who Went Astray is here, played by Mr. Fred Bulmer's company. Miss Gwynne Warren repeats Madge Harvey in able and dramatic style; Mr. John B. Shinton appears in capital contrast as Captain Frank Julian; Mr. Fred Lloyd is exceedingly clever as Rupert Murdock; Miss Ada M. Ryder gives a clever performance as Violet Harvey, her acting being replete with charm; Miss Mary Dalby makes the best of the character of Molly Smart, keeping the audience in glee; Mr. Edgar P. Melrose is successful as Sergeant John Harvey, V.C.; Adolphus Boomer and James Yellowsocks are highly amusing in the hands of Messrs. Evan Roland and Todd Squires. Miss Sybil Haughton, Miss Freda Fredericks, Mr. Edwin Williams, and Mr. A. Mainwaring give good support.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—The excellent bill submitted here is headed by Fred Walton and his company of pantomimists, in their latest sketch The Toy Soldier, which creates a lot of laughter. Bertha Stuart, a Scotch vocalist, is loudly applauded for her rendering of "Caller Herrin'" and other songs; the Cree Brothers are clever comedy acrobats, their act, The Gipsies, being watched with interest; a capital and versatile entertainment is provided by the Gems; and the Glenroy Troupe of vocalists and dancers, May Brilliant, Frank Leon, and "Billy," an educated horse, complete the programme.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The delightful Salome and butterfly dances, presented by Helen Roberts, are causing quite a furore here; Albert Marsh and company have a dramatic sketch, Chums Till Death, which is a stirring story of the goldfields; while Dennis Drew has a musical scena, Back to Barracks. La Devo is applauded for his mysterious act and song-scena. Other prominent turns include the Stein-Eretto troupe, Cissie Thompson, Theresa Da Silva, Harry Lawson, and Alf. Holt.

HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Lyons.—Joe Peterman brings his new act, Singing Servants; A. W. Pinero's comedy sketch, Hester's Mystery, is cleverly played by H. Pollock and company; Dorothy L. Clarke is a dainty comedienne; the Three Crosits have a novel sporting scena. The company also includes Walter Reynold's Irish dramatic company, Brull and Hemsley, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon-Wilde, the Three Rubys, Andrews and Thompson, and the Denwartz troupe.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—Lockhart's elephants are the interesting item in this week's bill. There is a novel turn provided by Lennie and Hast, whose phantasy, The Sea Nymph, is certainly much appreciated; Henri Cazman is loudly applauded for his impersonations; and Florence Yaman, Bella Belmont, Rale Walters, Jack Neil, James Basnett, and Wyndham and Kitty are all excellent turns.

ASTON HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—The management here are keeping the programme up to a high standard. James Callaham and Jennie St. George present their musical and vocal entertainment, which is first class; the Three Comedy Chanters are most entertaining;

Mike Gray is an amusing juggler; the Shelleys present their sketch, Miss Summerson's Baby; Fred Walmsley is amusing; Miss D'Almaine sings well; and Henry and Tyler are expert trick cyclists.

King's Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy.—There is an excellent lot of pictures being shown here this week, the Red Indian and the Child and Waterproof Willie being especially good. The vaudeville company are well up to their standard.

Curzon Hall.—Hamilton's Excursions have started a season here, and let us hope they will be as successful as they always have been. Both the panorama and bioscope pictures are of a high order, while the variety turns provided by John Reynold's Quintette and Hess and Lisbon are exceedingly good.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — Eden Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—The T. Edward Ward company occupy the boards here this week in The Love of the Princess. Mr. Wilson Coleman is admirable as Prince Conrad Ramona, and Mr. E. H. Dobell is quite an adept in the part of Josef, King of Ilarnia; Mr. Edgar Morgan (Boris) and Mr. F. Serle (Duke of Scarfe) earn credit; Mr. Ernest E. Imeson is fine as Danillo, and Mr. Theo Balfour displays the part of Prince Regent of Narava in an excellent manner; Miss Maisie Hanbury is a charming Princess Idalia, and the remainder of the cast is good.

BRIGHOUSE. — Albert Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland and Emerson; Manager, Mr. W. H. Emerson.—Countess Romanow, in her Salome dance, is filling this popular theatre this week. She is loudly applauded at the conclusion of her artistic turn; Chas. Woodward, with good chorus songs, goes well; Clifford and Yorke amuse the audience with their jokes, and conclude with a funny song. The Weary Wanderers, the Vanderbilts, present a fine scena, That's How They Say Good-night, and are highly appreciated; Cattania Trio are exceptionally clever gymnasts and teeth equilibrists. Up-to-date animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. complete a very interesting programme.

BRIGHTON.—Alhambra.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith.—An excellent programme is sustained here this week. The Elite Harmony Boys are very warmly applauded for their artistic vocalisation; Yolande Noble, vivacious and charming, contributes her songs in good style; the Brothers Michel are well received in artistic costume tableaux and in their acrobatic displays; Atkinson and Cook are successful in song, dance, and patter; Selbo is a clever juggler; Freda Sharlotte's original monologue is cordially appreciated; Jack Folly is a merry comedian; Louis Hurman sings admirably; Rose Dorne is a dainty vocalist and dancer; Stanley Ross, light comedian, gave a good turn; and the Alhambra Picturegraph affords much enjoyment.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. J. Brown.—There is a capital company here this week. Chung Ling Soo, Chinese magician, performs some marvellous and bewildering feats; the Harmony Four are very popular with their tasteful and diverting musical comedy; Phil Rees' Stable Lads are highly successful in a novel racing act; Thorpe and company make a great hit in their sketch, My Burglar; the Three Ansonias are clever acrobats and equilibrists; Pyck, Tholl, and Taylor appear in an entertaining sketch, The Dancing Master; Honors and Le Prince contribute a good comedy acrobatic turn; the Maid and the Moon, musical novelty, evokes hearty applause; and Rosie Lloyd, comedienne, finds much favour.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. M. Barrasford.—There is a fine series of animated pictures in the entertainments here this week. The Sleeping Beauty is an interesting pantomime display; The Interrupted Wedding and The Soldier's Revenge convey very stirring incidents; the Christmas Angel is a charming picture; and great amusement is afforded by Willie's Dream and The Human Wheel. Real singing pictures with gramophone songs—Christmas Day in the Barracks and Oh! Oh! Antonio—form a striking novelty. The Sable Operatic Minstrel Troupe contribute harmony, fun, and frolic, which are warmly appreciated. Mr. Arthur W. Briggs presides at the piano with distinct skill.

BROUGHTON.—Victoria Theatre, Ltd.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—This theatre is closed, as usual, during the present week, except on Wednesday, when about sixty artists from the theatres and music halls in the district have arranged to contribute to a benefit for the genial and energetic manager, Mr. J. Fred Watson. On Dec. 26 The Dairymaids return visit commences for a fortnight.

BURY (Lancs').—Circus of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant-Acting-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—The Clement Trio give a clever and humorous exhibition on the flying trapeze here; Jack Hamilton, light comedian, renders his songs in a pleasing and refined manner; The Lady and the Scarecrow is the title of an absurdity presented by Athas and Collins, and which proves very popular; Renee Graham has a good voice, and is successful in several descriptive songs; Elliott and Warne are capital comedy tumblers and dancers; a diverting juggling and vaulting act is supplied by Alfred Eugene; Sara Rosebury in a Lancashire dialect monologue, and the Three Neros in comedy acrobatic act complete the bill.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—A novel boxing speciality is introduced by Ben Harris and his Nippers, and their turn is one greatly enjoyed by the audience. The wooden-shoe dancing of Devon and Earle is considerably above the average; Jimmy Shields is a quaint comedian, and his songs are good; William and Warden are entertaining in a sketch, Mr. Dooley; good songs are given by Harry Leaton; and other enjoyable items are those of the Primanes in a juggling act, The Farmer's Boy; Albert Dann, acrobat; May Knight, comedienne; Lidden and Hayward, a smart comedy couple; Charters and Clare, burlesque artists; and The White Suit shown on the Bioscope.

BOLTON.—Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Houdini, "the handcuff king," is freeing himself from "locks, bolts, and bars." A good company includes the Regar Trio of lady gymnasts; Ella Lorraine, ballad vocalist; Barney Ives and company in "Magic and Illusion"; the Bros. Ford, wooden-shoe dancers; the Rizarelis in a sensational revolving trapeze performance; James Brady, eccentric joker; Geo. Bond, comedian; Lyons and Cullum, in a speciality act; and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

Empire Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—In the bill here are the Three Stewarts in an exceedingly difficult acrobatic balancing act; Marie Powell, refined speciality artist; Albert Letine, female impersonator; Rita Rowe, vocalist; Charles Ulrick, a barrel king; Ivey Aberdare, comedienne and dancer; the Bros. Idento, comic jugglers; and the Empire Bioscope.

CARLISLE.—H.M. Theatre.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. S. McKim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—Mr. C. Watson Mill and company are here in a stirring drama, For Love and the King. Mr. Mill as Jarval is a popular hero, and Miss Rosalind Tate is successful as the Princess; Mr. Villiers Stanley gives a nice rendering of Prince Uros, and Natila is well played by Miss Joan Ellis; Mr. John Burton (Michael), Mr. Henry Harlesmere (Vladimir), and Mr. Geoffrey Chate (Ferdinand) all do well.

Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Morgan.—The Serenaders are scoring a success here; the Carpos Bros., acrobats, are a smart turn; and Shirley and Ransome are popular in 'Arf a Quid. Others are Will Millington, My Lady Dainty, the Two Errolls, Alec Kennedy, &c., and the Pepiscope.

CARMARTHEN. — Assembly Rooms. — Proprietors, Public Rooms Co.; Secretary, Mr. Edward Baldwin.—Messrs. Harry and Fred Poole's No. 1 Myrioramaand combination of variety artists opened for three nights on Monday evening. The pictures exhibited were a fine lot, and included all the latest comic and sensational subjects; and the tour round the world, illustrative of the leading events, was thoroughly appreciated by the large audiences. Mr. Richard Karsy's giant myriophone proved a great musical attraction; Mr. Bert Gates was a most capable guide and a clever ventriloquist; Mr. Harry Dowsett, in his illustrated songs, was very entertaining; the George French troupe were extraordinarily clever trick cyclists; Miss Phyllis St. Clair scored in her operatic and ballad songs; Learto and his dog "Babs" showed remarkable skill in their musical act; while the Snow Family in their eccentric and expert skating act, were smart and amusing. The orchestral band, under the direction of Mr. Fred Bescoby, supplied choice music. The general manager was Mr. Charles Poole, and the stage manager Mr. Bert Gates.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P.—An excellent bill is this week provided by Mr. Fred C. Somerfield's capital company with the sensational drama Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. The scenery is excellent, and all work well for the general effect. Mr. Paul Beckett as Felix Beverley is the central figure, and as the gentlemanly villain, brings to bear on his rôle the skill of an experienced actor; Miss Mary Lovett gracefully and sympathetically fills the part of Mary, and her acting throughout is a fine study; an admirable exponent of Jack Stirling is to hand in Mr. Edward E. Ashby, who has a style that is equally natural and agreeable; Sweet Nancy is played by Miss Katie Lever, whose mannerisms cause genuine humour; Miss Kathleen Magee exhibits much skill as the Hon. Mrs. Sands; Geoffrey Langdon finds an exceptionally good representative in Mr. Wilson Summers; and Mr. Cyril Grier makes a dignified and impressive Colonel Mills; very amusing is Mr. Percy Brown as Thomas; and Mr. Victor Raymond causes many a hearty laugh as Charles; Mr. Arthur Lowry's interpretation of Arthur Bellairs is a meritorious one.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties. — Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will. H. Emerson.—Topping the bill here is Mr. Leo Carle, who impersonates no less than twelve different characters in a one-man drama, The Betrayed Professor; he also plays the violin well, and his turn catches on immensely. Kerr and Shaw dispense harmony, vocal and instrumental, and their patter is good; Max Merlin is a contortionist of more than average ability, and is loudly applauded; Tony Iveson is a clever pianist, and his funny business is highly appreciated; the Reays as silver chain acrobats give a capital display of muscular feats, both neat and graceful; Arthur St. Clair sings songs which are invariably to the taste of the audience; Melvin and Max are a couple of Canadian dancers who fix the attention of the house with their skill; and some excellent pictures by the Loyal Dominion Company are vastly enjoyed.

CHORLEY (Lancs.).—Grand Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. G. T. Santé; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Santé.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company in A Royal Divorce is here this week on a return visit, and on Monday opened to a capital house. Napoleon is undertaken by Mr. Keith Fraser in an admirable manner; Talleyrand being capitally rendered by Mr. Percy H. Vernon; Mr. Stanley Harrison as the Marquis de Beaumont is decidedly good; Mr. Ernest Plumpton excellently presents General Augereau; Mr. G. Hudson is conspicuous as Grimaud; and Bob Royal is well sustained by Mr. J. O'Brien. Miss Margaret Watson gives a fine exposition of the Empress Josephine, winning entire approbation; Miss Maude Lacy delightfully renders Stephanie de Beauharnais; Miss W. Tempest cleverly interprets Marie Louise; and Miss Marie Johns is capital as Jean la Terreure. The scenery and dressing is excellent.

COLCHESTER. — Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Colchester Hippodrome Co.; Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The holiday bill is headed by the American Elephant Trio, a capital animal turn; Harry Tate's company in Fishing is thoroughly enjoyed, being intensely droll; the Woolhafs, comedy duo, are bright and versatile; Sergeant Mumford, the soldier on the slack wire, is well received; Arthur Pier, character vocalist, does well with his Dream song-scena; and Nora Noble sings and dances satisfactorily. Pathé films form a big item, and the coloured numbers are specially effective.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—A large audience assembled on Monday to witness Mr. Douglas Bruce's company in The Girl Who Lost Her Character. As the Rev. R. Everton Mr. E. M'Lean appears to great advantage; as Jack England Mr. Harold McCartney scores a success; Mr. R. Ferris as Captain Geoffrey Caversham has a difficult and unpopular part, which he sustains with ease and effect; Mr. G. Mitchell gives a good account of himself as James Sutten; whilst Mr. A. Bowerman is clever as Detective Weathersby. In the title rôle Miss Violet Lawson is most effective, and the part of Marion Franklyn is well sustained by Miss Lydia Mannington; Rose Seymour is ably played by Miss S. Hare. The comedy parts are well looked after by Mr. G. H. Asquin, and Miss Mary Poulton as Dick Punch and Isabella Jones respectively.

COVENTRY.—The Empire Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—A capital programme has been arranged here for the holiday week, the chief attraction being the appearance of the world renowned Troba, the great juggler, who performs tricks great and small. Friend and Downing are smart comedians, their songs and patter being particularly taking; Natalie and Diana are clever gymnasts, and do a graceful act on the trapeze; Pasquali Brothers prove equilibrists of extraordinary ability; Milner and Storey are a capable comedy duo; Johnny Walker gives an amusing account of his troubles on the football field; Joe Hunter is a comedian; the Bioscope pictures conclude.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wright.—The great attraction here this week is La Milo. She poses as Venus di Milo, the famous world-known statue Omnia Vanitas, Diana, Una and the Lion, Ceres, the Goddess of Harvest, and Lady Godiva. Rapturous applause greets each representation. The other artists who appear during the evening are Mr. G. W. Hunter, comedienne and dancer; Ralph and Nellie Howard, in a musical comedy act; Signor and Mme. Borelli, a pair of very clever acrobats; the Onyx Duo, lady dancers and quick-change artists; the Brothers Zenary, acrobats; Leo Trainor, comedian; and a local trio the Three Spires.

CREWE.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. Howard.—Messrs. Fred J. Little and Fred Darcy's pantomime The Forty Thieves was produced here on Monday. The scenery has been specially painted for the production, and the dresses are beautiful and costly. The principal parts are in capable hands, and the piece goes with a merry swing right through. As Ali Baba Mr. Wal Croft is a success, his various songs meeting with deserved applause; Mr. Reg Ewen as Cogia Baba gives a very creditable performance; Mr. Ted Wootten is well suited as Cassim Baba; Messrs. Sandy and Carl are clever knockabouts; and Mr. Charles Weldon is good as Mustapha. The leading boy is in the capable hands of Miss Mary Poulton, and she makes a handsome and dashing Ganem; Mlle. Carita is a sweet Morgiana, and sings excellently; and Miss Isa Bell is a commanding Abdallah; Misses F. Fox and N. Wilton appear successfully as Hajam and Hoolam respectively; the Esmeralda Girls are clever dancers; and specialities are given by the Five X-Rays and the Cavallotti Bros.

CROYDON.—Hippodrome and Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. Harry Osmond.—Animated pictures exhibited here are well received.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—The graphic sketch A Daughter of Pleasure affords scope for splendid acting by Mr. J. G. Grahame, jun., and Miss Zerlina Harrington; Fred Earle, comedian, is always a welcome Croydon favourite; Kurkamp, the singing conductor, deserves congratulations for his novel turn; Eugenie Fougere, comedienne and dancer has plenty of go; Olga Dore is an operatic actress with a fine voice; Fred Hastings is a capital descriptive comedian; and others who make up a palatable bill of fare are Webb and Branston, operatic duettists; Edie Anderson, comedienne; Ernest Shand, versatile comedian; and Hammond and Wyat. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope is a success.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—This house of entertainment is closed this week, but re-opens on Saturday, the 26th inst., with the pantomime Aladdin, which has been arranged by Mr. Arthur Carlton.

Palace.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—An excellent programme here this week is headed by Ted Karno and company in the pantomimical absurdity The Dinner Hour, which keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter. The Rangers, described as masters of the wheel, are to be complimented on a smart and neatly finished performance; Chas. Craston fully sustains his designation as a quaint comedian, and is cordially received; Harry Friskey, a unique American comedy juggler, is both clever and diverting; the Keiths, instrumentalists and xylophonists, are heartily appreciated; Maggie Rimmer is a dainty comedienne and dancer, and possessed of a charming style; and Ess and Hoey provide some very clever dancing on skates and skis. The Bioscope contributes an exciting film to a capital holiday entertainment.

DUBLIN.—Queen's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. S. Pearce; Manager, Mr. E. Hereford Jones.—The pictures are of an attractive nature, and include the pantomime Blue Beard, For a Crown, Shadow of a Crime, &c. The variety artists appearing are the Ellarslies, in their amusing episode The Taxi Man; Handell, in a clever facial portraiture act; and Bob Pearson, humorist and guide. Good houses are the rule.

Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager's Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Gustave Fasola, the famous Indian magician, forms the star turn here this week, and his mystifying performance is cheered to the echo nightly. Henry Coutts and company appear in an ingeniously worked sketch entitled Outflanked, which is well appreciated; Harry Grey, the Australian Nugget, fully sustains his reputation as a comedian; an excellent turn is provided by Sybil Lester, who renders her songs with taste and expression; Nellie Coleman, female comedian, earns a large share of applause; and Percy Honri contributes selections on the concertina to the evident pleasure of the audience. Reilly and Templeton, "the Dutch girl and the dame," create uproarious laughter; and Olive Armadale, a dainty soubrette, meets with the hearty approval of the house. The Empire pictures are thoroughly enjoyed.

Tivoli.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The top of the bill here is occupied by Mr. H. Nuttall's company in an excellent sketch entitled The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, which meets with a gratifying reception; Lee and Kingston, a smart pair of duologue artists, cause continuous merriment; and the choice singing of the Sisters Draycott evokes loud applause. A distinct hit has been made by Phern and Phern in their musical speciality act; Rozel scores successfully in his sensational gymnastic performance; Satani introduces a new and novel scena of mystery, which is well received; George Hall is a capital comedian and whistler; Recco, burlesque acrobat, supplies an amusing turn; and Maude Clifton, a pleasing comedienne, and the Bioscope, depicting the Water Carrier, complete the programme.

Round Room Rotunda.—The Irish Animated Company reopened for the Christmas season here on Tuesday last, when a capital entertainment was submitted and heartily enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The pictures include many novelties, and the variety programme is well supported by Miss Agnes Meehan, soprano vocalist; Mr. William Grant and Mr. Patrick O'Shea (tenor). The Grandpierre Orchestra performs musical selections.

World's Fair and Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The capital programme submitted here this week includes Professor Green and Son, with their Punch and Judy show; Miss Vera Winston, ballad vocalist; Jack Danby, society conjurer; the Zingaras, comedy entertainers; and the cinematograph showing the pantomime Beauty and the Beast.

DUDLEY. — Empire. — Managing-Director, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. H. Waters.—Heading the bill is Tom Watts, in a most interesting Indian scena entitled Black Eagle; Mona Vivian is a remarkably clever young artist, who gives promise of a future; the Gondolier Singers render some good glees in fine style; some exceptionally clever clog-dancing was performed by an unnamed artist; Ruhart fetched the house down with his comical and decidedly original productions. Other good turns billed were the Seymons, jugglers; Don Tressler, comedian; Edie and Amie, in The Newspaper Kiosk; and Vera Guyon, comedienne; while the Empire pictures preserve popularity.

DUNDEE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company is appearing here this week. The performance of The Mikado was hugely appreciated on Monday evening by a packed house. Mr. Fred Billington's Pooh-Bah seems to improve with age, his inimitable singing and humour carrying his audience with him; Mr. Charles R. Walenn infused a great deal of life into the part of Ko-Ko, and sang his songs in delightful fashion; Mr. Leicester Tunke as the Mikado was deservedly encored for his great song; Mr. Stafford Moss was an excellent Nanki-Poo, his "A wandering minstrel I" eliciting a warm encore; Miss Clara Dow was a delightful Yum-Yum, her acting and singing being excellent; Miss Beatrice Meredith was an attractive Pitti-Sing, and Peep-Bo was cleverly undertaken by Miss Mabel Graham; Miss Ethel Morrison was a most impressive Katisha, scoring a notable success in "The hour of gladness." On Tuesday H.M.S. Pinafore was played, preceded by Cellier's After All. The Yeomen of the Guard and The Gondoliers are also billed.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Mr. Jack Haddon's pantomime Jack and the Beanstalk began its second week's engagement here on Monday. Several new songs and dances have been introduced, and the comedians have invented new patter. It is altogether a delightfully bright production. Misses Alma Obrey and Bessie Knight as Jack and Dora respectively sing and dance in charming fashion, while Mr. Bob Baxter as Silly Billy and Messrs. O'Malley and Brown as Pip and Pap are excruciatingly funny fellows. In addition to the pantomime Reg Bolton, in a clever scena, The Editor's Imp, and Arthur Woodville, a rattling good comedian, also contribute enjoyable items.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Licensee and Manager, Mr. W. E. Potts; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—Mrs. Lillie Williams's second pantomime this season, Dick Whittington, was produced here on Monday evening, a full notice of which appears in another column.

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—The Prince Edward Pictures are proving a source of great enjoyment to large crowds here. Amongst those exhibited are Leah the Forsaken, a very fine film depicting a romance of Jewish life, An Evening in the Camp, The Wages of Sin, The Pirate's Gold, Christmas Comes but Once a Year, What Happened to Jones, &c. The varieties include Leslie Clements, a smart coon vocalist, and Bob Sloan, an entertaining comedian.

Newman's Picture Palace.—Mr. Fred Newman's programme of pictures includes The Heroine, a very fine American film, The Smoked Husband, Man and Woman, Saved by Santa Claus, the Pirate in the Harem, Polly's Excursions, Poor Old Cabby, &c. Ondra, a funny juggler and triple bar comedian, contributes a very clever turn.

EASTBOURNE.—Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; District-Manager, Mr. George Egbert; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—At the head of the bill are the Four Delawares, who are clever sand dancers and comedians on a billiard table; Mr. Ronald Bayne and Miss Evelyn Hope do able work in their costume scena An Emperor's Divorce; Mr. Joe Mac amuses as a pattering comedian; Leaton and Lane claim a good share of applause for their comedy duologue; Miss Ethel Dove is a pleasing vivacious dancer and comedienne; Cadwell and Verne contribute funny and popular work, Early Closing Day; Miss May Day sings and dances well, and new pictures are shown.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—George Lawrence, light comedian and actor-vocalist, receives a hearty welcome, and is encored; Dan Merrett gives a clever drumming exhibition; Cara Magda submits a finished gymnastic performance; A Ba-Be's Picture Postcard Album is quite unique; Herbert and Linden are accomplished comedians and dancers; Mack Olive, assisted by Miss Daisy Baldry, pleases in a whistling scena; George Aire, character vocalist, is funny; Ritchie Hearn presents The Village Fire Brigade, which proves attractive; and A Tramp's Daughter is depicted on the Bioscope.

EXETER. — New Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—The management have made a special effort to provide the public with the very best talent this Christmas week, and there is no doubt from the patronage they are receiving that they have succeeded. Fred Elton opens in a scena entitled On Board an Ocean Liner, rendering two good songs; R. A. Speedwell, the wizard painter, gives a fine exhibition of portrait painting; Cyrus Dare proves himself a versatile performer in a specially written song and monologue entitled "Old Father Christmas." John Warren presents "The Magic Carpet," a musical military mystery, invented, written, and introduced by himself, and entirely mystifies the audience. He is ably assisted by Miss Mollie Wynter, whose whistling is loudly applauded. Ferris and May cause roars of laughter by their clever acting of a musical comedy spasm, Two's Company, Three's ——? A wonderful and brilliant musical act is that by Edward Crosland's Melody Makers. Their voices are good, while their dancing and pianoforte playing are decidedly clever. The Hippodrome pictures complete, while the orchestra is under the able direction of Mr. H. D. Booth.

GATESHEAD. — King's Theatre. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Local Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Fred Karno's company in The Dandy Thieves is a popular star turn here; the Five Musical Tritons are also well appreciated; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden in clever impersonations make a "hit"; Wilfred Burnard in a similar line pays a return visit; Gertrude Moore is a distinctly clever dancer; the Sisters Batson, duettists and dancers, provide an enjoyable turn; and the usual pictures complete an attractive bill.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, M. Ernest Dixon.—Mr. John Gerant's company in At Duty's Call occupies the stage here. The story of Gordon and Khartoum is efficiently told by clever actors and actresses, Mr. Gerant ably sustaining the rôle of Harold Allison, whilst Mr. Ernest St. John makes up capitally as Gordon.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphreys.—Cinderella has now got into working order, and there are many indications that the pantomime is going to have a very successful run. Admirably acted throughout, the charming scenery, effective staging, and elaborate dressing all go to make a most enjoyable performance. Miss Iris Hoey as Cinderella easily succeeds in gaining the appreciation of the audience. Her style is bright and refined, and she possesses a good voice. Miss Violet Loraine as Prince of Floravia is very attractive, and plays the part in a graceful and becoming manner. The William Buttons of Mr. George Robey is just in that able comedian's particular line, and he invests the part with many laughter-producing aspects. Another diverting performance must be credited to Mr. Harry Dent as Baron Beauregarde, who is responsible for some genuinely funny business. Mr. Willie Garvey also scores as Mrs. Kilkenny, whose antics cause endless amusement; Dandini secures a talented exponent in Miss Meg Hamylton, who sings and dances delightfully; Miss Pankie Kilkenny and Miss Hardie Kilkenny are divertingly portrayed by the Brothers Obo; Miss Edith Kirkwood sings her numbers sweetly as the good fairy Flora; and Mr. Vernon Booth does well as Aconite.

King's Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—The holiday attraction here is Messrs. George Edwardes and Chas. Frohman's company in A Waltz Dream, for the first time out of London. The engagement is for four weeks, and an auspicious start was made on Monday, when a well-filled house received the new operetta with enthusiasm. Mr. Robert Evett appears in his original part of Lieut. Niki, and in acting and singing he proves an ideal representative. All his songs were encored, the melodious waltz in particular. Miss May de Sousa is the Franzi, and very fetching she looks as the conductor of the ladies' band. She gives a bright and animated rendering of the part, and at once became a favourite. Miss Ethel Cadman as Princess Helene acts the character with charming grace and dignity, while her singing is a vocal treat of the first order. Miss Amy Augarde infuses a touch of humour into the part of Friedrike, and her rich voice proves of great value in the musical numbers. Mr. Eric Thorne again gives a study of elderly eccentricity as Joachim XIII., and his humorous efforts are ably seconded by Mr. Leslie Holland as Count Lothar; Mr. Willie Warde, jun., is very quaint as the waiter, Max Bauer; Miss May Marton, Miss Kathleen Hayes, and Miss Peggy Lorraine as three members of the ladies' orchestra take well in their songs and dances; Mr. J. Hamilton is well suited as Lieut. Montschi; and other parts are ably filled by Miss Mary Hamilton, and Messrs. Langford Kirby and Albert Kavanagh. There is an excellent chorus and augmented orchestra under the direction of Mr. Hamish MacCunn, and the ladies' orchestra on the stage is an attractive feature. The operetta is beautifully staged, and the dresses are exquisite.

Royalty, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Carpenter.—The management here have secured exceedingly bright and attractive fare for the Christmas and New Year holidays in the beautiful production of Butterflies from the Apollo Theatre. As on the play's first visit to Glasgow, Mr. Louis Bradfield is master of the revels, and his Puck has lost none of its grace and lightness of touch; Miss Georgie Corlass is the Rhodanthe, and is highly successful in investing the rôle with the requisite dash and witchery; the Podmore of the cast is Mr. Blake Adams, whose talent for character-acting finds ample scope in the part; Max Rladore, the professional vocalist, is played most fittingly by Mr. Richard Green; Mr. W. Spray extracts a deal of humour from the part of the Chauffeur; Mrs. Podmore and her daughter are admirably represented by Miss Stella St. Audrie and Miss Constance Clive. The dreamy butterfly dance in the third act by Miss Phyllis Monkman is an artistic triumph; the lovers, Peter and Gilbert, have smart and handsome exponents in Mr. Roy Sydney and Mr. Arthur Hyde; Lelage and Myra are charmingly played by Miss Alice Sands and Miss Elsie Aston; the parts of Salome (Miss Gilbert) and Paul (Mr. Alfred Selby) being also well filled. The chorus and orchestra are under the direction of the composer, Mr. J. A. Robertson.

Grand.—Proprietor, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—A visit to Cinderella at once confirms all the good things written about it, and that it should have proved itself such a success at this early date speaks volumes for its merits. In selecting such a capable artist as Miss Queenie Finnis for the wearer of the glass slipper great taste has been displayed. She sings admirably, her "Shadowland" being quite a feature.

As Prince Casimir Miss Violet Halls is extremely popular, and gets through her work in a smiling, breezy fashion which quite enlivens the part; Dandini, usually taken up by a member of the fairer sex, is this season in the hands of Mr. Whit Cunliffe, who makes the very most of the part and is well received. His songs are good, and to each is attached a chorus in which his audiences readily join. One of the successes of the pantomime is Mr. Geo. French as Hercules. This droll little comedian has thoroughly worked up the part, and his numerous appearances are greeted with roars of laughter. Much of the fun is also attributable to Mr. Tom Conway as Tiny, and in his conjoined work with Mr. French nothing more amusing could be desired. The parts of the ugly daughters, Araminta and Elvira, are excellently carried through by Miss Kate Walbran and Miss Nellie Cozens respectively. Favourable mention must be made of Mr. Barry Lupino as Capers. His all-round work is capital and his dancing clever, while his tumbling is far above the average. He is a pronounced favourite. Miss Nellie Wigley as the Duke of Whistbridge is also a capable little artist, and is well received. Miss Olive Tempest appears with much acceptance as the Fairy Godmother, and her singing is enjoyed; while as the Dream Fairy Miss Edie Doherty does well. Several excellent dances are given by the Lottie Stone troupe. The pantomime besides being comical is spectacular. The ballet is smart and neat, the singing of the chorus is well balanced, and the stage management is excellent.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Diccory Dok continues its merry run, and the patronage bestowed on it predicts a most successful season. Than Miss Flora Cromer it would be difficult to secure a more spirited little artist. As Dick she is admirable, and her voice helps to make her an immense favourite. Those pantomime idols of last season, Miss Edith Haley and Miss Maggie Fraser, appear this year again, this time as Ronnie and Pansy. Encores are lustily called for at their each appearance. The pantomime would scarcely be complete without Miss Ella Retford. She appears as Winnie, and her singing and dancing cannot be too highly praised. As Matt and Jennie the Misses Bartholomew are in great demand. They are untiring in their efforts to please, and are rewarded with success. Messrs. Walker and Lake (Peter Birmingham and Harry Gribben) are not strangers, and in their individual parts are excellent. Their previous successes have made them all the rage, and the calls made upon them are numerous, as the patrons of the Princess's are not slow to recognise talent. As Tibbs, Mr. Ainslie Burton does all his part allows him to. He is a good comedian and a favourite. Mr. Walter Dale is allotted the part of Sparkle, and gets through his work well. As the Fairies, Discord and Sweetbriar, Miss May Beatrice and Miss Ivy Proudfoot are capital. The latter has a fine voice, and more opportunity might be given her. The ballet is strong and sings well, and the dancing neat and smart. The stage-management is voted excellent. Nothing but praise can be given the pantomime, which is laughable and thoroughly enjoyable.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Fredk. Melville's striking play Married to the Wrong Man appeals strongly to the public taste. It is an excellent drama, cleverly written, which keeps the audience in a state of expectancy. The interest of the play centres upon the misfortunes which are heaped upon Jack Gladwin, a part that is admirably interpreted by Mr. Oswald Gray, who plays with vigour and manliness. A powerful performance comes from Miss Gertrude Boswell, who exhibits great ability in her reading of Ruth, the dumb girl. At all times Miss Boswell holds her audience, and in the chief scenes rises to the occasion with great force. Mr. H. Lane Bayliff finely depict the evil character of Captain Deering, and Mr. Arthur T. Lennard gives a very creditable impersonation of Sergeant Manners; while Miss Rosalie Notrello is seen to great advantage as Nurse Manners. Most of the humorous element is supplied by Mr. Sid Claydon as Timothy Clinker, who causes a good deal of mirth during the evening, being laudably aided by Miss May Davis as Dolly Fritters. Other parts are in good hands, and the play is staged in a most praiseworthy manner. The new drama is paying its first visit to Glasgow, and will be here over the Christmas and New Year holidays.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—This week Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is here in A Warning to Women. The leading part is taken by Miss Blanche St. Albans, who as Moira Kennion contributes a very clever performance; Miss Edith Rutland as the cripple Myles O'Moore acts with much feeling and pathos; and the part of Molly O'Moore, the wise woman, is powerfully played by Miss Ellen Beverley. Mr. William Vane gives an excellent rendering of Shaun, a wandering minstrel; the Squire Kennion of Mr. Henry Rutland is a well-acted character; Mr. W. Palliser Acock infuses much life into the part of the Frenchman Ferdinand de Joules; Mr. Harry C. Robinson as the stranger, Dr. Dread, Mr. Chas. O'Connor as Fergus McNaughton, and Mr. Leicester Jackson as Lord Eversleigh also ably sustain their respective rôles. Mr. Oscar Power as Mick McQuade also deserves a special word of praise. The play is well staged.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Van Biene, the actor-musician, is this week's principal attraction, and submits his one-act playlet entitled The Master Musician. Mr. Van Biene treated the part in an artistic manner, and at the finish was accorded an ovation. Able support is given by Miss Mary Mannering. Another interesting item is that provided by Miss Henriquette Maude, a New Zealand travelling girl, who is working her way round the world alone. Miss Maude relates in thrilling fashion her many experiences on the journey. The Delevines contribute an amusing musical turn, introducing their wonderful Scarecrow dance; and Fred Edwardes and company's sketch, The Kleptomaniacs, is received with outbursts of laughter. The remaining items of a good programme include Geo. Rae, Scotch comedian and eccentric dancer; the Channings, vocalists and instrumentalists; Cline and Clark, black and white comedy artists; May Edouin, in a musical comedy act; Alf Chester, comedian; and the Bioscope, with a series of interesting pictures.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—That popular comedy couple Jack and Evelyn head the bill here, and are responsible for a great many hearty laughs, their business being extremely clever; Lulu Evans, long associated with the D'Oyly Carte Répertoire Company, sings several characteristic songs; the quick-change sketch by Addie Dorina is cleverly worked, and the half dozen types of character she impersonates with much ability; a novelty acrobatic and ball juggling turn of great merit is given by the Four Athos; Blake and Amber are as clever a comedy duo as America has sent us for a long time, and their burlesque of grand opera is screamingly funny; Les Rubens in The Fortune Tellers combine smart humour with clever vocalisation; Rich. Taylor takes well as a whistling ventriloquist; and a neat juggling turn is that of Gicardo, the youthful juggler.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Councillor E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Mooney and Holbein top the bill this week, and present a laughable sketch called Oysters, a Shilling a Bucket; the Four Royal Scots are accomplished ladies, who submit a variety of Scottish airs, both vocal and instrumental, and perform a Scotch reel in true Highland style; W. L. Murray possesses immense muscular development, and poses as a modern athlete and a Roman gladiator; Jack Lane is an amusing artist, who gives several musical items, including two tunes on the piano and a song at the same time; Leotard Brothers are clever pierrots and acrobats, who do wonderful balancing and hat-throwing feats; Stella Dell gives well-rendered songs in a pleasing voice; S. Bedford and company elicit roars of laughter with their sketch called The Second Mrs. Chester; the Lorrisons are an amusing couple who keep the fun going merrily; the Sisters Brookland are graceful dancers and tuneful singers. The Bioscope winds up an excellent entertainment.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—A very good entertainment is provided here this week, the chief attraction being the Hiatts, who give a musical comedy which is highly appreciated by the audience; Will Goodwin is well received, his songs being rendered in his usual excellent style; his daughter Gladys, who is only fourteen years of age, sings a couple of songs very cleverly; George Prince gives several of his funny ditties, which are received with hearty applause; the Prince Milner Trio take very well in a distinctly original acrobatic hoop and wire-walking display; Barney Noble, "the man in naval uniform," makes a capital impression; Nellie Martell, a smart comedienne, and the New York Nippers are also pleasing items. The Palacescope shows A Wife's Honour and other up-to-date pictures, and comes in for a good share of applause.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Fred Karno's sketch The Bailiff tops the bill this week, with Albert Bruno in the chief rôle, and a well-merited reception was accorded. Able support is given by Kate Forster, Julia Bassett, Lydia Weber, H. Soutar, Buchanan Wake, &c. Ross and Lewis, the Yankee Doodle Duo, are really amusing; Conway and Leland, the one-legged cyclists give a merry and clever display; Bertha Winder, the champion clog-dancer, does some neat and tricky steps; Pete and Minnie Lee are among friends in Glasgow, and their little comedy The Scotchman's Visit to London is smart; Austin Rudd has some clever humorous songs, and sings them well; some quaint long-boot dancing is contributed by the Three Cape Girls; and the Brothers Bright as athletes are well up to their work. The picture song this week, "She was a grand old lady," is effectively rendered by Mr. Hugh Barclay.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—There is a good all-round entertaining programme here this week, and one of the chief items is the novelty gymnastic performance of Noel, who exhibits wonderful skill; Elsie Gray proves highly acceptable; Klean and Klever are most amusing and excel as dancers; and the Bioscope, with a pleasing series of pictures, is much enjoyed.

GLOUCESTER. — PALACE.—Owners, Messrs. Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—The Ten Courtiers, including Mr. Hilton St. Just in a musical mélange, founded on The Bohemian Girl, top the bill. A popular turn is that of Amy Anderson and company in The Banana Queen, which goes with a roar; Doody and Wright, with new business, are heartily welcomed, and the Zaid Trio do well; Frank Street patters and sings in smart style; the Spreos, with The Rustic and the Maid, are very successful, and Miss May Audrey wins applause for her popular songs. The Palacescope has a good film, The Making of a Newspaper.

KING'S HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Poole's Theatres, Ltd.—So successful have the animated pictures and illustrated songs become since their inception here that matinées are also now announced.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—A good company is in evidence here this week. The Three Orros in their wonderful herculean performance on the silver chains have found much favour; Harry Hasto is a lively comedian; La Danseuse, in a dancing scena, Santa Claus, pleases greatly; Boyd and Gilfain in their burletta Sunny Spain score heavily; the original Roxbys in their unique speciality, artists on three legs, are a decidedly good turn; Charles Matteson, comedian, is extremely popular, and Cole and Rags, who make their first appearance at this hall, prove very clever juggling eccentrics.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Owing to the great success of Mr. Horace Stanley and his company in the 10.30 Down Express they were retained for the first four nights of this week.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Gilbert.—Excellent turns are being presented here this week. The Aeroplanes are creating a sensation by their wonderful aerial performance; the Four Scoreys appear in an exceptionally smart and unique musical act; Dan Noble is a funny comedian; Marie York is a charming comedienne; the Royal Ohmye give a daring equestrian performance; Roseltha is a charming dancer; Wragg and Wragg give a first-rate military display; the Franko Midgets delight everyone with their legerdemain; Doodles introduces two very funny absurdities which create roars of laughter from start to finish.

THE GEM.—Proprietors, the Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.; Resident-Director, Mr. C. B. Cochran; Manager, Mr. Sidney Lawrence.—An exceptionally fine set of pictures are being shown here this week. A very picturesque film illustrating Victoria Falls takes first place. The illustrated song "Dreamland" is very popular.

HALIFAX. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Hardie and Von Leer's company are at the Royal this week with The Sailor's Wedding. Mr. C. W. Standing's Gordon Dr. e stands out as a fine piece of work; Sir Victor Lascelles, as played by Mr. Cecil Klein, is another good impersonation; Mr. H. Taylor is a good Ferici; Mr. F. F. Smiles is excellent in the difficult part of Giacomo; Miss Laura Hansen is in turn strong and sympathetic, and makes an ideal Countess Bellini; Miss Mary Pemberton is a graceful and winning Mary; Lenore de Gresac is an excellent character, well played by Miss Winifred Pearson. All the smaller parts are exceedingly well played. The drama is beautifully staged.

THE PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—The Carmos introduce some herculean juggling and balancing feats that are new, clever, and pretty; Dora Poole and Fred Maguire are most successful in a comedy duo. They both possess good voices. The Lizette Troupe are four ladies who do some marvellous tumbling, and gain unstinted applause; the Milton Trio are clever paper tearers and excellent dancers; Chas. Lewis is a clever ventriloquist on novel lines; H. O. Lovell and company are successful in a well-acted sketch, Mam'selle Pom Pom; Mollie Augarde, a good singer, meets with applause; Marion Armitage is a quaint comedienne; Raymond's Bio-tableaux show some excellent pictures.

HAMILTON, N.B.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. R. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. René Clayton.—Miss Lillie Williams's pantomime, Robinson Crusoe and His Man Friday, is being produced here twice nightly, and judging from Monday night's reception is proving a big favourite. Miss Amy Randolph is a dashing exponent of the title-rôle; and Miss May Carter sings and acts prettily as Polly Perkins, Robin's sweetheart. Mr. Fred Davis simply revels in devilry as Will Atkins; and Mr. G. Telly Dillsen proves a great mirth-maker as Mrs. Crusoe. The singing of Miss Dora Lindsay is excellent, as is also her comedy work with Bo'sun Bill (Mr. Brete Harte). Specialities are the Ten Dixie Girls, Justin and Mantell, the Sisters Selwyn, the Sisters Poole Pelham, and Lindsay and Harte. The scenery and dresses are excellent, and the whole show goes with a fine swing from beginning to end.

HANLEY. — GRAND. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—A good bill this week includes Barton and Ashley, in a new farcical creation, Adam the Second, which is most amusing; Matthews and Cowper appear in a cleverly-played sketch entitled The Tale of a New Laid Egg; the Lester Bros. are smart dancers; Lyster and Cooke, xylophone and bell players of decided merit; Bonnetti and Corrie, eccentric jugglers; Clarice Clarke, character vocalist; the Pattersons, in a brilliant bar act; Bob Hamilton, a Scotch comedian of distinct skill; and Raymond's Pictures, showing Louis XVII.'s Martyrdom.

KING'S.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Kennedy.—The Ediscope and Barnum's Electric Pictures continue to attract packed houses twice nightly. This week's programme is well selected, including as it does A Gipsy's Love, The Poacher's Daughter, The American Fireman, The Nephew's Trouble, A Pinch of Snuff, The Girl and the Outlaw, &c. Miss Vesta Nixon is a charming dancer and soubrette, and her efforts are much enjoyed.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—Messrs. Murray King and Clark's company is here with Toddles. Mr. Murray King as Toddles was a host in himself, and had able assistance from Mr. Alick Chumley as Freddy Gunner; Mr. C. Douglas Cox did what was required as Haslitt; Mr. Ardene Linden was excellent as Mr. Joblyn; Miss Evelyn Shelley was quite at home in the rôle of Mrs. Joblyn; Miss Naomi Neilson made a handsome and dignified Lady Dover, and Miss Ada Champion was well suited as the Countess de Chambray.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. Carter; General-Manager, Mr. F. D. Sunderland; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Parker.—A new dramatic film is shown here, The Bellringer's Daughter; the Man in Overalls and the Sausage Stealers are comic; Mr. R. Abbot presents his canine marvel, Buxam.

HASTINGS.—PUBLIC HALL.—Sub-Lessees, The People's Picture Palace Company; Managing-Director, Mr. F. R. Griffiths; Local Manager, Mr. H. W. James.—The Christmas programme includes some excellent films, among them being The Wreckers, or Pirates of the Ocean, For His Child's Sake, and A Bird of Freedom. Mr. Alf. Aubyn in character specialities provides an agreeable interlude.

PIER PAVILION. — General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—During the early part of the week the entertainment consisted entirely of special subjects shown by Walter Payne's Bio-photoscope. On Boxing Day Mr. J. D. Hunter's thirtieth annual Christmas pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, was to be produced.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—An excellent and varied entertainment here is opened by Miss Carlotta Lunn, an attractive vocalist; George Gulliver is an original and clever ventriloquist; as instrumentalists on bells, &c., the Three Transfields, lady musicians, quite excel; a very amusing musical duologue is introduced by Frank Belford and Ethel Mars; Harry Bent shows great ability as a mimic and humorist; some graceful dancing and skilful juggling is shown by the Spanish Goldini Troupe, the four artists being singularly smart.

HULL.—THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Mr. Alfred Graham's Own Juveniles are making a welcome reappearance; Lena Brunton cleverly impersonates other artists. Other good turns include Fox and Melville; Bros. Lawrence; Frank Bernard and Co., who stay a second week; Sterling and Cashen, in a novelty act, The New Army; and W. B. Raby.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—The Paul Hessie trio are the principal turn in a smart wire act; following close in popularity is the engagement of F. A. Martell, who dances on his finger tips and balances himself on one finger. Other artists who take well include Billy Burns, the Pearlmans, Chas. Call (in some nice songs), W. E. Hilton, and Lucy Gillet.

THE CIRCUS.—Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Emerson.—Animated pictures are drawing record houses.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—This week's programme is notable for a very realistic snake dance by Miss Irma Lorraine, who includes in her répertoire some charming representations of living pictures. Other turns are provided by Miss Nellie Walton, vocalist; Harold Heath, comedian; Luis Hardt, the "boy Samson"; Douglas and Gordon, singers and dancers; the Weimars, musical comedians; the Northcotes, duettists; and the Five Whiteleys, in a clever acrobatic act. There are some very interesting pictures on the Bioscope.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Locke.—Miss Ellen Snow's company is here with Why Men Love Women. Mr. O. Rogers gives a manly portrayal of the part of Gerald Feilding; Mr. L. Gadsen is a powerful Capt. Staniloff; and to the part of Lieut. Tommy Fitzherbert full justice is done by Mr. Slaughter; Mr. Griffen making an ideal Maharajah; Mr. Arthur Radford gives a good account of Chundra Singh; Mr. Harwood Roberts is an excellent Orlando; and Miss Ellen Snow is simply charming as Violet Livingstone; Miss Florence Nelson is also successful in the part of Muriel.

KIRKCALDY.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. G. W. Walker.—Dr. Walford Bodie is again with us, and is attracting huge audiences nightly, who marvel at his wonderful work; the Garden Troupe of international dancers eclipse anything we have seen here in that particular line; and turns are provided by Fred Collins, Scotch comedian, Dolly Robson, Sisters Raro, and Cora Kent, comediennes, and Dover and Dene, sketch artists. The pictures conclude the entertainment.

PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. G. W. Walker.—Marquis and Truly top the bill here with a clever song, dance, and acrobatic turn; Mr. Wallace Muirhead, illustrated song singer, is retained another week owing to success; and Mr. Dan Fraser, Scotch comedian, is making a big hit. Kate Gourlay, comedienne and dancer, is also successful. The pictures are very good.

LANCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. C. Howitt.—Closed until Saturday.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Charcot is at the head of the bill here this week, and fairly baffles his audiences; Hewson's Æolians supply a pleasing dancing act; and Ingram and Irving appear with much success in a sketch, The New Office Boy. Jack Rae is a smart gymnast; Siddar and Dunbar are well received in a musical turn; and Gillin, ventriloquist, is very good. Through Millie Anderson being indisposed, her place was taken by Miss Alice Nuttall, who has a sweet voice, and knows how to use it. She has a flattering reception. The Hippograph is still an attraction.

LEICESTER.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—Mr. Fred Karno's company of comedians, headed by Harry Weldon as Stiffy, in The Football Match, are popular and mirth-provoking; Mr. Henry Carlton and company appear in the musical absurdity The Window Cleaner. Mr. Carlton as Billy Shine scores a conspicuous success. The Dumond Trio are smart vocalists and instrumentalists, and are seen and heard to great advantage in their musical mélange, Parisian Street Singers; Victor Newman is remarkably clever in his impersonations from Shakespeare and Dickens; the Four Figaros are good in Ten Minutes on the Continent, a most interesting turn; Arthur Astill is a first-rate whistling mimic; Maude Vera, a young and dainty comedienne and speciality dancer, maintains her popularity; Frank Sylvo is a quaint comedian and juggler, who is both funny and clever; and the Bioscope throws a clear picture of Italian cavalry in feats of horsemanship.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—The principal attraction here is Mr. J. Wright Aitken and company, in the domestic sketch The Battle of Life, in which Mr. J. Wright Aitken is conspicuously successful as John Melville, being admirably supported by Miss Laura A. Pardy, Miss Una Lindley, and Mr. Geo. Stanley. The sketch, which is being presented for the first time locally, is having a gratifying reception; Venturini bewilders the audience with his illusion, entitled "D-a-o-s"; and other thoroughly enjoyable turns are supplied by Diamond and Hart, comedians and dancers; Vere and Royce, comedy vaudeville artists; Chas. Lilburn, a man with many funniosities; Gladys Whitton, vocalist; Ray Royal, comedienne; and Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope, showing the seasonable subject The Orphan's Christmas, and Retribution, two popular films.

EMPIRE.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Craig.—Animated pictures are shown here in a style which leaves nothing to be desired, and the hall, since the advent of Mr. Chas. R. Craig as manager, is rapidly rising in popularity. The heating arrangements are now perfect in all parts. The chief pictures in a good holiday programme include The Reprieve, The Sheep Stealers, The Pretty Flower Picker, Hilda's Lovers, The Wonderful Fertilizer, A Rustic Heroine, Dora, Father's Fault, The Border Limit, and I'm Absorbed in Politics. Leo Storer, comedian, and Minnie Frazer, in illustrated songs, provide turns that are keenly appreciated.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. George Stanyon.—Mr. Waller Jeffs' well-known moving-picture entertainment, under the direction of Mr. Fred Jeffrey, is here. The whole of the series of pictures is admirably shown, and is of a diversified and entertaining nature. Miss Leah Pinnick is popular in illustrated songs, and Mr. Walter Roselle, a first-rate cicerone, guide, and lecturer, introduces with success his family of funny folks.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. Heath.—Messrs. Battersby and Forbes' company is occupying the boards here this week, with The Empty Cradle. Mr. Claude H. Seaton is a capital representative of Kenneth Bloodworth; the James Boswell of Mr. Fred Wells is a fine piece of work; Mr. D. Udquhart is well placed as Sir Carnaby Bloodworth; as the unscrupulous son, Carnaby, Mr. St. Clair Forbes is very impressive; Miss Nancy Battersby supplies an excellent and sympathetic rendering of Ida Boswell; Miss Florence Trelvoir acts with stirring effect as Mary Barton; Mr. Kenneth Scott creates roars of laughter as Hon. St. Clair Selby, being ably assisted by Miss Connie Meadows as Sarah Puddicome; and Mrs. Tom Wilson is admirably suited as Martha.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Leigh Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Benson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstincroft.—The Seven Wulfrunas head the bill here with their comedy sketch, Fun in a Café, and are meeting with a hearty reception; Dunning, ventriloquist, is very smart; Kahn and Kahn are mystifying the audiences in a series of illusions; Akbar is a first-rate gymnast; the Sarony Sisters are charming vocalists and dancers; Mr. Marcus Boyle creates hearty laughter with songs and patter; Messrs. Barfoot and Carson do an excellent turn; Henri Vernon Harcourt gives a clever facical exhibition. The Master Card, presented by Thompson, Carruthers, and company, in a card manipulating novelty, are arousing great interest; Miss Bella Leaburn, dainty comedienne, and the Bioscope pictures complete an excellent programme.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—That popular musical play, The Merry Widow, is very happily rendered, for the first time in Leith, by one of Mr. George Edwardes' touring companies. The combination is well-furnished with singers and dancers, and fully equipped in the matter of chorus, costumes, and all needful stage equirements. Miss Mysie is a charming Sonia, sharing the honours with Mr. Frank Greene, who appears with unqualified success as Prince Danilo; the Baron and Baroness Popoff are very amusingly played by Mr. Edward D'Arcy and Miss Ada Thomas; Mr. Fred Fowler as Nisch adds considerably to the fun of the piece; and the Jolidon of Mr. Ripley Evans, as well as the Novakovitch of Mr. Clifford Seyler, are outstanding impersonations. The usual encores follow the several numbers. For the well-known waltz the principals receive more than one recall, and the famous Danse d'Apaches is introduced with great effect in the last act.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—On Wednesday evening Mr. Arthur produced his thirteenth annual pantomime, under the title of Humpty-Dumpty, a notice of which will appear next week.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney. — To-night (Saturday) the pantomime of Jack and the Beanstalk is to be presented here, the principal artist being Miss Ada Reeve.

STAR THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—A particularly fine pantomime, specially written, was produced at this popular house on Monday night, and will be continued for three weeks. Mr. Fineberg has generally at Christmas-time kept to the dramatic fare that has made the Star so well known, but this year he ventured to change the form of entertainment, and accordingly arranged with Mr. J. Gar Kiddie to present The Babes in the Wood, a creditable work from the pen of Mr. J. L. Barry The pantomime, which was very much enjoyed, engaged the services of some fifty performers, all of whom endeavoured in every way to make it a success, which it undoubtedly was. The costumes and scenery were new and pretty, the fun plenteous, and the songs and music exceedingly appropriate. Particularly striking were the Palace scene, a smart piece of stagecraft, and the transformation scene, entitled A Dream of Summer. Mr. Edwin Lambert as the Demon King showed to great advantage, and, possessed of a good voice, sang several numbers in telling style; Miss Emmie Hands looked pretty in the rôle of the Fairy Queen, and among her successful songs for which she was loudly applauded was "When Marie was sweet sixteen"; Robin Hood was taken by the sprightly Miss Marion Scott, who gained much appreciation for her song, "My girl's a Yorkshire girl"; Miss Margaret Cathcart made a sweet Maid Marion, and acted nicely; as the Babes, the little twin Sisters Mawdsley pleased generally, and received special attention for their dancing; Mr. T. D. Tandy, in the part of the Wicked Uncle caused much laughter, and gained applause for his ditty, "Sue, Sue, Sue"; Mr. Mark Stuart amused exceedingly as the Dame, helping in a well-received duet entitled "Votes for Women," to the air of "Excelsior," Mr. Dawson Dewick (Soft Sammy) being his partner; and Conan and Doyle kept the ball rolling with their antics as the villains. Specialities were introduced by the Hammersley Troupe of lady dancers and the Lohrenz Quartet.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—On the first three nights of the week Mr. Granville produced his second delightful pantomime, entitled Little Aladdin, in which fifty performers took part. Large and pleased audiences attended. The Better Land, a drama which was given some months ago for copyright purposes, will commence a seven nights' engagement.

LYRIC. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Top of the bill here this week has been the merry sketch, The Trippers, submitted by Charles Majilton and company, the principal rôles being in the hands of Messrs. Jim Bond and Charles Majilton. It was richly enjoyed. A smart military scena, After Lights Out, was provided by Leslie's comedy cadets; Elliott and Kennedy proved themselves a laughable couple; Campkin, the comedy cyclist, had a hearty greeting for his able and amusing tricks; the Sages (Will and Jenny) raised a deal of laughter with their comedy burlesques; and Nellie Montague sang several character songs in good style.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Zona Vevey headed the programme here this week, and gained thunderous applause for her really delightful vocal scena; Sammy Shields, "the football enthusiast," was as funny as ever, and kept his audience in a very pleasant mood; some capital vocalism came from the Alexandra Operatic Trio, with their "Prison Scene from Faust"; shouts of laughter followed the antics of Fred Edwards and company in A Nice Quiet Morning; Ted Curtis and his Piccaninnies went through a neat entertainment as vocalists and dancers; some daring work on the trapeze was executed by the Three Carlens; the Radford Duo were accomplished mimics; and contributions also came from Frivola and Deep, comedians; and the Werds.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock dramatic company here gave this week At War With Women, the principal rôles in which were undertaken by Messrs. David G. Noble, Leo Montgomery, Sydney Grant, Tom H. Solly, E. D. Allen, Cecil Ravenswood, R. Seath Innes, Miss Florence Palmer, and Miss Lilian Radbourne. Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed some excellent films.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—A smart farcical comedy, entitled The Lady and the Lodger, has headed the bill here this week, the company brought by Mr. Edgar J. Coyne including Mr. Stanley J. Gordon, Miss Nina Vaughton, and Miss Madge Beresford; as juvenile comedians the Vetna Bros. were well received; Dick Austin, a patter comedian and dancer of exceptional ability, came in for a flattering reception; and the Bioscope had some popular pictures.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton. — The big attraction here this week has been The Volcano, included in the cast of which were Messrs. Lauderdale Maitland, Edward Sorley, and Miss Janet Alexander; Frederick Melville's automaton, "The Moto-Girl," aroused much interest; Nina Wood rendered several pleasing songs at the piano; the merry and accomplished Musical Jees afforded every satisfaction with their Musical Smithy; Spry and Monti were as cordially received as ever; the Hartley Wonders went through an able exhibition of jumping; Conn and Conrad provoked great laughter with their antics; and also in the list were Fred Poplar, comedian, and Kitty Wager, comedienne.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Foremost here throughout the week were Rolfe's Colonial Septette, who give a pretty musical scena, which introduced "An Olde Tyme Halloween"; Bellew and Stock's dramatic sketch company, which included the clever little Edward Garrett, presented an attractive and stirring racing trifle, An Outside Chance; the Andos Japanese Troupe submitted a novel speciality act; Fred Wilkinson had some neatly-executed illusions, in which he was assisted by Miss Betty Wallar; Maggie Walsh, the Lancashire singing mill girl, was given a gratifying reception; Witty Wattie Walton renewed old acquaintance; an acceptable dramatic sketch, The Sheriff and the Rosebud, was given by W. Mowbray Harle and company; Nellie Farrell found favour with her Irish songs and dances; and Walker and May, coloured singers and dancers, were a good turn.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—The big line here this week was A King for a Day, a smart musical comedy presented by Messrs. Sidney Dooley and Charles Seymour's company; Lester and Moure, an eccentric couple, had a lively time with A Day at the Beach; Pueblo and Cropp showed some particularly smart dancing with the trifle, The Swell and the Belle; Carl and May Ohm presented a circus of highly-trained ponies, bears, dogs, and monkeys, a show that was much appreciated; Playfair and Vera gave a clever exhibition as papieragraphists; some puzzling illusions came from Mons. De Lil; the Spanish Juanitos, acrobats, had a turn that was quite out of the common; and likewise in the list were Chas Rowen, comedian, and Hulbert, ventriloquist.

GRAND TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—This hall, after having been closed for a number of months, has been entirely redecorated inside and out, and now presents a very attractive and cosy appearance. It was reopened on Monday evening by Mr. Jasper Redfern with a bioscope and vardeville entertainment. The pictures were certainly of a high order, and richly enjoyed by large audiences; while the acceptable all-round programme of variety turns was contributed to by the following artists:—Shenton's Chicklets, with The Children's Birthday Party; Lila Dunbar, mimic; Maxwell Bros., acrobats, with dogs; the Keppels, operatic vocalists; the Saletos, equilibrists; Playfair and Vera; Clive Watts, comedian; and "This" Quartet.

PARK PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—This place was also reopened this week under new management. In addition to some fine bioscope pictures, contributions came from the following artists:—Herbert Bates, tenor; Lillie Hales, dancer and soubrette; the Maro Gymnastic Duo; J. H. Carney, quick-change artist; Sydney Brandon, youthful dramatic mimic; and Hector and Sultan, with comedy boxing act.

HAYMARKET.—Licensee, Mr. Frank Emery.—On Saturday evening last this old-established house was, after having been abandoned for several months, again utilised for drama, twice nightly. The work selected by the stock company this week was Jo, with Miss Pollie Blake in the title-part. A playlet, The Flag, was also given.

LLANELLY.—ROYALTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Resident Acting-Manageress, Miss Alice Rocheforte.—Mr. Tom Owen, the well-known Welsh comedian, and his clever troupe of pierrots are here this week. The amusing sketch, Checkers, is being well played.

ATHENÆUM HALL.—Secretary, Mr. H. Boulton.—Mr. John Codman's electric pictures and variety company have opened here for two weeks. The show is a very good one, the pictures being all up-to-date.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, the Corporation; Secretary, Mr. C. H. Adams.—Mr. C. W. Poole's Myriorama and variety company has been exhibiting here, and doing good business. The Royal Japanese Banzais perform some sensational feats; Sidney Bach is most amusing as the Welsh lady at the piano; Willie Dean is a prince of comedians; the Bramusas Juvenile Brass Band play a number of selections in capital style; and the Bioscope pictures are excellent.

LOWESTOFT. — HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland. — For the present we have R. C. Finberg, character actor, in characters from Shakespeare, Dickens, &c.; the Musical Palmers, the Paolias, athletes; R. C. Note, comedian; and Daisy Almer, comedienne and dancer; the British Biograph Company's pictures are a popular feature of the programme.

MAESTEG.—TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company in London with the Lid Off is at this popular playhouse. Mr. Carlton gives a clever portrayal of the Rev. Allan Gordon; Mr. William G. Marshall renders the part of Gratton Gala in excellent style; Mrs. Glandale is forcibly enacted by Miss R. Hamilton Belasco; Miss Charlotte E. Ballinger delineates in convincing style the unscrupulous Sarah Shafton; Miss Ruby Maude is responsible for a sympathetic rendering of Astra Bell; and other minor parts are well sustained.

MANCHESTER.—ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—The attraction here is Little Bo-Peep, which was played successfully at the Grand Junction Theatre.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Walter Ellis and company top the bill here in The Sleepwalker, an exceptionally funny sketch. Corman's Juveniles give an artistic and vocal scena, The Waif, in capital style; Will Walton, comedian, is very well received; and Mi Narom appears successfully in comedy items. Other enjoyable turns are Alsopp and Beckwith, comedy couple; Percy Farrimond, the singing Lancashire collier; the Three Alskarnos, risley comedians; Lio Sobre, novelty juggler; the Deuchars, duettists and dancers; and Dex, the necromancer.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Hewitt.—Cinderella was produced here on Monday by Mr. Sidney Cooper and the Tally-ho Trio, the latter a well-known and successful turn on the halls. The book, by H. B. Maxwell, tells the story coherently, and the music is by Surtees Corne. The cast is headed by Miss Madge Daly, who plays Prince Charming, and who proves herself a comedienne of considerable accomplishment and personal charm, her rendering of the various songs allotted to her, notably "Johnny Macintyre," being full of dash and melody. The Tally-ho Trio, who among them are responsible for the rôles of the Baron and the Broker's Men, provide plenty of good fun and delightful comedy vocalism, and do much to swing the show along. Messrs Newnham and Latima play the Sisters in the usual grotesque style; Mr. Harry C. Momber fills the part of the Page; and Miss Jessica Brooke makes a pleasing Cinderella. Among others who do well are Miss May Maddison as Dandini (a clever dancer) and the Sisters Florence (speciality dancers), while Miss Ida Scott deserves a word of praise for a quiet and refined impersonation of the Fairy Godmother. The scenery and effects are good.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The principal turns here this week are George Gray and company in The Fighting Parson, which goes as well as ever; and the Lancashire Singers, eighteen in number, who render various concerted pieces in fine style. Harry Freeman, the "can't stop" comedian, is also popular; and neat and entertaining turns are added by Jennie Mackay, the Lavender Girl; Brix and Annie, in Fun in a Barber's Shop; Naughton and Gold, Scotch comedians; Florrie Conolly, Irish songstress; and Geo. Antill, a quaint character comedian.

PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. T. Carter.—Messrs. Charles Fletcher and John Tiller present here this week their pantomime of Red Riding Hood, which is given twice nightly with success. Laurence Barclay, the popular comedian, is in the prominent part of Pretty Pet, the ugly daughter of King Lupus, which he fills with exceptional success; Jessie Templeton as Prince Valiant makes an ideal principal boy; and a very nice performance as Red Riding Hood is given by May Merry, who is also a clever and pleasing dancer. C. K. Martinette, jun., is good as the page Trotters; and Benson Kleve and May Sharples are notable among the remainder. Specialities are introduced by the Lotus Troupe of dancers, the Eight Little Mascottes, and Moller and Theodor.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James B. Trippett.—Exceptional talent is to be seen here in Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's company, who are giving The Second Mrs. Tanqueray and Moths. Mr. Cecil Wynne and Miss Henrietta Schrier fill the principal parts in both plays, and do so with considerable tact and power; while Mr. Raynor, Miss Frances Waring, Miss Lisa Coleman, and Miss Dorothy West-Symes each have opportunities for distinguished work in their separate rôles. The plays are given with fine effect, and deservedly appreciated by large audiences.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—An entertaining programme here comprises Billy Williams, the clever Australian comedian; the Bros. Durant, society acrobats; Leoni Clarke, with his wonderful animal show; Will and Alicia Frohman, smart instrumentalists; Bert Bernard, trick pianist; Sandy McNab in the comic sketch The Egyptian Mummy; Ted Waite, the spasmodic comedian; the Kilties' Camp, in a good variety Highland act; and the Airship Elopement, well played by the Aeronauts' Company.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—In addition to their pantomime at the Palace on the same story, Messrs. Charles Fletcher and John Tiller provide here this week a version of Red Riding Hood. Miss Decima Brooks is very pleasing in the title-rôle; and Miss Maisie Jerrard is well suited to the requirements of principal boy as Prince Charming. Good fun is provided by Mr. F. Russell as the Baron; Mr. Howard Ward plays Dame Crump in amusing fashion; and Johnny Stout and Johnny Green are smartly exploited by Messrs. Will Lytton and Walter Watson. The Poppy Quartette and the Excelsior Troupe of children add charming specialities.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—That highly-sensational and thrilling Hippo. spectacle, The Sands of Dee, is the big attraction here this week. The chief parts are in the safe hands of Miss Ruth Maitland, Mr. J. H. Barnes, and Mr. Lawson Butt, ably supported by Miss Ella Gillette, Mr. Norman Trevor, and Mr. Rodney Stewart. Another big turn is Mr. Fred Storey and company in his very successful version of Rip Van Winkle. The Daunton-Shaw Troupe of cyclists go through a wonderful performance; Mabel Bright in a neat pantomime skit proves herself a smart protean artist; Little Tina is a child actress and impressionist of marked ability; Bert Weston is a capital comedian; Goggins and Davis are clever and amusing acrobats; and Clarke and Hayden are entertaining in a pleasing musical comedy duologue. Bioscope Pictures complete an all-round excellent show.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Jules Charmettes, who tops the bill here this week, provides a smart turn; Sid Cotterell causes roars of laughter in an amusing sketch entitled The Substitute; Adah Payne, vocalist, sings well; Walter Emerson amuses with two funny songs; Kathleen Maureen sings Irish songs in a very pleasing manner; Argo is a capital mimic of animals and sounds; the Dalgarnos are particularly good in a sketch, Caught Napping; the Arthur Lloyd Trio are seen once more in their Little Charlie sketch; Ellis and Ellis in national songs and dances are well appreciated; and Johnny Thompson, vocal comedian, has a good voice. Ruffell's Bioscope Pictures are good, as usual.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—The attraction here is The Power of the King, presented by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company. Miss Leila Zillwood sustains the rôle of Lady Annastasia admirably; Miss Georgina V. France is well suited in the part of Lady Florina; and Miss Grace Barton ably represents Margot. Mr. Gerald Blake makes a capital exponent of Captain Landgrave; Mr. Travis Green is most effective as Crown Prince Oscar; Mr. John Campling presents a good delineation of Alberta; Mr. Charles Whitlock scores as the King; and Mr. Wilton Drury is successful with the comedy part of Fritz.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—Heading an excellent holiday programme are the great Zerbinis in their latest musical novelty, entitled "The Enchanted Glen." Other good turns are contributed by Rose Atherton and company in a comedy sketch, Murphy's Affinity; The Veteran's Birthday, presented by Mr. David Donaldson and Miss Frances Ferina; G. W. Foster, comedian; De Lilo and Metz; Frank Maura, the Mexican wonder; and the Apollo Male Voice Quartet Party. The Biograph pictures are exceptionally good.

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—The theatre is closed this week, reopening on Saturday night with Lingford Carson's company in The Power of the Cross.

NEW PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E. H. Jones.—The programme here this week includes the following pictures:—The "Merry Widow" Waltz Craze, Fight for a Crown, the Magic Ring, Ill-advised Hooligan, Revenge, Uncle's Fortune, Troublesome Thief, &c.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Jno. Ed. Jowsey; Manager and Licensee, Mr W. Ker Chatto.—At this theatre the pantomime Humpty-Dumpty will be produced by Mr. J. F. Elliston's company.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—Closed until Christmas day, when Mr. Geo. Dance's company will present the musical comedy Miss Hook of Holland.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles Rembges.—The Ten Dark Knights, described as America's greatest coloured artists, provide an excellent musical act here this week, while Lily Burnand, as lovely and lively as ever, maintains her reputation. Will McIvor is an excellent vocalist; Chas Dixton and company cause much amusement in their comedy sketch Uncle Obadiah; Ada Parker is a bright and merry comedienne; J. C. Crawley is exceedingly good in his novel act, Lights Out; and the Rosses, comedians and dancers, also contribute to a capital programme.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Manager, Mr. C. E. Nicholls.—The fame of George Hackenschmidt, the great wrestler, is drawing large houses here this week, and the audience is rewarded by seeing a remarkable exhibition of the science. Vay's Juveniles are exceedingly good in a pathetic sketch entitled Life in the Slums; and other excellentturns are given by Lena Wylie, a vocalist of exceptional merit, Lazelle, the Four Aces, Rubie and Elsie, Redfern, Fred Keeton, and Thomas and Taylor.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—The celebrated Leopolds, in a condensed version of Frivolity and their latest sketch The Houseboat, are the star turn; Sanderson Moffat and company are excellent in a sentimental sketch The Thin Red Line, an episode of Balaclava; Marjorie Maidment is a dainty and debonair comedienne; and Harry Desmond is quaint and witty. The Stadium Boys give an athletic display out of the usual run of things; very funny are the Boston Twins, in their medley of mimicry, harmony, and knockabout business; and Chiko performs some wonderful equilibristic poses.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—A fine list of artists contributes to the Christmas programme this week, and a good audience assembled on Monday evening to witness the performance. A new dramatic sketch, A Daughter of the Revolution, was cleverly and artistically played by Miss Georgette Thierry, Mr. Bernard Liell, and company. Comedy is a strong feature this week, and Munroe's Comedy Team come in for a large share of laughter and applause. Mr. Frank Weaver danced excellently, whilst Miss Flo Warner had a good reception for her songs; Messrs. Morrin and Cardiff sang and danced in good style, and Mr. Percy P. Paget caused much enthusiasm by his character studies. Mr. Grantley and Master Denny completed the turns. The animated pictures are beautiful, as is usually the case at this popular and well-managed resort.

NEWPORT.—EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll. —The chief turn in the bill here is the romantic equestrian spectacle, Dick Turpin's Ride to York, presented by Mr. Fred Ginnett's company. It is proving very attractive. A series of artistic living statuary, "Makers of History," from the London Hippodrome, is very novel; in a spectacular and gymnastic equilibristic speciality, "The Pages' Recreation," the Vetter Bros. do some daring feats, and Chas. Guyer and Ida Valli make a great hit with their American comedy act. Walter Munroe wins favour as an Irish comedian; Baker and Balfe give an enjoyable performance on the xylophone, and attractive turns are contributed by Mazie Hibbs in a dancing speciality, and Millie Wolfgang, who sings her songs in admirable style. A capital series of pictures on the Bioscope complete the bill.

NORTHAMPTON.—CORN EXCHANGE.—Proprietors, The Company.—Mr. Waller Jeff's new century commenced their Christmas season here on Monday, under the management of Mr. Irving Bosco. Mr. H. Heller is the accomplished lecturer, and Miss Ducie Saunderson sweetly vocalises in her "illustrated songs."

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—Les Montaldos, equilibrists, head the bill here, and present a smart act, in which highly trained parrots, cockatoos, and macaws are introduced with much success. Miss Effie White in her scena, "The Spirit of the Cave," has made a great hit; the Brothers Corcoran in their musical act are loudly applauded; Mr. Tom Cavallie shines as a ventriloquist; Miss Belle Ray, with illustrated songs, is popular; Mr. Harry Brough, vocalist, meets with a warm reception; and the Mouldoscope is as popular as ever.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in The Christian is announced for Boxing Night, in which Mr. Henry Renouf is to appear as John Storm and Miss Doric Gilham as Glory Quayle.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor Fitt.—Among the principal Christmas holiday attractions are Max Gruber with Miss Adelina, with their performing elephant, horse, and pony, who present a unique entertainment. The famous Cattaneo company of acrobats are clever artists, and very diverting; the Lannons are pleasing vocal duettists and high pedestal dancers. Will Lannon, who holds the world's championship belt for dancing, creates much enthusiasm for his performance. Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery play an amusing sketch entitled The Would-be Actors Rehearsing a Tragedy; Charles Russell's scena, "The Veterans in 1854," is attractive; Leoni Dixon is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Harry Taft, an accomplished whistler, and Charles Tempest, eccentric comedian, with some new films on the Hippo-Bio contribute a pleasing entertainment.

ASSEMBLY ROOMS, AGRICULTURAL HALL.—The New Era pictures, with Lazern the Mystic, are here, and are fairly patronised.

BANK PLAIN ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The Franco-British animated pictures are still here.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Mr. Charles Thinston's great fun carnival continues successful.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—A vast amount of fun is provided by the musical comedy sketch, The Brigands of Tarragona, in which the principal rôle is taken by Chas. H. Bell, who is ably assisted by a large company. Larry Lewis makes a favourable impression by his really droll style; Bonnie Goodwin's piccaninnies are a source of endless pleasure, and Arthur Aldridge uses his fine voice in a well-rendered ballad entitled, "In Manus Tuus, Domine"; Enzer, as a juggler, and Miss Clarice, in an exposition of ju-jitsu, secure well-merited applause, and a delightful turn by Phil and Nettie Peters deserves high praise; Burnetti, character musician; Violet Stockelle, comedienne; and the Three Sisters Jerome in a novelty act, Auntie's Maid, and pictures on the Bioscope help towards the success of the programme.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. E. Lockwood. —A return visit by Lafayette, the wizard, has drawn crowded houses, who have accorded him a hearty welcome. Brinn manipulates with ease and skill heavy and unwieldy articles, such as a gun carriage and Maxim gun; Herbert Clifton proves a clever imitator of the female voice, and scores throughout; the bicycle turn of Paulton and Doley is highly amusing and very clever, and a speciality act by the Hectors is well received. Some smart acrobatic feats are given by the Comerfords, who are also distinctly funny; the Sisters Ford supply comedy duets, and Mayne Cannon is duly rewarded for a song, while films on the Barrascope add to the attractions.

KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Edgar O. Waller.—The cinematograph entertainment has now entered on its third year, and special films are provided for the festive season. Crowded houses assemble nightly to appreciate the pictures, and Mr. Ernie Williams gains a large share of applause for his rendering of illustrated songs.

OLDHAM.—COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's company of juvenile artists occupy the stage in The Babes in the Wood. Chief honours are awarded to Wee Georgie Wood as Leslie. Miss Peggy MacDonald as Marjorie gives a dainty and refined portrayal of the girl babe; Miss Dolly Dodds, a prime favourite with Oldham audiences, is again here, and her Maid Marion is much appreciated; Miss Daisy Wood makes a bold, dashing Robin Hood, and sings such capital songs as "Bombadier" and "From Poverty-street to Golden-square"; Miss Jennie Hughes as Fairy Dewdrop has a capital soprano voice, and she uses it with telling effect in two smart songs, "Let me but hope" and "I'd live or die for you"; Misses Trixie Wyatt and Annie Brumby as Phyllis and Dolly Varden are capital, and are ably assisted by Misses Marie Lumburg and Annie Adamson as Little John and Allan-a-Dale. Mr. Neil Hardy as the Baron provides much hearty laughter, and he is ably seconded by Mr. Jimmie Watson as Lucinda Lovejoy; Mr. J. G. Aitken has a part in which he fairly revels as Simple Simon, and his accent goes well; Mr. Harry Leander makes a robust Friar Tuck; and Master Jack Harrison does well as the Miller. Messrs. Graham and Barron impersonate the ruffians, Willing and Weary, very well, and introduce some really clever dancing. The scenery is exceedingly pretty. In the ballets some cleverly-trained children appear. Specialities are introduced by Wee Georgie Wood, Peggy MacDonald, Harry Leander, J. G. Aitken, J. Watson, and the International Quartette.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—Zbysco and his troupe of wrestlers are nightly appearing here; The Enchanted Iona is a sparkling comedy act, played capitally by Chas. Fraser and company; Mason and Bart are excellent in a novelty comedy turn; Fatmah Diard sings some delightful songs; the Tossing Austins are clever in comedy juggling and dancing; Ella Dean is a charming vocalist; and J. W. Rowley an old favourite. Arthur Harris, a vocal comedian, and the Dottoscope complete the bill.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—Matthews and Brown, the unbleached eccentrics, cause much merriment; Williams's Royal Welsh Minstrels present a refined musical and vocal act; Macintosh and Royal are expert dancers; the Three Delaires give a clever speciality, In the Demon Grotto; the Della Sisters are capable vocalists; Blanche L. Walker also sings some good songs; and Jack Hayworth is a smart comedian. Amusing films are depicted on the Dottoscope.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Thorne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—The Elliott-Savonas produce their Palace of Orpheus, and score a huge success. The Krags Trio are marvellous in a gymnastic act; the Sivronis are capable eccentrics; Daisy Hicks has capital songs; Tate and Tate are clever in a trampolin act; Hettie Lee is a smart comedian and dancer; and Harry Nation a funny comedian. Geo. Carncross, in character impersonations, and the Palace pictures conclude.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Messrs. Chas. Freeman and Geo. Derricke's company is continuing its visit here with Current Cash. Mr. Chas. Freeman gives a good interpretation of Captain Mark Milton; Mr. Wilfrid Blair is good as Major Gordon Challis; and Mr. George Derricke makes an excellent Rev. Lincoln Green. Mr. Claude Graveley does well in the dual rôle of Colonel Carrington and the Hon. Harry Chafferton; whilst Mr. Frank Coston is a fund of merriment as Ned Boales. Miss Winnie Webster makes an attractive Sybil Milton; Miss Ivy Derry is graceful as Delia Challis; and Miss Florence Tench scores with a successful portrayal of Grace Milton. Specialities by Clark and Clare are accorded a most hearty reception.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Edward Ranier's company, in a strong and well-acted dramatic sketch, The Bank Robbery, heads the bill here this week, and has a good reception. The Florodoras, three attractive ladies, are capital in a miniature musical comedy; the Sisters Ely sing ducts and look charming; Cliffe Owen is a really original comedian; and Fame and Fortune create no end of laughter with their funny business. Yetta has something new in the way of wire-walking, doing thereon a quite realistic "cake-walk"; Henri Bekker is a smart conjurer, with a lot of quaint patter; Little Vena, really a child comedienne, has all the airs and graces of a finished artist; Sam Hobbs, a local vocalist, finds great favour; and Ethel Yorke sings and dances very daintily. The pictures are again good.

PORTH. — THE PALACE. — Proprietors, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—An excellent programme is submitted here this week. Vonetta, lady illusionist, gives an admirable performance, her quick changes being greatly appreciated; Nell Cotter is a smart singer of popular songs; the Debreans, Japanese jugglers, deserve special mention for their exceedingly clever act; Bert and Dora are responsible for great amusement as comedy artists; the sketch presented by Eva Lumley and Freda Ettrick's company gives entire satisfaction, the various parts are well represented; Clarke's Nippers, in their unique speciality act, boxing, &c., are exceptionally clever; the Martelloni Family of acrobats (four ladies and one gentleman) are decidedly smart and clever, and are accorded a warm reception. The Palascope, with its latest films, gives entire satisfaction.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—This theatre is closed until Thursday, when it reopens with the successful play The Flag Lieutenant.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company pays a welcome return visit with The Old Folks at Home, several of the original company being retained in the cast. Mr. Frank Liston is as successful as ever in his impersonation of the dissolute Lord Kenilworth; Mr. H. E. Herbert is a capital Andrew Ross, his impersonation being manly and natural; Mr. Vernon Dale is the Hugh Lovell, and his acting is much appreciated; Mr. Charles Herbert wins appreciation for his Christopher Robin; and Miss Clara Santley gives a good account of herself as Martha (his wife). Mr. Frank Caffrey is a humorous Ben Jolly, and, in conjunction with Miss Nellie Mace, a pert and sprightly Susan, causes much amusement. Mr. Arthur Dudley maintains his clever portrayal of the dumb hunchback Jock; as Patricia Bathurst Miss Kate Froud is excellent; Miss Amy Crake is to be complimented on her portrayal of the part of Bonita Durham; Miss Helen Cronie as the Nurse is good; and a sympathetic rendering of the part of Dorothy Robin is given by Miss Maud Warburton. The success of the piece is much enhanced by the selections given by the Excelsior Quartette of glee singers, introduced in the third act.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Another good bill is provided this week, at the top of which Mr. Joe Peterman presents The Singing Servants, an operatic burlesque in two scenes. The company is a most capable one, possessing excellent voices, while the music is catchy, and, needless to say, meets with a most enthusiastic reception. McCann, the acrobatic skater, gives a clever turn; and Cyril Jepheon, "the man in the billiard suit," has a cordial welcome. E. Morrisey has an up-to-date novelty in an original equilibristic musical act, which wins applause; Tom Morris, the whistler, meets with a good reception; James and Jenny Jee give a very clever performance, including cycling on the endless revolving wire; Evelyn and Norrie (Herbert and Ethel) create much amusement in their smart comedy sketch Set a Thief —; Fred Maitland, in his comedy skit Talked Out, in which he is assisted by a lady of the suffragette type, who holds forth from one of the boxes, and is eventually ejected, caused roars of laughter; Alman Correzo is a clever juggler, and gives a good turn, being ably assisted by the droll Keith. Gamekeeper's Dogs on the Bioscope concludes a programme that has a distinct flavour of the festive season.

RADCLIFFE. — GRAND OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. Boothman.—The house was well attended at its re-opening on Saturday, and Hardie and Von Leer's company are proving very attractive with their great dramatic success Two Lancashire Lasses in London. Mr. Harold Cotter plays the hero, John Edmunds, to perfection. Mr. Chris Mason as Samuel Hallet causes roars of laughter, and is ably assisted by Miss E. Shaw as Mrs. Hallett; Mr. J. Edward Fletcher undertakes the Rev. Frank Selby with great credit, and the rascalities of Jonas Deane are well depicted by Mr. Arthur Elwyn; the two burglars, Jim Price and Ratty, are in the safe hands of Mr. Jack Miller and Mr. W. Walmsley. The two sisters, Constance and Nellie, have realistic exponents in Miss Rosslyn Vayne and Miss Alice Defoe, and Miss Stanley Burt fills the part of Bessie Edmunds with great credit. The piece is well staged.

RAWTENSTALL. — GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; General Business-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—A Soldier's Honour was presented on Monday by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's fine company. Miss Mabel Mannering gave a fine interpretation as Cora Lee, her acting being very fine, whilst Miss Helen Tremayne Lowther was an excellent Doreen Illingworth; Miss Edie Macklin was exceptionally clever as Jemima Eliza, her impersonation being highly appreciated; as Captain Deane Mr. Millar Anderson gave a forcible impersonation, and Mr. T. Arthur Ellis's portrayal of Captain Gerald Temple was cleverly conceived, and presented in manly fashion; Mr. Andrew Money as Henry Thornton was an excellent villain, and Mr. C. H. Gallier was most successful as General Rochester; Mr. Harry Lyndon made a capital Percy Brattle, and Miss Lynn Darlington was equally successful as Gwendoline Temple; Miss Sylvia Vickers was an excellent Florence Deane, and little Miss Edie Trafnell displayed considerable talent with her impersonation of Queenie Dean. Mr. Sydney Fiennes was a capital Holly, and the remaining characters were all adequately sustained.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. B. Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred. Benton.—This theatre has been closed during the week for rehearsals of the grand pantomime of Dick Whittington, which will be produced in elaborate style by Messrs. Fred. J. Little and Fred. Davey on Boxing Night, with Miss Beatrice Vaily in the title-rôle.

THE PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. H. Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—The attractions this week comprise Charles Hera, juggler and equilibrist; Les Valentia, lady acrobats and dancers; Harry Merrylees, Scotch comedian; Dallas and Varden, in a comedy duologue, That Husband of Mine; Victor Widdicombe and Co., in a comedietta, Her Devonshire Dad; Madge Beresford, comedienne; Elmo and Rego, comedy acrobats; Billy Farrell, comedian; and the Palace Bioscope. The proceeds of the performances given last week in aid of the local Distress Funds amounted to nearly £40.

LARGE TOWN HALL.—Messrs. Poole's Myriorama, which has paid a Christmas visit here for many years past, opened for a short season on Christmas Eve. The renowned entertainment is quite up to its high standard of excellence, and is sure of good support. The performances are given twice daily.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Burton.—The Woman Pays is a drama replete with thrilling situations, and is capitally presented. Mr. Phil Harper submits a powerful impersonation of Sid Armstrong; Mr. John Davidson as the villainous Roger Marchant is well placed; Mr. Beresford Innes is all that could be desired as Cyrus Treadgold; Mr. Dunlop Stewart is heard to advantage as Luke Morland; and Mr. Charles Arthur makes the most of Doctor Trevor. The humorous element is in the safe hands of Mr. F. M. Thorne as Micky Maloney and Miss Anena Walton as Polly; Miss Kate Blair enlists sympathy in the part of Nell Morland, and Miss Florence Thorne enacts with effect the rôle of Tabitha; Miss Maud Russell acts with superior skill the trying part of Madge Armstrong, the audience warmly applauding her efforts.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Chard's Dog Circus tops the bill here this week. The dogs are cleverly trained, and perform some extraordinary leaping. Beattie and Babs are a clever pair of juvenile entertainers; Martinett and Wallace, musical comedians, are both amusing and clever; Fred Mason is a popular coster and whistling comedian; Cosgrove and Burns in The Singing Academy evoke roars of laughter; Marie St. John, vocalist; Amy Ruesell, vocalist; and the Empire Bioscope pictures complete the programme.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, The Jackson Family; Business-Manager, Mr. John Jackson; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Jackson, sen.—Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls contribute a vocal entertainment that delights the audience; the Four Breens submit a clever and humorous club juggling act; Molteno and company in A Dolly and a Coach present some capital tableaux and vocalism; the Attalas are skilful equilibrists on the trapeze; other excellent turns are presented by the Gregson Comedy Trio; George Bernard, actor-vocalist; Miss Eva Compton, comedienne; A. W. Scott, coon delineator and dancer; and the Hippodrome pictures.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. T. Edward Ward's company had a good reception from a full house on Monday when Miss Maud E. Ward effectively appealed to the sympathies of the audience as Nell Greystone in Second to None. Mr. C. W. Spencer presented a dignified old Colonel; Mr. F. F. Loyd cleverly played the unscrupulous Captain Mannering; the indigent old soldier, Edward Horseman, was neatly portrayed by Mr. J. G. Maine; Mr. Chas. Halling agreeably presented Frank Wilding; Mr. H. Macauley as Private Flutter, Mr. Eric Wilde as Private Bertie, and Miss Carrie Yandell as Norah furnished much cause for hilarity; Mr. Frank R. Gwyn Richardson suitably portrayed Lieut. Archie Ballater; Miss Grace Harlington was a powerful exponent of May Greystone; and Mr. Frank Austin also did useful work as a Police-Inspector. The staging was well worked, and some pretty scenery was shown.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Closed until Boxing Day, when Beauty and the Beast commences with a matinée.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Slatter.—On Monday last Mr. Harry Burns produced for the first time his comic Christmas pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, to good houses (two performances). The book is by Henry Curwen, and there are several good parodies on popular songs. Among a number of pretty scenes may be mentioned the Port of Hull, the Home of the Fairy Pearl 'neath the Sea, the Isle of Hullaloola, and the Palace of Delight. Mme. du Roche makes a sprightly hero, Robinson, and has some good songs, including "I want you to be my girl"; Polly Perkins has a dashing and dainty representative in Miss Marie Belle, who sings well "I don't care if there is a girl there" and "Maudie"; Miss Kitty Trewhitt as Tommy Boline has a pleasant song, "Have you got another girl like May?" Mr. Henry Curwen as Dame Crusoe and Mr. Arthur Aiston as Will Atkins are responsible for most of the fun, which runs right through. Dame Crusoe's song "Suffragettes" and patter on women's votes are much enjoyed. Miss Nina May sings "Starshine" and "Egypt" and satisfactorily plays the Fairy Pearl; Mr. Billy Hubbard is a clever exponent of Man Friday; Bert Coote's troupe of Yankee Doodle Girls are very smart, and execute some pretty dances; and Mr. Edwin Ramsey (Capt. Cutter) and Mr. Charlie Ramsey (captain's mate) are a comical couple. The full chorus and ballet manœuvres show excellent training. The pretty dresses reflect great credit on the wardrobemistress, Miss E. Riddal, and the whole is under the stage management of Mr. Henry Curwen, the author.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. E. Percival.—Among this week's pictures are Disciple of Vidocq, What a Fine Picture! Fisherman's Hate, What's the Matter with Willie? Sunshine after Storm, A Bad Pinch of Snuff, The Habits of the Tree Frog, For an Old Love Song, and Sweet Liberty. Mr. Tom Sherlock sings well the illustrated song "An old-fashioned cottage."

SHEFFIELD.—EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—A very attractive programme was submitted to a large audience on Monday, the pièce de résistance being the cleverly-constructed and amusing quick-change protean sketch performed by the celebrated mimetic actor M. Henri de Vries. An artistic and unique spectacular entertainment is "Greater London," with novel electrical and scenic effects, invented and produced by Mr. Rousbey. Miss Lottie Lennox is a pleasing and favourite artist; a novel act is done by Carl Reinsch; Mr. Arthur Alberts sings lively ditties; and Verno and Voyce, Les Martinettes, Dan Hendry, the American Bioscope with Pathé Frères films, and Miss Bessie Slaughter give general satisfaction.

THE HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—There was a big house here on Monday. Haley's clever juveniles appeared in a very entertaining interlude; Messrs. Jordan and Harvey again demonstrated how popular Hebrew artists are with the Hippodrome patrons; and the programme also included Messrs. Dale and O'Malley, eccentric comedians; Prince's Mascots, in a bright entertainment; Culpitt, society conjurer; Vasey and Ramsey, two expert performers in their special line; Cummin and Seaham, diverting drolls; the Aribos, in a smart act; &c. The Barrascope, with artistic coloured pictures of lovely Continental scenery, concluded.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. A. S. Turpin.—A pleasing entertainment of songs, sketches, &c., with artistic pictures by the Raymond Bio-tableaux Co. of comic, fantastic, dramatic, and educative subjects, is nightly given to large and appreciative audiences.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Jasper Redfern and Co., Ltd.—Vaudeville and moving pictures are still meeting with support and cordial applause here.

PAVILION THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Peach.—The Sheffield Photo Co.'s admirable animated pictures at the renovated Fitzalan Hall meet with the firm support of the bioscope-going public.

ALBERT HALL.—Manager, Mr. Peace.—The popular C. W. Poole Myriorama and variety troupe are fulfilling their usual Christmas season here.

MONTGOMERY HALL.—The Imperial Animated Picture Co. with a good concert party open for a fortnight's visit to-night.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Geo. Conquest and Richard H. Nerney; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Aladdin is the pantomime, to be first produced on Christmas Eve, with two performances following on Boxing Day, and which Mr. Edward Graham-Falcon has made most attractive with up-to-date and original novelties. Special care has been taken to present good scenic effects, and the costumes have been designed by Mrs. E. Graham-Falcon. Among a full complement of artists may be mentioned Messrs. Ernest Carlton, Albert Laurence, Will Burton, the Warners, Misses Amy Bellwood, Edith Maynard, Daisy Kersey, Gipsy Hodgson, and Georgie Mansell, the La Dor Troupe being responsible for the harlequinade.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Closed until Boxing Day in preparation for pantomime, Mother Goose.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—The Warsaw Brothers in musical sketch are exceedingly amusing and exceptionally clever; Mlle. Neveeda presents some capital illusions, which in some instances are startling; the Eight College Girls are lively and pretty, and sing sweetly; Marlo is a smart juggler, and is well received; while Dan Filmer is a vigorous and effective dancer. The contortions indulged in by Ossi Souplessi are wonderful, and Victor Courtney gives capital imitations at the piano. Lily Adalade is also seen in a pleasing turn.

STOCKPORT. — EMPIRE — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co. Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—A capital holiday programme is presented here this week, Edgar Forrest and company heading the bill with a laughable sketch, Oh, My Mother!" Marie Jones, assisted by Ernest Munro, displays genuine ability in a quick-change duologue, The Way to Win a Bet; distinctly funny is Chas. F. Best as Mac-Bunker, the Mountebank; the Paragon Trio sing a medley of popular ballads in capable style; Lily Sharplin is a pleasing mimic; Arthur Schofield's humorous songs are greeted with favour; the Raymond Trio present a neat and clever musical and dancing act; and Will Hebden proves himself an entertaining vocalist.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. Morton Powell's company in a successful drama, The Woman who Gambles, are here for three nights, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. On Boxing Day Mr. James Kiddie's pantomime, Aladdin, will be produced.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The above hall is closed this week, and will reopen on Monday.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's stock company produces this week a military drama, Man and Wife. Mr. Ernest Wingfield as Paul Revere was very successful; Mr. H. Hesslegrave makes a typical Colonel Letour; Capt. D'Esparre is well-acted by Mr. Fred Terriss; Miss Lilian Beaumont as Marcelle gives an excellent portrayal; Miss Lina Nazeby as Jean Morville was good; as was also Miss Daisy Norman as Rosette. The rest of the company are well suited to their parts. Payne's bio-photoscope concludes with "Flash James."

STOKE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Moroney.—The Colonials appear in a pretty musical scena, reminiscent of backwoods life, and provide altogether a most interesting number; Zarmo, the Jew juggler, introduces some smart feats; the Days pay a return visit, demonstrating telepathy; and Johnnie and Willie are neat and clever acrobats. Also appearing are the Sisters Lytton, Mostol, Fred Casburn, Prince Schaboo, and the Bioscope.

SUNDERLAND. — ROYAL. — Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Geo. Dunn.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Draycott's répertoire company is here this week, and on Monday played The Octoroon before a crowded house. Salem Scudder was excellently portrayed by Mr. Chas. Draycott; Mrs. Draycott was a capable and dainty Zoe; and Mr. Wilfred J. Short did well as George Peyton. The villainous Jacob McClosky was in the able hands of Mr. George Arthur; Wah-no-tee, the faithful Indian, was cleverly done by Mr. Geo. Street; and Mr. Harry Scatchard excelled as Pete. Miss Marie Ellis and Miss Louise Millward were seen to advantage as Dora Sunniside and Mrs. Peyton. The other rôles were all capably handled, and the artists were enthusiastically received.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden.—Miss Marquis arouses much enthusiasm with her stud of cleverly trained cobs; Herman Melot is well described "a marvel of deftness in conjuring," his feats causing considerable surprise; Dutas astounds all by his correctness in the matter of dates; and S. K. Eida and Nellie Falco exhibited in a dancing act some advantages of ju-jitsu. A sketch, entitled The Piano Tuner, given by Wood, Wells, and Wilkins, was full of pleasing humour and tuneful song; and Takio, a Japanese mimic, gave imitations of animals and birds with a fidelity that was heartily appreciated. Miss Margaret and Master John Rawson are two juvenile entertainers of exceptional talent; and Edna Lyall sang with charming sweetness.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Hy. Curry.—John Clemperi, who heads the bill this week, is distinctly mystifying in the manner in which he escapes from various padlocks, chains, handcuffs, &c. Great enthusiasm was evinced by the audience during his turn. The Geretti Sisters, trapeze artists, perform their tricks with a marvellous dexterity and agility; the Three Sisters Lee, vocalists, dancers, and acrobats, give a very attractive turn; Wanted, a Wife, is an amusing sketch by Leslie Clare's company; Harry Morris, comedian, is equally entertaining, his jokes being very smart; and Mack is a good dancer and pleasing singer.

TON-Y-PANDY. — THEATRE ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ridgewood Barrie.—Mr. Harry Starr and company have paid a welcome return visit. For the first three nights Otto, the Outcast was staged, and for the latter part of the week Karl, the Clockmaker. In the former Mr. Harry Starr created great enthusiasm as Otto; Roderique D'Estalier was capably interpreted by Mr. Will Hee; Mr. A. Sawyer made the most of Daddy Bruneau; as Auguste Carotte plenty of humour was provided by Mr. A. Allen; Miss Kate Norris presented a capital study of Lara, and Susette was safely entrusted to Miss E. Mackintosh.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Stone.—Rene and Smith successfully "top the bill" here. Salmon provides a unique cycle act; Eugen Brandt meets with a rousing reception; as also does Jean MacDuff, the lady "Lauder"; Peggy Lyndon and Gilbert Rogers each merit approbation. The leading pictures are a Christmas Eve Dream and The Bank Guardian.

TYLDESLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. W. Brierley.—Mr. Gus Levaine produced Dick Whittington here on Saturday evening before a crowded house. The pantomime is bright and lively, and the settings and costumes are of a pretty character. In the title-rôle Miss Marion Collins gives a dashing exposition and sings in good style; Miss Lizzie Levaine is a graceful and charming Alice, and also scores in her songs; Miss Ida Conroy wins approval for her efforts as Princess Pearl; and Miss Lil de Laur is the possessor of an excellent voice; Mr. Charles Towers as Idle Jack and Mr. Fred Terry as Sarah cause much laughter by their witticisms; the Emperor is well represented by Mr. Lew Vance. Clever speciality turns are introduced by the Duranos, acrobats; Mr. Victor Silverine, siffleur; Otto Ethardo, equilibrist; and the Ruby Quartette of Lady Dancers. The chorus is strong.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; General-Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. Smiley.—Messrs. Pardoes' and Miss Lottie Holland's pantomime company is here for a fortnight with Cinderella. The simple story is adhered to faithfully, the artists are all well-balanced, and the staging, dresses, and scenic effects are done on an elaborate scale. The specialities are well introduced, and the Pardoes are a fine troupe of acrobats, whilst Miss Lottie Holland scores a complete triumph with her scena "Ayesha, my Sweet Egyptian." Zenieth is a remarkable animal impersonator, and the Edengale Trio are delightful dancers. Miss Nellie Rose is a charming Cinderella, and her singing and dancing alike are capitally accomplished; a dashing Prince Charming is Miss Lottie Holland; Miss Beattie Howard is a winsome Princess Rosala; Miss Lizzie Round is a dashing Dandini; Mr. T. Dorma makes the most of the Baron; and the two daughters, Eve and Maud, are well represented by the Brothers Dench, who play well on the "Suffragette" craze. Mr. George Hyam is an accomplished comedian, and his work is always good; Alf. Grady and Mike Hastings score as Blobbs and Blabbs; and the flunkies have capital impersonators in Messrs. Wright and Spencer. Mr. Tom Griffith as Father Time sings splendidly, his rich, sonorous voice being heard to advantage in "The Storm Fiend." Miss Cissy Loveday as the Fairy wins all hearts with her realisation, and the chorus is well-balanced.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, the Franco-British Animated Picture Company; Managing-Director, Mr. Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—This place of amusement is now under new proprietorship, and it is satisfactory to note that the services of Mr. Waters, who has thoroughly established himself a favourite here, are still retained. The entertainment this week is excellent, and besides a grand array of pictures, the turns supplied by Connie Mascott, comedienne, and Cliff and Kean, comedians, are much enjoyed.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. D. Bradbury.—Consul the Great is here this week, and his performance is quite a sensational one, a large house assembling on Monday night and looking on with wonderment. Rastus and Banks are delightful coloured entertainers; Captain Devereux's dogs are seen to advantage in their sketch The Streets of London; Johnny Holland's company score well in the sketch My Friend Boots; Lily Arthurs is a charming comedienne and dancer; and Margaret Radcliffe's illustrated songs are much enjoyed. The Primrose Comedy Four score in a song-scena, and the pictures are good.

WEST STANLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mark H. Lindon; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Kelly; Stage-Manager, Mr. Angus.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is appearing here in The Soldier's Wedding to crowded audiences. Mr. Wingold Lawrence is good as Jack Brown; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb portrays Colonel Jas. Graham effectively; Mr. Johnny Chippendale is an ideal Tommy Spratt; Little Albert is all that can be desired as Teddy Munroe; Mr. Chas. Davy is excellent as John Marks; Miss Dorothy Richardson is very successful as Nancy Lee; and Peggy Munroe is played by Miss Mabel Lowe. All the other characters are in excellent hands.

VICTORIA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Montrose.—Topping the bill here are Leonard Charborn's Twelve Stars, under the able direction of the manager and producer, Mr. Richard L. Griffiths; the "Stars" sing and dance well, and their concerted numbers are excellent. Great Scot, the London fireman, does a fine juggling turn on an unsupported ladder; the Three Bordellas, in the performance on the silver rings, supply a fine show, combining youth, strength, and talent; the Prinellas, in their country scene, are very good; Smith and Johnson, the clever coloured duo, are excellent; and the Bioscope concludes a good show.

WEYMOUTH.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. J. Nobbs.—Mr. John A. Thomson is again producing one of his annual pantomimes here, and the one selected for Weymouth is Sinbad the Sailor. The opening scene is the Abode of the Wreckers (the Old Man of the Sea), in which the Fairy Elphin is discovered, the opening chorus of the Nymphs of the Sea Queen and the Sea Queen's song being the special feature. Scene 2 represents the Sailing of the Ship, with a bold chorus of sailors and peasants, introducing a rustic and nautical ballet with fine effect. Scene 3 is the Cabin of the Saucy Sarah, in which some excellent comedy is introduced. Scene 4, on Board the Saucy Sarah, includes various political allusions to the rejection of the Licensing Bill and the Suffragettes, and has a capital duet between Mrs. Sinbad and the captain. Scene 5, the Seashore, and 6, the Island and Diamond Valley, increase in interest the progress of Sinbad. Scene 7 represents the stealing of the jewels, and Scene 8 is the Lone Hut of the Wood, in which the Sea Queen and attendants make a charming picture. Scene 9, On the Way to the Palace, introduces all the characters going to the Palace of Good Intent (Scene 10), when the revelries include the Coral Troupe of lady dancers; the Spadonis, in their novel duets; Miss Amy Cooper, soprano; the Sisters English, expert dancers; the Three Sisters Macrae, in their international dances; and Oak and Elm, vocal comedians. Mr. Sydney W. Morton is producing the pantomime for Mr. John A. Thomson, and the courteous business-manager is Mr. Henry Bowman.

WORKINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. McKenzie Morgan.—This bright little house has a smart and well-varied programme this week, special attention being paid to the festive season and the demand for full enjoyment. Among the turns are the Miners' Quartet. Three only appeared, however, on the night of our visit, and this trio of "lads from Lancashire" gave full voice to some pathetic part-songs, which drew long plaudits from sympathetic hearers. Jock Cameron, with his breezy songs of "Bonnie Scotland" is always a favourite here, and his rendering of "Aberdonian" and "Jock McGrath" are decidedly good style—broad wit, with plenty of action, to say nothing of the kilt and twisted stick he carries in his mighty fist. Then we had Dan Bell, with his dolls and his ventriloquism; a decidedly clever operator with good patter and songs. The two unison dancers, James and Alexander, who were a feature last week, repeat their success; and the pictures are very good indeed.

YORK.—OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—The grand Christmas pantomime, Puss in Boots, produced and arranged by Mr. J. Collins, was presented her on Monday night. The piece, which was well staged, fully deserved the hearty applause it received from well-filled houses. Miss Ethel Beach makes an ideal Juan—she plays in an easy and natural style, and a promising future is predicted for this young actress; Miss Eva Ellis as the Princess was a great success—her songs were well received, and her dancing was graceful; as Lola Miss Elsie Don acted in first-class style, combining a pleasing personality with some good singing; the Fairy is also deserving of a word of praise; Mr. Wyn Weaver as King Komilfs was very clever, and, along with Mr. William Benson as the Widow, kept the house in roars of laughter; Mr. Arthur Watts and Mr. Algernon Lea as Sancho and Bancho cause much fun; and the comicalities of the two remaining sons, Messrs. Ferris and Farnley, are much appreciated; the specialities introduced by the Collins sextette of expert dancers are heartily applauded, and add considerably to the success of the performance; Mr. Harry Seymour as the Cat is most successful.

WHAT ARE MILLIONS TO THE MAN WHO IS ILL

Only a bitter mockery. The world is full of delights in which he cannot share. He can buy them but not enjoy them, and is poor despite his millions. This is specially true of the dyspeptic—the man who cannot digest his food. When the stomach ceases to effectually perform its natural work, food ceases to nourish and causes pain, heartburn, wind, acidity, and a host of other troubles which spoil life. Perfect digestion is the foundation of sound health, and that is assured by the use of the world- renowned digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seig el's Syrup.

Mrs. S. A. Carter, of Welbeck Street, Castleford, Yorks, writes on April 13th, 1908: "I lost much time and money upon medicines which quite failed to cure me of indigestion before Mother Seigel's Syrup was recommended to me. But soon after I began to take that remedy a new world opened to me. I could again breathe freely, my appetite retu rned, and so did my old strength and energy."

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP

Mother Seigel's Syrup is now also prepared in Tablet Form as Mother Seigel's Syrup Tablets. Price 2s. 9d.

PROVINCIAL PANTOMIMES.

"DICK WHITTINGTON AND HIS CAT," AT DUNDEE.

Mrs. Lillie Williams produced her second pantomime this season at the Gaiety Theatre, Dundee, on Monday evening, the 21st inst. The subject of Mrs. Williams's second venture is Dick Whittington and His Cat, which had such a send-off that the fortunes of this popular house are assured for many weeks to come. That two pantomimes of such excellence can be produced at the same house in one season speaks volumes for the enterprise and discriminating taste of the producer. No expense has been spared in the dressing and staging of the production, which is certainly the very best of the many notable pantomime successes at this house. The book, written by the late Fred Locke, is original and up to date; the costumes, designed and executed by Mrs. Tom Verney and her assistants, are exceedingly bright and dainty; while the music, arranged by Mrs. Williams herself, comprises all the latest and most successful songs. The magnificent scenery, which has all been specially painted by Mr. Robert Miller, the talented scenic artist of the Gaiety, is very elaborate and tasteful. The pantomime is played in nine scenes, viz.: Scene 1, Bow Belfrey; scene 2, Old Cheape; scene 3, Fitzwarren's Emporium; scene 4, Highgate Hill; scene 5, The Docks; scene 6, Saloon on s.s. Unicorn; scene 7, The Sultan of Morocco's Palace; scene 8, Cripplegate; scene 9, The Palace Gardens. Some of the cloths are unusually brilliant examples of scene painting. Old Cheape is a very effective setting; Highgate Hill is a delightful rural picture; the Palace scene is without doubt the first of its kind ever seen on this stage, and is calculated to turn any Eastern potentate green with envy; while the palace gardens is a very tastefully arranged tableau. There is quite a constellation of stars to fill the principal rôles. Miss Gertie Douglas as Dick makes a handsome and dashing boy, she is endowed with a charming personality and a graceful figure, and at once installed herself as a popular favourite. She has some capital songs to sing, her most notable successes being "I don't care if there's a girl there," and "Sue, Sue, Sue." In the former song she introduces with much effect a hand-mirror, which reflects the limelight over any part of the darkened building. Miss Hetty Lind's Alice is a charmingly sweet creation. Her vocal items are also rendered excellently, particularly good being "A tiny seed of love," which is encored over and over again. Miss Cicely Kent as Fitzwarren's cook is responsible for the cleverest comedy creation seen here for a long time. She is full of life and movement, and scores a great hit with her clever parody on "Il Bacio." Mr. Sam Thomson as Idle Jack simply revels in the part, his comic business keeping the house in continuous roars of merriment. Nothing funnier could possibly be imagined than his extraordinary nautical song and dance, while his scenes with Miss Cicely Kent (Fitzwarren's cook) are ludicrous in the extreme. He has certainly made a sensational hit. Mr. Harry Loftus as Captain Bailey also works hard to keep the fun going. He has a capital topical song. "As long as the world goes round," in which he introduces a very amusing verse anent Carrie Nation, the American saloon smasher, who was making the local publicans tremble in their shoes the other week here. He also sings a very comical ditty, entitled "Onions," for which he is encored. Mr. Phil Conway is an excellent Alderman Fitzwarren, and is much applauded for his song, "Every fellow's in love with a girl." Mr. Michael Kemble makes a dramatic King of Rats, his splendid voice being heard to much effect in "The White Squall" and other songs which fall to his lot. Miss Osceola Martinek as the Princess is altogether excellent, her artistic dance in the Palace scene being rewarded with rounds of applause. Miss Olive Carter as the Fairy Queen of Cats also made a very favourable impression, her singing and deportment being excellent. A special word of praise is due to Mr. Harry Gilmore for his clever impersonation of the cat. Excellent specialities are introduced by Joseph Carter's Ten Corneville Belles, the Ten San Tan Girls (under the direction of Mr. Victor Carter), Miss Osceola Martinek, and the Imperial Quartette of Glee Singers. The whole production on the opening night went without a hitch from rise to fall of curtain. Mr. Phil Conway was responsible for the stage management, which was faultless, and the augmented orchestra played skilfully under the direction of Mr. Robert Beaumont, R.C.M. Mrs. Lillie Williams was greeted with a perfect storm of applause, as at the close she thanked her patrons heartily for their warm reception of the pantomime. She has undoubtedly "spotted a winner" in Dick Whittington, and her courteous business-manager, Mr. Frank Percival, will have his hands full for many weeks to come.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE" AT FLEETWOOD.

Messrs. Lintone and Hunter are producing their pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, at the Queen's Theatre, Fleetwood, this week. On Monday night the piece went with great swing and smoothness. The first scene opens at the Port of Hull with the arrival of Atkins. A deep plot is laid for the abduction of Crusoe and his sweetheart, and they are taken as prisoners on board the Saucy Polly, where their faithful followers are also found. The ship is wrecked, and a most effective scene is made of Crusoe alone on the raft. Crusoe finds a lonely island, and outwits Atkins, the "bold, bad pirate." Man Friday turns up and assists Crusoe to escape from the Cannibals. In the next scene, Polly Perkins, Crusoe's sweetheart, appears, and Crusoe "pops the question." Polly having given her consent, all are invited to a great fête and rejoicing at King Harkee's Palace, where a most brilliant scene is enacted, and all ends happily. The company is an exceptionally strong one, Mme. Lizzie Lintone not only acting with delightful vim, but singing in a most pleasing manner; Miss Elina Barton makes a charming Polly Perkins, her songs "Fishing" and "Jeremiah" being very successful; Billy Crusoe and Alice Perkins, his sweetheart, are ably portrayed by Miss Jenny and Miss Louie Raymond; the Dame is undertaken by Mr. Watty Griffin in the funniest possible manner, his antics convulsing the audience; Miss Lily Raymond gives a rendering of the Fairy Queen, excelling in every way; and Miss Ida Conway is clever as Captain Kettle. Miss Ruby Lynne is great as Buting, her sailor's hornpipe bringing down the house; Piccalily has an able exponent in Miss Hilda Fern, and a host of others fill up a very strong cast. The specialities are exceptionally strong, honours being shared by the Lintone Trio, "England's Greatest Concertina Players," a title they well merit, and the Sisters Raymond, vocalists and international dancers, who are vociferously recalled nightly. Serpento, the Human Eel, is a very clever contortionist, and Stylvo, with his dog Rennie, is interesting on one stilt. Wright and Wrong are amusing patterers, and Victor Hunter's Military Maids and Naval Cadets give a smart vocal turn. That Mr. Watty Griffin is an able producer and stage-manager is witnessed by the excellence of the show, and Mr. Victor Hunter is the acting-manager, finding time in addition to sing one of his popular songs, which is always well received.

"DICK WHITTINGTON," AT THE GAIETY, GLASGOW.

Pantomime reigns supreme twice nightly for the next few weeks here. On Monday evening Dick Whittington was introduced to good houses, and was received in a manner that augurs well for a most successful run through the festive season. The pantomime is exceedingly well-staged, and completed in ten scenes, every one of which shows evidence of labour, thought, and taste on the part of Mr. Jack Morris, under whose direction the show is produced. Particular mention might be made of the scenes, Highgate Hill by Moonlight, On the Strene, and The Emperor's Palace, where the effects are most striking and worthy of all praise. From The Conspirator's Cave to the climax in The Emperor's Palace the patrons are treated to a two-hour entertainment choke-full of good things—catchy songs, smart dancing, and comic interludes. To the company nothing but compliments are due for as bright and well-balanced a programme as one could wish for. As an outstanding success might be mentioned Miss Dinah Morris, who takes the title-rôle. Her display was of undoubted merit, her singing, dancing, and general deportment being delightfully free and dainty, quite meriting the reception she received. Frances Drew as Alice gave a most captivating performance. her singing being specially appreciated. Miss Bessie Morris as Capt. Kettle, although carrying avoirdupois not generally associated with the lithe and swarthy creation of Cutcliffe Hyne, yet gave a spirited and sprightly representation. In Sam Morris and Geo. Reeves, as Idle Jack and Sarah respectively, the company possess a couple of comedians who can simply draw the laugh at pleasure, their comic business being at once fresh and enjoyable, and as a consequence their efforts reaped a just reward. In Scene 3 Geo. Reeves made quite a hit with a topical song, entitled "Only a Dream." Sid Morris as the Cat may be considered a success, giving a modest yet capital representation of Dick's feline companion. Mr. George Bailey as Fitzwarren and Mr. Fred Martin as Emperor of Morocco were also prominent. The dresses are on a most lavish scale, and the show in its entirety means a busy time for the genial manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.

"PUSS IN BOOTS" AT PAISLEY.

Mr. J. H. Savile on Saturday evening produced his annual pantomime. This year it is Puss in Boots, and it promises to be as successful, if not more so, than any of his eleven previous Christmas entertainments. Everyone knows the moving history of the miller's son who was unjustly deprived of his share of the family property by a greedy elder brother, and condemned to seek his fortune in the world. If it had not been for the cat he took with him, and the kind assistance of a good fairy met on the road, he might have had to enlist or do something of the kind, but by the above-mentioned help he becomes a peer, and finally wins the hand of a charming princess—all these things are indelibly recorded in the archives of every nursery. Mr. J. Hickory Wood has written the book of the piece, and Mr. Savile put it upon the stage of his Paisley theatre in the form of a very amusing pantomime. Miss Daisy Morell takes the part of Colin, who, at all events before the play begins, is a hard-working lad. Subsequently, being disinherited, as has been stated, he goes forth to try his luck, and fortunately meets with the good fairy Felina (Miss Topsy Johnson), who presents disguised Puss, otherwise Mr. Glen Alva, with a pair of boots. The first effect of this shoe leather is decidedly painful to poor Puss, the second is to invest him with a voice and the power to walk upright. Henceforth he wears human dress, and looks very well in it. The fairy has bestowed a peerage on the miller's son along with the boots for his cat, and this justifies him in making love to the King's only daughter, Princess Ivy, gracefully and prettily rendered throughout by Miss Katie Yates. Subsequently, this clever young lady gives the bad ogre Digestus (Mr. Arnold Harley) something unhealthy to drink in a loving cup, and thus she removes the chief obstacle to her union with the lucky young adventurer now known as the Marquis de Carabas. Everything ends happily in the final splendours of the King's Carabas Castle. From beginning to end the pantomime is literally alive with fun and frivolity, catchy songs, graceful and clever dancing, and brilliant music. The scenery is adequate to the production, and includes some ten sets, of which number four are especially worthy of mention as being of artistic merit, viz., The Old Mill, The Rose Garden, Laburnam Grove, and The King's Palace. As for the cast, principals, chorus, and ballet work together most smoothly and harmoniously, there being observable an esprit de corps that is eminently satisfactory. Miss Daisy Morell plays the part of Colin, and is quite an ideal representative of the hero of the story. Her excellent stage presence, her spirited acting, and her ability as a vocalist place her in the front rank of principal boys. She sings "I don't care if there's a girl there" and "Much obliged," and joins in the duet "Mandy" with Miss Katie Yates, who as Princess Ivy is quite chic and fascinating. The success of Miss Yates in the songs "A tiny seed of love" and "Connemara" is unbounded, her pleasing voice being heard to great advantage. Miss Florence Lewis as Prince Rudolph plays with dash and spirit throughout, while her singing of "Johnny, there's a locket in your pocket" and "Way down in Colon Town" catches on at once. Miss Moyna Hill is a winsome little lady, whose neatness of figure makes Phyllis a dainty personage indeed. Miss Mabel Earle and Miss Jessie Jukes as Jack and Jill work cleverly together, their singing and dancing being particularly good and forming a distinctive feature of the pantomime. Miss Topsy Johnson looks very pretty as the Fairy Queen, and her vocalism stamps her as a capable artist. First favourite amongst the comedians is unquestionably Mr. Walter Kooney, who as King Grabbus is irresistibly funny. He is full of quaint quips and cranks, which fairly convulse the audience. He scores also in the song "A to Z," and, with his partner, Mr. Harry Karr (Dame Shortly) joins successfully in the "£ s. d." duet. Mr. Karr as the Dame proves himself a comedian of resource, acting with much dry humour and cleverness, and never at any time with the slightest trace of vulgarity. Mr. Fred C. Fields as Baron Rumphiz has a part that as yet scarcely brings out his unquestionable ability and versatility as a comedian, but he makes the most of his chances, and scores in all he has to do. With Miss Florence Lewis he, on two occasions, is given opportunities of displaying his vocal abilities. As a Scotch comedian Mr. J. K. Macfarlane in the rôle of Sandy Macmuggles is vastly entertaining, and sings a couple of songs that go off capitally. As Slyboots, King of Cats, Mr. Glen Alva works hard and honestly for success, and secures it, his agile dancing alone bringing him rounds of applause; while Mr. Arnold Harley acquits himself sufficiently well in depicting the ogre Digestus. Special mention must be made of the clever La Belle Trio of dancers—Misses Edna Evelyn, Becca Stirling, and Lily Bell—who dance with commendable vivacity, and are duly rewarded by recalls. The costumes are of exceptional beauty, and are the work of Messrs. J. A. Harrison, Ltd., Miss Mary Welsh, and Miss Nellie Walters. The scenery, which reflects great credit on the artists, is designed and executed by Mr. J. J. Markwell and Mr. John M. O'Farrell; while the machinery and mechanical effects work smoothly under the guidance of Mr. Jack Murdy, the properties also being invented by him. Mr. W. Morton displays fresh wonders in the electric effects, as does also Mr. W. Cosgrove with the lime-light arrangements he has introduced. The appropriate music, arranged and composed by the chef d'orchestre, Mr. Bert W. Stephens, is bright, catchy, and pleasing, and he deserves praise for the success achieved in his department. The pantomime was produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Savile, with the services of Mr. Bernard A. Leslie in the responsible part of stage-manager, a position in which he appears to be an adept.

"LITTLE ALADDIN" AT WIDNES.

A huge audience assembled at Mr. James Kiddie's popular theatre on Monday, when he produced a new version of Aladdin. The book is written by Mr. Kiddie, in collaboration with the veteran Mr. Joe Burgess. While the story is developed on the time-honoured lines, the libretto is very bright and smart, plenty of scope being afforded the five capable comedians engaged. Most merrily did it run on Monday, and of first-night hitches and lapses there was almost an entire absence. Miss Marie Beresford is the Aladdin, and exercises a fascination over the whole house. With "If there's a girl there" she makes one of the hits of the evening. "A Yorkshire girl" and "Won't you dance the 'Merry Widow' waltz with me?" also go extremely well. Miss Lily Brammer is the Princess Badroulbadour, and fairly brings down the house by her dainty rendering of "If I should plant a tiny seed of love in the garden of your heart." "Lovelight" is another capital number for which she is responsible. Miss Lily Innes is a dashing Pekoe, and wins golden opinions with a clever rendering of "Every fellow loves a girl." Her duet with Miss Lye Jefferies, "See-saw, Esau" went with great éclat. Miss Lye Jefferies is a graceful Fan Tit, and handles the popular "Antonio" song with great effect. "Carnegie" is another good number with which she wins applause. The specially-written part of Darkey Diablo gives Miss Emmie Milstead many chances, of which she is not slow to avail herself. Her singing of "The Lagoon" is an artistic treat. Vivacious throughout, her dancing and vocalisation are equally admired. Miss Rose Parazeer is a handsome Genie of the Ring, and the numbers allotted to her—"Fairyland" and "The silver lining"—are rendered in talented style. Comedy is a strong feature of the pantomime, and the gags and quips of the funny men are many and varied. The great little Harry Pleon plays the Widow Twankey on original lines, the lady becoming a refined, if eccentric, person of the "Merry Widow" type. Mr. Pleon sings "From Poverty-street to Golden-square" and "I never said a word" with excellent effect. Mr. Joe Bell gets every bit of humour possible out of the part of Wishey Washee; Mr. Walter Purvis as Abanazar indulges in some screaming mock dramatics; Mr. Joe Burgess as the Emperor maintains all his old popularity; and Messrs. Ray and Ross as Chinese policemen do the knockabout work with entire acceptability, and are also guilty of many puns and gags. The pantomime is in twelve scenes, which reflect high credit upon Mr. Jas. Greenhalgh and the local staff. The street in Pekin, the Magic Cave, and both the Palace sets are fine examples of the scenic artist's craft, and the electrical effects employed greatly enhance the impression made in the Cave scene. The dresses are elaborate and pleasing, Mesdames Lord and Ryder being responsible for them. The original vocal and incidental music has been composed by Messrs. Bert Harding and Geo. Burton, while Miss Mabel Milstead, the première danseuse, has arranged the graceful marches and groupings. The ballet knows its work thoroughly, and the large chorus sing tunefully. The stage-manager is Mr. Edward Chesters, and the production took place under the immediate supervision of Mr. James Kiddie. Mr. John S. Kershaw wielded the bâton admirably. The pantomime will go on tour.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

On Friday evening, Dec. 18, the pupils of Mr. B. Soutten gave a performance of dancing and an original wordless play. In the first part of the programme, devoted to solo dances, a youthful pupil, Miss Ellaline Mills, performed an Irish Jig and Miss Ethel Levy was very successful in a Sorella (Danse Brésilienne); while Miss Winifred Linder in her graceful Fan Dance received no fewer than three recalls. A dance arranged to Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," given by Miss Phyllis Munro, proved very effective; and the Japanese dance from The Jewel Maiden (Pascal), with its handsome picturesque costumes, and the clever dancing of the Misses Gertrude Ketchell, Ethel Levy, Hilda Brooker, and Phyllis Munro, was an attractive feature in the programme. Miss Ruby Helder sang "Salve Dimora," and the Misses Norah M. Stollery and Edith Romea were heard in a folk song, "The Keys of Canterbury." Other clever pupils of Mr. Soutten were Miss Molly Monnahan, Miss Ellaline Mills, and Miss Ethel Levy, who gave respectively a tambourine dance, solo dance, (Pas del Fleurs, Delibes), and "Anitra's Tanz" by Grieg. The second part contained Estrella, an original musical wordless play, written and composed by Marguerite Barrellier (Mrs. Barnett), a student of the Guildhall School. Estrella is in three scenes, and the plot, although simple, was certainly effective. In the first scene Estrella is getting her father's supper, and tries to hurry up the old man, as she expects her lover Paolo; but Estrella's father does not approve of the poor lover, and tells her the rich Marquis de Monte Fiasco wants to marry her. Of course, Estrella prefers poverty and Paolo to money and the Marquis, and her father in a rage goes off to bed vowing she shall marry the Marquis, and the first scene ends with a dance by the lovers. In the second scene Paolo laments his poverty. An old gipsy woman enters, and after giving her bread and water, Paolo has the idea of disguising himself as a gipsy and telling the fortune of the Marquis as he comes that way to Estrella's home. The Marquis presently arrives, attended by his footman bearing a jewel casket, by means of which he hopes to win Estrella. Paolo then tells his fortune. The third scene is the same as the first, namely, Guglielmo's Cottage, and Estrella's father is trying to get her to accept the Marquis, but without success. When the rich suitor arrives Estrella dances a minuet with him, but turns a deaf ear to his proposal and leaves the room. Paolo, still disguised as a gipsy, enters and informs the Marquis that the only way to win her is to be gay and amusing, and not offer jewels, which he demands as a fee. The foolish Marquis falls into the trap, and when Estrella returns she is amazed to find him dancing gaily about the room; but on the Marquis telling the father his plan, the old man, no doubt thinking such a fool no fit husband for his daughter, promptly kicks him out of the room, and when Paolo comes gives his blessing to the young couple. The music which accompanies this little story is well written and cleverly adapted to the action, and in the second scene a really charming minuet, admirably suited to the courtly dance, does the composer great credit. There is a short introduction to each act, the music being skilfully played by a small orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Philippe Thomas, A.G.S.M. The composer herself played Estrella with excellent results; and a handsome and gallant Paolo was forthcoming in Miss Hilda M. Brooker. As the Marquis de Monte Fiasco Miss Gertrude Ketchell displayed great talent both in her acting and dancing; while the tall footman of Mr. B. Hatton-Sinclair was extremely comic. Messrs. Clarkson provided the handsome costumes. Estrella was received with great favour, and in response to a most hearty call Mr. B. Soutten came before the curtain.

The charity performances at Her Majesty's (Opera House), Workington, noted in these columns last week, raised about £120 for the deserving poor—a result to be proud of in these hard times. Bluebeard opens on Saturday.

ADVERTISING ON THEATRE CURTAINS.

In the City of London Court on the 16th inst., before his Honour Judge Lumley Smith, K.C., an action was brought by Mr. Abram E. Abrahams, 26, Great Eastern-road, Stratford, against Mr. J. Bannister Howard, proprietor of the Theatre Royal, King's Lynn, 15, Clifford's Inn, Fleet-street, to recover the sum of £83, being damages for breach of agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendant dated Nov. 4, 1904, by which the defendant agreed to show plaintiff's advertising curtain and to let to the plaintiff part of the programme of the Theatre Royal, King's Lynn, for a definite period and for a definite number of nights. The defendant, it was said, had failed to perform his part of the agreement, and plaintiff now demanded damages. The £83 was made up of one quarter of the amounts payable to the plaintiff by the several advertisers on the programme and curtain at the Theatre Royal, King's Lynn, the advertisers having refused to pay that proportion by reason of the fact that they had not had fifty-two weeks' exhibition of their respective advertisements. Plaintiff further said that the defendant had agreed with him to exhibit the curtain and programme for one year, whereas they were only exhibited for thirty-nine weeks. As the period contracted for was for one year, he contended that he was entitled to the damages sued for.

Mr. Charles, plaintiff's counsel, said the defendant sublet the programme and curtain to one Pareezer, who used the theatre as a music-hall, giving two shows a night. The defendant was now urging that each of those two shows a night constituted two exhibitions, when the agreement provided that the advertisements were to be exhibited "every night." Judge Lumley Smith said evidently the question was for him to construe the contract as to what constituted nightly performances. The onus was upon the defendant. Mr. Pareezer was called by Mr. Hales, counsel for the defence, and he said that he took over the theatre on Aug. 5, and that he was the present lessee of it. He was aware of the plaintiff's contract for advertising on the theatre curtain and programme. The plaintiff wrote him a letter asking him to carry out the contract. He wrote back saying that he declined to do so because plaintiff had not paid him (witness) anything, but that as defendant Howard was a friend of his he was willing to keep the curtain up without charge until the contract had expired. He commenced advertising on the programme on Aug. 5, 1907. By showing the plaintiff's advertisements at every performance, at the beginning, during the interval, and at the end, he claimed to have carried out the contract, and therefore the present action was without foundation. When variety performances were given at the theatre he gave two shows a night, and then six times the number of people saw the plaintiff's advertisements. There was always a much larger attendance for variety shows at the theatre than for dramatic performances. At the variety shows the audiences were entirely different, although the same programme was presented before the public to the two distinct audiences. At the variety show he got 600 to 800 people in one performance, whereas for dramatic entertainments the attendances were 200 to 300, or if it was exceptionally good, 400. He had a good deal of experience in such matters, having been connected with the theatrical stage for twenty-three years. In his opinion the advertisers had derived three times more benefit from the variety shows than from dramatic performances. He ceased to continue the plaintiff's advertisements on the curtain and programme because they had been exhibited for more than the required number of performances.

Mr. Charles said the plaintiff was entitled to go on thirteen weeks more to make up his year.

The witness replied that if the Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was in the right on that matter he was quite willing to give him thirteen weeks more advertisements.

Mr. Charles said they were quite unable to accede to any such suggestion, because the contract had been broken and plaintiff had entered into contracts to advertise with people in various towns in various parts of the North of England.

Judge Lumley Smith, K.C., said he must hold that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and he held that the contract would only have been satisfied if the plaintiff's advertisement had been exhibited once nightly for a year. The defendant or those representing him had chosen to give the plaintiff six exhibitions nightly, but in his view those six performances nightly did not count as six exhibitions. That could not be held to satisfy the contract as six exhibitions. The plaintiff was entitled to be advertised a certain number of nights, and if defendant chose to exhibit advertisements six times each night that was his affair. He gave judgment for the plaintiff on the claim and referred the amount of damages to the Registrar for assessment with liberty to report to the Court.

Mr. Charles said if the plaintiff's damages had to be proved strictly it would be necessary to call 150 witnesses, and defendant would probably have to pay £300 expenses. Judge Lumley Smith said he could not go into that.

THE NEW GRAND, OLDHAM.

The inside of the New Grand Theatre and Opera House, Oldham, now presents a very cosy appearance, the various fittings and upholstery giving a bright and luxurious finish to the house. The architectural feature of the auditorium has been greatly influenced by the construction, a special feature being the steelwork, enabling the appearance of a three-tiered house by a two-tiered construction, giving a lofty and spacious character to each tier. The box façades are treated in a classical manner, the draperies being from Messrs. Waring and Gillow, of Manchester. The furnishing has been admirably done by Messrs. A. R. Dean, Birmingham. Mr. J. W. Cawdery, of London, is responsible for the stage and fittings, the work being done in Canadian maple. The stage will compare with any in the provinces. The dimensions are as follows:—Stage to grille 80ft., width 83ft., depth 45ft., and will take cloths 32ft. by 24ft., and ample room is supplied to stage any opera or drama on the road. The fittings are all on the latest principle, and in addition there is a large scene dock, carpenters' room, and property room. The dressing-rooms are situated behind the stage, separated by a corridor, and are well-appointed in every respect, the walls being tiled, hot and cold water laid on, and the rooms are lighted both by gas and electricity, giving every comfort to artists, being well ventilated and heated. Last, but not least, a band-room is supplied for the instrumentalists. The ventilation of the theatre is supplied by a system of fans, and electricity is the main feature for lighting, with gas as a stand-by in case of emergency. The interior is decorated in white and gold, giving a splendid appearance to the auditorium, and the ventilation is carried out by fans situated behind each tier. Mr. Samuel Mayall has been appointed acting-manager. He has occupied the position of manager with Messrs. Levy and Cardwell, Miss Mary Austin, and E. Vivian Edmonds, and also with the Primrose Quartette. Mr. Halkyard will take up the duties of musical directorship. Mr. J. Bellis is the stage-manager, Mr. Tom Hough electrician, and Mr. Will Jeffrey the property master. Mr. H. Le Maistre, the well-known scenic artist, has painted the proscenium border and wings, and also the magnificent act drop. A strong and capable cast has been engaged by Mr. Dottridge for the pantomime of Aladdin, which is to be produced on Christmas Eve.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SYDNEY, Nov. 10.—The Wren and Musgrove Opera Company opened at the Criterion on the 7th in Maritana. The favourite ballad opera was composed by Vincent Wallace, partly in Sydney and partly in Parramatta. This matter was settled by the composer's sister, Mme. Bushelle, who told it to the wife of the writer, who was her pupil. So that the opera has a special charm for the citizens of Australia's metropolis. Miss Rosina Buckmann, who is the latest Maritana, is from New Zealand, and possesses all the vivacity, attractiveness, and vocal qualifications which go to make the rôle a success. Here, a few years ago, in Alfred Hill's Moorish Maid, the lady made a favourable name, now further enhanced. Mr. Wilson Pembroke was the new Don Cæsar, and his robust style and clear, resonant voice, reached out for applause every time. An established Australian favourite is Mr. George H. Snazelle, whose King was his own, and good at that. Miss Tessa Byrne was evidently not told that we were accustomed to the Lazarillo music as it is written, without interpolated cadenzas. The Don José was Mr. McNaughton Duncan. He omitted the recitative to "No, my courage," as did also Mr. Pembroke the air, "All the world over."

"The Girl of the Golden West" is Mr. J. C. Williamson's present bill at the Royal. This is a strong drama of the old-time Californian diggings, where men of all nationalities gambled, swore, killed, and loved without limit, and with a rugged honesty unsmirched by puritanical pretence. Miss Tittell Brune has in the girl, Minnie, absolutely her best impersonation to date. As with all the company, without exception, she adopts the quaint manners and straightforwardness of her time, locale, and conditions, and whether teaching the rough diggers, evading their attentions, or giving herself up for her "first kiss" to the man she loves and trusts, she is excellent throughout. Mr. Thomas Kingston is the Ramerrez, alias Johnson, the road agent or highwayman, and he makes the character stand out in manly relief. It has many phases, but the determination to lead a honest life, born of his love for the girl who keeps a camp saloon, triumphs in the end. Mr. George Bryant gives a masterly portrait of Jack Rance, the sheriff and gambler, and a very fine performance is that of Mr. Leonard Willey, who is the bartender, Nick. Miss A. Kelly plays the only other female part, an Indian squaw, small, but carefully done, as is the Indian by Mr. Harry Tweeney. A genial digger, Sonora Slim, has Mr. Loring Fernie to care for him, and he makes him most enjoyable.

"The Merry Widow," with the advantage of Miss Betty Ohl's refined and graceful acting and fine singing, still holds Her Majesty's Theatre, and Mr. Williamson hints at no early change.

"A Miner's Trust," with Meynell and Gunn's dramatic campany, will run until the 13th at the Palace, and on the 14th Mr. H. R. Roberts, under Mr. Allan Hamilton's experienced direction, will introduce The Prince Chap to Sydney.

The Tivoli welcomed its proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards, back during the week. He comes with a long list of important and costly engagements. Meanwhile, the present company is in high and deserved favour.

SYDNEY, Nov. 17.—Mr. John Wren's National Opera Company revived on the 14th Les Cloches de Corneville, with Miss Rosina Buckmann as Germaine. The vivacious New Zealander made quite a hit in the part, singing the music most acceptably. Mr. Wilson Pembroke was the Marquis and Mr. Edward Wynn undertook the music of Grenicheux, both being distinctly careful. Mr. G. H. Snazelle relied on the comedy element as the Baillie, omitting the singing. The miser Gaspard was cared for by Mr. McNaughton Duncan. The gay Serpolette had Miss Stella Gastelle as her representative. Smaller parts were capably acted, and the chorus did good work.

The Governor, Sir Harry Rawson, Miss Rawson, and suite, attended the Royal on Saturday night to see The Girl from the Golden West, decidedly Miss Tittell Brune's best character.

Mr. H. R. Roberts was enthusiastically welcomed at the Palace on the 14th, when he appeared as William Peyton in The Prince Chap. It was a delectable performance, full of finesse and natural detail, and it charmed the audience into unusual demonstration. The scene in the first act with the juvenile Claudia was great, for Mr. Roberts is unique in his training of children. Claudia, the youngest, was cleverly acted by little Vera Huggett. The next act, by Miss Beryl Yates and the upgrown Claudia, was entrusted to Miss Justina Wayne, a pretty and artistic gradation from child to woman. Miss Vera Remée was the selfish Alice Travers to the very life.

The Tivoli has its vaudeville Napoleon, Harry Rickards, back at the helm, looking hearty. The Scotch collies, the McGregors, Frank and Jen Latona (very clever and popular), J. W. Rickaby, Fanny Powers, Nita Leete, Rochford and Hart, and the Four Rosebuds provide a Tivolian banquet of fun and music.

This reminds me that a new comedy drama, from Mr. Joseph L. Goodman's pen, called The Secret Wedding, is in rehearsal, and will be produced early in the coming year.

West's Pictures at the Glaciarium are a standard attraction, novelty being the managerial aim.

The National Amphitheatre has a big bill, including Gertie McLeod, Scotch comedienne; Allan Hart, Very, the Ventriloquist, and Gingah, the Cliff Quartette, Clare Keating, the Rowell Sisters, Morris and Wilson, the Hurchams, Florrie and Stella Ranger, the Driscolls, and Wally Edwards.

An instance of the predominance of Foote's favourite passion for jesting was afforded by the death of Holland, of Drury Lane Theatre. This performer was the son of a baker who lived at Chiswick: and having an early inclination, as well as certain abilities, for the stage, young Holland was brought out under the immediate patronage and tuition of Garrick; from whom if he did not catch his divine fire, he imitated his art so well in many instances, as to render himself very respectable in the line of his profession. Foote had a long intimacy and regard for him; and when Holland died of the small-pox, about the year 1768, he left our hero a legacy, and appointed him one of the bearers to his funeral; which last office he performed with a sincere sorrow. Looking in at the Bedford Coffee-house the same evening, he was asked whether he had attended the remains of his old friend to Chiswick? "Oh! yes, poor fellow," said he (the tears scarce dry upon his cheeks); "I have just seen him shoved into the family oven."

When Mrs. Abington returned from her first very successful trip to Ireland, Foote wished to engage her for his summer theatre, but in the meantime Garrick secured her for Drury Lane. Foote, on hearing this, asked her why she gave Garrick the preference? "I don't know how it was," said she, "he talked me over so by telling me he would make me immortal, that I did not know how to refuse him." "Oh! did he so? then I'll soon outbid him that way; for, come to me, and I will give you two pounds a week more, and charge you nothing for immortality."

A dull dramatic writer, who had often felt the severity of the public, was complaining one day to Foote of the injustice done him by the critics; but added, "I have, however, one way of being even with them; which is, by constantly laughing at all they say." "You do perfectly right, my friend," said Foote; "for by this method you will not only disappoint your enemies, but lead the merriest life of any man in England."

This is Mr. Robert Arthur's first pantomime, and yet it is his fifth at the Coronet. To explain the ambiguity, Dick Whittington at the Coronet is Mr. Robert Arthur's first pantomime to appear this festive season, and yet it is his fifth hardy annual. It is also the first West-End theatre pantomime, which heralds a busy week for the critics and all concerned. Dick Whittington is mounted and dressed on a lavish scale of magnificence, and the scenery, especially Old Covent Garden, Highgate Hill, The Palace of the Emperor (Morocco), and the closing scene of The King's Garden, is all pretty, tasteful, and gorgeous in the extreme; in fact, a thing of beauty to haunt the memory of old and young alike. It is needless to remark that plenty of fun is forthcoming when we state that Harry Randall is specially engaged for the part of the female head of the gastronomical department, Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes; and Mr. Edward Lewis and Alec Kendal are able assistants in the fun-making line; whilst plenty of pretty faces and comely graces are presented by the ladies representing the principal parts. The good old story of Dick Whittington and how, assisted by his wondrous feline friend, he became thrice Lord Mayor of London is pretty closely adhered to by Mr. Frank Dix. Just when Dick, the apprentice, is the approved suitor for the hand of Alice Fitzwarren, the alderman's daughter, his career is apparently ruined by the diabolical machinations of Idle Jack and Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes. The Emperor of Morocco has sent a special envoy to the alderman asking for a diamond of fabulous price and a cat to kill the rats which invade his kingdom. The diamond is stolen and concealed about Dick Whittington's person, so that he apparently stands discovered as the thief. The scene on Highgate Hill, where the Bow bells and the magic of a fairy vision persuade Dick that fame and fortune await him in London town, is the big one of the pantomime. It is notable, among other things, for the extremely natural antics of Dick Whittington's cat, and Mr. Johnny Fuller is possessed of a keen sense of humour and a nice observation of animal conduct; moreover, he is made up as a very pretty pussy, neat and well groomed and be-ribboned. There is also some capital fooling when Idle Jack (Mr. Edward Lewis) and Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes endeavour to kidnap the cat, so as to get the Emperor of Morocco's reward for exterminating the vermin which infest his domain. Perhaps its chief claim to notice, however, is the charming ballet, set to the "Raymond" overture music, by Madge Martin's troupe and the Six Canadian Girls. Miss Jean Gordon is a delightful dancer, light as a fairy, graceful as a gazelle, and she should go on improving into a much better position than that she now occupies. Miss Renée Rell and Gwen Thomson also dance most acceptably, the latter in a kind of "Salomé" dance in Act II., scene 1. Act I., scene 5, is really devoted almost entirely to the "funniosities" of Mr. Alec Kendal, who proves himself a most diverting comedian with a quiet, subtle sense of humour and a languorous, careless manner, which are keenly appreciated, and he keeps the audience convulsed with laughter while he remains upon the stage. After the embarkation at Wapping Old Stairs, with an interval for refreshment, we are transported in Act II. to the Palace of the Emperor of Morocco.

The plot thenceforward follows the usual lines. A realistic struggle ensues between Pussy and the Demon Rat, capitally represented by Mr. Ernest Laws, with a splendidly rendered "rat" song on the lines of "The Bogey Man." Then Dick, through the agency of his cat, grows rich beyond the dreams of avarice, and with marvellous magnanimity he appears to also make the fortunes of his whilom enemies, the arch-conspirators, Idle Jack and Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes. On the return to London of this plutocratic trio they find Alderman Fitzwarren starving, and his daughter Alice selling flowers in the street. Some knockabout fun in the kitchen especially with a portable Turkish bath and a vanishing feast, leads up to a short scene outside St. Bride's Church and the grand final tableau of the King's Garden, with Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes clad in a Directoire gown, with a huge matinée hat, and all and sundry clad in gala costume of the most costly kind. One of the "hits" of the pantomime, by the way, is Mr. Harry Randall's screamingly funny Spanish dance, in Act II., scene 1, and, of course, he drops in a sly dig at the suffragettes during the course of the evening. Mr. Jullien H. Wilson's music is tasteful and appropriate, and Mr. Frank Harrison, assisted by Mr. Bertram Noel, stage-manages in most masterful fashion. The costumes are designed by Signor Comelli and executed by Miss Hall, Miss Mitchell, Miss Ley, and assistants; scenery by J. Fowler Hogg and G. E. W. McKie; properties by George Corney and Phil Rogers; electrical effects by David Marshall and John Hall; mechanical effects by Harry James and Harry Krot; and the whole is produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Robert Arthur.

Miss Constance Hyem is a most captivating and vivacious hero, and as Dick Whittington her acting takes a standard quite above that usually associated with pantomime heroes. She sings very charmingly the pretty ballad "A tiny seed of love," and gives a most rousing rendition of "A White Man." We hope she will soon add to these the popular ditty "Oh, oh, Antonio!" to make the score complete. Miss Dorothy Firmin is well known to Coronet audiences, and as Alice Fitzwarren she is a most graceful, pretty, and winsome heroine, and sings and dances delightfully. "Some day" is perhaps her best vocal effort. Miss Anita Edis as the Moroccan Princess contrives to score considerably with her song "I'm his girl," and is a great favourite with the audience. The Sisters Currie and the Sisters Herbert dance with remarkable agility. Mr. Harry Randall is too well known to need overmuch eulogy; suffice it to say that his representation of the old female cook, Mrs. Desiccated Edwardes, is by no means the worst thing he has done, and his resource, alertness, and experience as a comedian par excellence help materially to send the pantomime forward to the goal of success. Mr. Alec Kendal is a drily humorous comedian, with a distinctive style of his own, and his mock heroic rendering of the parody on a well-known recitation in Act II., scene 2, is first-rate. Mr. Edward Lewis works with spirit and success as Idle Jack, and his songs, duets, and funny "business" all assist to keep the ball of fun rolling. Mr. Wally Scott as the Emperor of Morocco has his chance in the "Coon Soldier" song, and he takes good care to make the most of it. Mr. Bertram Noel makes much of a few lines as Farmer Hayseed; and, as before mentioned, the faithful cat of Mr. Johnny Fuller and the Demon Rat of Mr. Ernest Laws are entirely excellent. Mr. Walter Domonay creates a good impression as Captain Spanker, of the good ship Margarine. No doubt exists as to the success of the Coronet pantomime, which went with a wonderful swing for a first night performance.

A full dress rehearsal of the Lyceum pantomime was given on Tuesday evening, but the arrangements were so complete that the performance did not differ from an ordinary first-night production. Mr. Ernest Carpenter, the inventor and producer of the Christmas entertainment, deserves every credit for the perfection which was the distinguishing feature of Tuesday night's performance. Seldom, indeed, within our experience has a first production of a Christmas piece worked so smoothly. Very thorough has been the training of the young people engaged in the various scenes in which they figure prominently.

Of course everybody knows the story of Little Red Riding Hood, and there is no need to say much about the details of Mr. Carpenter's version of this popular nursery tale. The slight plot has had, of course, to be embroidered by certain incidents which are foreign to the story as told in the nursery, but we have a faithful representation of the thrilling scene where the wolf plays the part of grandmamma and gives the poor little heroine such a terrible fright. Mr. Carpenter has made Red Riding Hood a princess who has been abducted and left in charge of a kindly old school mistress, and she is eventually discovered by her brother Prince Rupert, who is as dashing and brave as the cavalier who in English history bore that name.

It can at the outset be said, without fear of contradiction, that in the countless stage productions founded on the ancient nursery tale, no more winsome representative of the heroine has been seen than little Miss Marjory Carpenter, the daughter of the producer of the pantomime, and one of the managing directors of the theatre. It was quite delightful to watch Red Riding Hood, not only because she is a charming little girl, who speaks her lines intelligently and dances with fairy-like grace, but because she is a born actress, who evidently takes a keen pleasure in her work. Careful training, of course, goes a long way, but it was not this alone that spelt success for little Marjory. In a charming bedroom scene Red Riding Hood sings a song to her toy "Teddy" bear and then puts him to bed, retiring there herself shortly after. Little Marjory Carpenter achieved quite a triumph at the preliminary performance, and is sure to make hosts of friends and admirers during the Christmas holidays. Then where could one find a handsomer or more spirited representative of Prince Rupert than Miss Dorothy Craske? In every particular she is well qualified for the part of the hero of the fairy story. Early in the evening she scores a big hit with the catchy chorus song, "Tom, My Bombardier," in which she has the assistance of a number of well-trained children. Later, Miss Craske sings the coon ditty "Sue, Sue, Sue" in such acceptable style as to elicit rapturous applause. Miss Alice Russon is a very dainty and attractive Margery Daw. She is, too, an admirable vocalist, one of her most effective contributions being "Meet me in rose-time." She also joins Miss Craske in a pretty duet. Miss Kitty Upton is a dashing Jack Horner, and Miss Marie Clements is a pleasing exponent of Miss Muffit and sings well. Miss Eva Kelland is an exceedingly refined and pleasing Fairy Queen, and her singing is of excellent quality. All the comic parts are excellently filled. Mr. Julian Rose as Baron Levinski is quite exceptionally clever in his portrayal of a Jew of a certain type. He has one long scene all to himself, but his patter is so funny that the audience do not tire of him. His ditty "Solomon" also had a good reception on Tuesday night, and a comic duet with Miss Craske was loudly applauded. Mr. Rose's character sketch is distinctly superior to the ordinary run of pantomime representation, and his co-operation in the scheme of amusement is invaluable. Mr. J. D. Hunter is a capital Dame Trot, and, while avoiding vulgarity, his representation is marked by genuine humour. Mr. James Forman and Mr. Peter Fannan appear as Jimmy Green and Johnny Stout, and their exertions in the cause of mirth are crowned with deserved success. Their cross-talk is extremely amusing, and their comic business with a property horse in one of the scenes excites much merriment. Mr. Charles Penrose as Simple Simon has a full share in the honours of the evening, furnishing a very amusing and successful embodiment of the guileless youth. Mr. Jack Roker gives a neat sketch of Gaffer Giles, and Mr. Harry Gardner makes good use of his opportunities as the donkey, De Frisky. Miss Alys Hardy as Tommy Tucker, Miss Naomi Barton as Mary Contrary, Miss Juliette Susini as Peter Piper, Miss Rita Pereira as Georgie Porgie, and Mr. Chas. Ludlow as Silly Sammy also deserve mention as clever contributors to the fun.

As regards the immortals, Mr. Espinosa puts much dramatic force into his representation of the Wehr Wolf, the Scarecrow, the Snake, and Mr. Punch. His dancing is remarkably good. Mr. S. Major Jones as the Spirit of Evil delivers his lecture in effective manner. Miss Eva Kelland is a very charming fairy, and secures a favourable verdict as a vocalist, one of her most successful contributions being "Shadowland."

As regards the scenery, the Village of Heydownderry and the wood in summer, with an instantaneous change to the wood in winter, are deserving of special mention. One of the most effective scenes is Toyland, in which the mechanical figures take part in a merry dance, little Red Riding Hood being a delighted participant in the merry-making. In the last scene, the Palace in the Happy Isles, illuminated fountains add greatly to its charming effect. The scenery is by Mr. E. C. Nicholls and assistants.

LYRIC OPERA HOUSE, HAMMERSMITH.

SURPRISE PRESENTATION TO MR. WENTWORTH CROKE.

The anniversary of the re-opening of the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, by Mr. Wentworth Croke was celebrated on the night of Saturday, the 19th inst., in an informal and most agreeable manner, made none the less so by reason of the complete surprise which it occasioned to that well-known gentleman when he was presented with a magnificent solid silver loving-cup by the heads of the theatre staff.

It will be remembered that Mr. Croke took over the theatre in the autumn of 1907, after the building had for some time been closed. He re-opened it on Boxing Day, 1907, and during the year just passing it has been a popular and profitable centre of amusement. In view of the necessary closing of the theatre from the 19th until the 26th for pantomime preparations, and in view of Mr. Croke's engagement to be present at his Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, on Boxing Day, it was decided by the chiefs of the staff at the Lyric to celebrate the proprietor's triumph a week in advance.

There were present, besides the heads of the staff (Messrs. Harry Drury, Geo. Dixon, H. Shirley, C. Goll, and J. Bishop), about forty members of Mr. Croke's various touring companies, also a number of other friends.

Mr. Fred S. Jennings, general manager to Mr. Wentworth Croke, in presenting the cup, said:—"Mr. Croke,—This being the last night of this season, I have—what is to me—a very pleasant task to perform. As you know, Saturday next is the first anniversary of your proprietorship of this theatre, and as—unfortunately for us—one of your pantomimes takes you on that day to Liverpool, to-night has been chosen to ask your acceptance of a small souvenir of the occasion subscribed for by the heads of the departments of this theatre. In handing you this cup, Mr. Croke, I am sure I voice the sentiments of my co-workers under your management in thanking you for a very comfortable and happy engagement during the twelve months we have had the honour of serving you. We wish you the best of luck in all your enterprises, and long life and good health to enjoy the fruits of your hard work and brilliant career as a theatrical manager. Now, boys, three cheers for the governor."

All present joined in loud and hearty cheers for Mr. Croke, accompanied with musical honours, and Mr. Croke's reply was no less cordial and sincere than the speech on behalf of the donors and the cheers of the company.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," he began, "I will not use the old stereotyped opening to the effect that this is the proudest moment of my life, because that would be idiotic, but I have had a most wonderful surprise. I had not the faintest inkling or remotest idea that anything of the sort was even thought of, and my surprise is only equalled by my gratification. In the course of my life I have had only two presentations made to me, and I value them beyond all my possessions and treasure them above everything. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate this gift, for words fail me to express the depth of my feeling. I may say I am rather a funny sort of man, and believe I am often misunderstood, but one thing I can confidently say—I have always tried to play the game straight. (Loud applause.) Another thing I am very grateful to be able to say, I have always been proud of the staffs working under me; I have always found them anxious to do all they could to make the highest success possible, always found them most loyal. On my part, I am as anxious for their welfare and happiness as I am for my own success, and when occasion comes I fight for them, and will fight for them, because I value their reputation more than my own.

"I have been a theatrical manager now for ten years, and have been very successful, but that success is not due to my own efforts, but to the ladies and gentlemen who have worked for me to make my ventures successful and profitable enterprises. Without their strenuous and generous support I could not have been here to-day. I try to make my gratitude to them practical, and I can truly say that I am a fairly good friend—I cannot say a very good friend—but a fairly good friend, and a very undesirable enemy.

"In conclusion—I won't say ladies and gentlemen any more, but boys and girls—in conclusion, I like you all to know that I'll see any one of you at the head office whenever you may have a grievance. I will give you all a friendly hearing, and offer each one of you, if you are working for me, an ample opportunity of telling me all you want to tell me about any difficulty.

"With regard to this theatre, Mr. Jennings wrote to me some eighteen months ago, commencing his letter: 'I believe you are a gentleman who has some millions in the bank' (I don't think!), and went on to ask whether I was open to buy a suburban theatre. I wrote back, saying, 'If you refer to the Lyric, Hammersmith, don't cross my path again,' to which Mr. Jennings made no reply. With characteristic shrewdness, however, he called upon me, bringing such an array of appalling suggestions, that he made me think I was a Carnegie-Rockefeller rolled into one. Eventually I took the theatre, and opened it last Boxing Day, and the results have been such that, if all my touring companies—and I have several—were to fail, I should always be able to earn an excellent living out of the Lyric. Once more, I am very grateful, and am the happiest man in England. I wish I could be with you on Boxing Day, but, though absent in the flesh, shall be proud to be with you in the spirit."

The inscription on the cup was as follows:—"Presented to Wentworth Croke by the members of the staff as a token of their esteem and respect on the occasion of the first anniversary of the re-opening of the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, Dec. 26, 1908."

WEYMOUTH PIER PAVILION AND THEATRE.

The formal opening of this handsome and much-needed place of amusement took place on Monday last, the 21st inst., the opening ceremony being performed by the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.C.V.O., who was accompanied by the Countess of Shaftesbury and supported by the Mayor and Mayoress and the Corporation of the Borough. The proceedings commenced by the singing of the National Anthem. The Town Clerk then read an address of welcome to Lord Shaftesbury, to which his lordship, in a few well-chosen words, referred to the connection his ancestors had with the Borough in the past, one of them being Governor of the town in the reign of Charles II., and two others being subsequently members of Parliament for the Borough, and he congratulated the Mayor and Corporation in having established such an admirable building for the purpose of providing amusement in this progressive watering place, and he trusted the venture would prove an unqualified success. His lordship then formally declared the building open, upon which hearty cheers were given at the request of the Mayor. An excellent programme of music was then rendered, and general approval was shown by all present, and it was universally felt that the success of the building is assured.

The history of the Pavilion is interesting. At a meeting of the Weymouth Town Council on March 9, 1906, the Improvements and Attractions Committee recommended: "That a pavilion be erected on the present pier in accordance with the provisions of the Weymouth and Melcombe Regis Corporation Act, 1887, at an estimated cost, including the necessary reclamation of land, building sea wall, &c., of £12,500, and that this committee be authorised to take such steps as may be necessary to enable such scheme to be carried into effect." In the absence of Alderman Groves, Mr. Bartle Pye proposed the adoption of the committee's report, which was seconded by Mr. Honeybon, supported by the Mayor, and carried by twenty votes to three.

The new pavilion is erected on a re-claimed part of the foreshore, which has been enclosed with a sea wall and now forms part of the pier structure. The concrete wall is built up from a foundation of ferro-concrete piles, and is a splendidly substantial bit of work. The pavilion scheme was carefully designed to come within the limits of deviation as laid down in the deposited plans for the Weymouth Corporation Act of 1887. To this end Mr. Barlow Morgan, the Borough Surveyor and Engineer, planned to widen the pier on the north side, near the pier entrance, a distance of 107ft., giving an increased width at the entrance of the pier of 76ft. There is now a total width of 143ft. on the pier proper, or, if the entrance to the jetty be also reckoned, of 180ft. The area, which has been reclaimed and which was filled up to the level of the old pier with sand, is 2,917 superficial yards, or half an acre and 16 poles. The sea wall is built of Hennebique ferro-concrete. After the completion of the wall the space was filled in with sand taken from the foreshore. Then a ferro-concrete foundation of piles and beams was constructed to support the weight of the building. The steel stanchions of the pavilion are carried by seventy-six ferro-concrete tiles 14in. by 14in., connected with longitudinal beams designed to act as footings for the pavilion walls.

On June 14, 1906, the Town Clerk reported that he had obtained the plans for the proposed reclamation of the site of the pavilion from the Board of Trade. On September 11th the Town Council accepted the tender of Messrs. Playfair and Toole, of Southampton, for constructing the retaining wall, their tender being the lowest, £3,786. The highest tender was £8,340 and the Borough Surveyor's covering tender was £4,600, so that it will be seen that the contract was well within Mr. Morgan's carefully-prepared estimate, and represented a saving of £824. While Messrs. Playfair and Toole were pushing on with the work of building the retaining wall, the Council turned their attention to the important question of the design and scope of the new pavilion. On March 18, 1907, the whole Council in committee decided that the Improvements and Attractions Committee should invite plans and specifications for the new pavilion at a cost not exceeding £8,000, such sum to be exclusive of the foundations, lighting, heating, and seating. The Council offered a sum of 100 guineas as a premium to the competitor whose plan was accepted, the approved plan becoming the property of the Corporation. In September the committee appointed Mr. J. B. Briggs, F.R.I.B.A., of Effingham House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C., to examine the plans and competitive designs for the new pavilion, and give an award upon them for a fee of fifty guineas. The assessor submitted his report the following month, and awarded the prize for the most suitable design to that with the nom de plume of "Expert." The committee accepted this award, and decided that the prize plans were the most suitable and attractive, and should be adopted for the new pavilion.

Tenders for the work of construction were accepted by the Council on March 12 last. Contract No. 1 for the general building was obtained by Messrs. Wakeham, of Portland and Plymouth, the price being £5,759. The tender of Messrs. Dorman, Long and Co., Ltd., of London and Middlesbrough, was accepted to supply and fix the steel and iron work for a sum of £2,129. The third contract for all the fibrous plaster was given to Messrs. A. R. Dean and Sons, of Birmingham, the price being £582. The total of these three important contracts was £8,370. Upon the completion of the retaining wall and the filling in of the reclaimed space, Messrs. Playfair and Toole were given the contract for the foundations at a cost of £675.

THE NEW PAVILION.

At the west end of the pavilion, which is approached by an oval carriage drive, with an island rest, admirably designed and executed by the Borough Surveyor and his staff, there are two entrances with ticket offices for the stalls, pit stalls, and pit, grand circle and circle. There is another entrance for the public to the pavilion on the pier, or south side of the building. This can be used as an additional door for the orchestra stalls. There is a ticket office and cloak-room, &c. The visitor passes through the swing doors into a handsome foyer, 34ft. by 50ft. This spacious and charmingly decorated vestibule creates a most favourable first impression. The handsome ceiling of the foyer is of fibrous plaster, worked in ornamental relief and picked out in gold. The walls are of ivory white, and there are a number of handsome mirrors. A solid and substantial floor is laid with wood blocks.

There are two buffets on the north side of the pavilion with access from the foyer, and in one case an entrance from the outside of the building. On the right and left of the main entrances are ladies' cloakrooms, and there is ample lavatory accommodation. Leading from the foyer is also a small manager's room. Access is gained to the main hall through two pairs of swing doors. We think everyone will agree that it is a superb and magnificent auditorium. The rich and ornate scheme of decoration is most impressive and pleasing to the eye. The great hall is 81ft. long and 60ft. in width. Everyone will be glad to hear that the auditorium is provided with a well-designed sloping floor, which will give a free and uninterrupted view of the stage from all parts of the hall. There are three gangways, one on each side of the hall and a third one in the centre. The orchestra space is sunk below the level of the main floor, so as to preserve a full and uninterrupted view of the stage for the audience. The orchestra stalls in the front of the house provide seating accommodation for 200 persons; the pit stalls contain another 300 seats, and there are 352 in the pit at the further end of the hall. Behind the pit is a spacious promenade. The grand circle, which advances about a third over the ground floor, has been constructed on very graceful lines, and adds much to the imposing appearance of the interior, while on either side adjacent to the stage are two private boxes. The grand circle and circle seats provide accommodation for 250 persons. The total seating accommodation is therefore 1,100. There is, however, another wide and spacious promenade at the rear of the circle seats; so that the holding capacity of the hall must be well over 1,500. There are numerous exits, all properly fitted for immediate emergency use, and they all meet in every respect the exacting requirements of the County Surveyor, the County Council being the responsible authority which has to be studied in these important details. There are two emergency stairs provided from the balconies to the ground floor, and emergency doors open direct on to the balconies, which are ample enough to hold all the occupants of the circle seats. The stream of those passing out from the first floor down the staircase will not interfere in any way with those leaving the exits on the ground floor, so that on no account will there be any risk of "cross currents." The balconies, which are a prominent feature of the new Pavilion, command splendid views of the harbour and bay, and the outlook from them will be a source of unfailing interest. There will be liberal seating provision in the side balconies, and the much larger space in the front of the pavilion will make a nice promenade, and probably be found to be just the spot for serving out-door afternoon tea.

In the interior of the Pavilion there is a large tea-room at the rear of the circle, measuring 60ft. by 25ft., with all the necessary accessories for catering for visitors. At the north side of the Pavilion (first floor) is a dining-room, and on the south side a fully-equipped kitchen. Access to this part of the building is obtained from the foyer by the main staircase, which divides right and left to the first floor. The spacious tea-room is over the foyer, in the front of the building.

The whole scheme of interior adornment impresses one with its richness and simple yet most effective beauty. The fibrous plaster work is most charmingly modelled in Louis XV. style, and the main hall has a most palatial and luxurious appearance. The panels into which the fibrous plaster decorations are divided are veritable works of art. The mouldings are very rich and stand out in beautiful relief, special care having been taken with them so as to give the most effective play of light and shade. The colour scheme is harmonious and beautiful, yet quite simple. The background is a pure ivory white, shading off to rich cream tones, while the mouldings and wealth of ornamental relief work are picked out with a lovely rose du Barri and best English gold. Every seat in the auditorium is a separate one, and of the latest tip-up pattern. The upholstering is in crimson velvet. The hangings of rich crimson, embroidered with deep old gold, together with the crimson window curtains are all in complete harmony with the general scheme of colour decoration. The stage has a floor-space of 1,200 ft. and the height to the grid is 44ft. Mr. W. McCulloch, of Sheffield, a well-known scenic artist, has painted a full stock of scenery, including an unusually fine act drop. The animated picture entertainment has not been overlooked; there is a special fire-proof bioscope chamber provided at the back of the hall, just over the main staircase. Outside the building, but forming part of it, are two small lock-up shops on the south side, and there will be buffets, one for visitors with separate access from outside and the other for use of visitors within the Pavilion. In addition to the fibrous plaster work, Messrs. Dean and Son, of Birmingham, have supplied the fauteuils and general seating accommodation and other important details. The boiler house, which is constructed of brickwork and concrete, is on the north side of the stage, sunk below the level of the ground. The heating arrangements have received special consideration, and they are as perfect as it is possible to make them. Patrons of the Pavilion may rest assured that in the coldest weather the building will be warm and cosy and free from draughts. The heating system is by hot water low pressure radiators. The system at the Pavilion has seven independent flows and five returns, each under separate control. There are three dressing-rooms on the north side of the Pavilion for lady artists and a music-room, and on the south side three dressing-rooms for male artists and a spare room. Underneath the stage is an extra room for stock. All the dressing-rooms and the stage are heated from the same services as those which supply the main building. At the east end there is a separate entrance provided for taking in the scenery and properties of travelling companies. There are two separate staircases giving access to the upper dressing-rooms. Ample provision has been made for protection against fire. There are five fire hydrants within the building, and three fire plugs are outside close to the Pavilion. Besides these, patent Minimax fire extinguishers are placed in various parts of the Pavilion. The scenery has been painted on flame-proof material. There are no fireplaces inside the building. The kitchen is equipped with gas cooking-stoves. The drainage has been carried out from the plans and under the direction of the Borough Surveyor and Engineer. The surface-water from the roof is carried into the bay through the outlet specially provided by Mr. Morgan when the sea wall was erected by the contractors. The architects of the new Pavilion are Messrs. Mangnall and Littlewoods, of Spring-gardens, Manchester.

While an operetta was in progress at a theatre at Glatz, Silesia, on Sunday night, a fire suddenly broke out and the flames spread with alarming rapidity. The audience rushed in panic to the doors, which the manager, with great presence of mind, promptly opened, and with the exception of half a dozen slight injuries no one was hurt. The fire, the cause of which has not been ascertained, raged until three o'clock the next morning, and left only the walls standing.

Mme. Melba has given a very fine set of orchestral instruments at the flat pitch to the Marshall Hall Orchestra of Melbourne. Each case was lettered "Melba Gift." The order was entrusted to Rudall, Carte and Co., the well-known instrument makers of Berners-street, who have spared no trouble or expense in making them, and the members of Mr. Marshall Hall's orchestra are to be congratulated.

"Sir Frederick Bridge," says the Woman at Home, 'was once at a Philharmonic concert, and directly in front of him sat a charming lady with a delightful but tremendous chapeau. It blocked Sir Frederick's view of the platform. After dodging about for some time from one side to the other like the long-haired man of pianola fame, he remarked to his companion: 'If I had known as much as I do now I would have brought the library steps with me.'"

"Singers," Sir Frederick once remarked, "who make the most effect are not always the singers with the most magnificent voices. They are the singers who use their brains." Then perhaps a second afterwards he will tell you that "every musical pirate ought to be hanged with a 'common chord.'"

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The prospects of theatrical business for the coming year are very hopeful, and the last has been unusually prosperous. We have every reason then to expect, and to wish our readers, a happy new year.

Mr. George Alexander returned to the subject of charity performances at the annual meeting of the presidents of the League of Mercy, held on Monday at St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park-corner, and gave one flagrant instance which had come to his notice, when out of £562 taken at the doors the charity only received £90. Mr. Alexander said that during the last two years ten theatres from which he obtained returns had contributed £14,000 to charities by performances. Nothing was so much abused as the "charity performance," and he made it his business to find out the real object of the persons desiring the loan of his theatre for such a performance. He sometimes found it was wanted by a fond mother of a budding Juliet, or a disappointed dramatist who had submitted a one-act play to every manager in London. But this league guaranteed the expenses of every production it undertook, and all money taken at the doors went to charity. If other charities followed the example of the league, a large amount of money which was now frittered away would go to the proper quarters.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude have received valuable souvenirs of their recent visit with The Flag Lieutenant to Sandringham. Miss Winifred Emery was the recipient from the Queen of a very handsome silver box, with jewelled cover; while the King has sent to Mr. Maude a massive and beautiful clock in the appropriate form of a ship's wheel, made to a special design, together with a charming letter expressing approval of the performance.

Miss Lena Ashwell has concluded an arrangement with Mr. Feidemann, Professor of the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin, by which he will become the leader of the Kingsway String Quartet, which makes its début at the Kingsway this evening as a curtain-raiser to Grit, now well established in public favour. Mr. Horace Fellowes, a former member of the Kruse and Hess Quartets, will be the second violin, Mr. Lionel Tertis, Professor of the Royal Academy of Music in London, the viola, and M. Jacques Renard, principal 'cellist of the Queen's Hall Orchestra, 'cello. Mr. Stanley Hawley, director of music at the Kingsway Theatre, will be at the pianoforte.

Perhaps the most diplomatic method of securing the modification of the matinée hat nuisance is employed at the Kingsway, where the iron curtain bears an inscription in the following terms:—"The management beg to thank the ladies who have removed their hats, thus enabling all the members of the audience to have a clear view of the stage." The effect of the message was to be noted at the matinée of the English Play Society, on Tuesday, for though the curtain did not come down till midway in the performance, a general withdrawal of hat-pins and a consequent clearance of the sight-line followed its descent.

Miss Decima Moore has arranged to play Mrs. Dot for Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison for an extra week at Ipswich at Christmas, and is paying a flying visit back to London to sing at the Kennington Theatre on Sunday next.

Mr. and Mrs. Bourchier have had a gratifying indication of the esteem in which they are held by the members of their company. At the conclusion of the autumn tour the company presented Mr. Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh with a beautiful old silver claret jug and a pair of valuable old silver candlesticks, accompanied by cordial good wishes, as a remembrance of a delightful tour.

Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, Mr. George Edwardes, Sir Charles Santley, and Mr. Lowenfeld are among the subscribers to the fund which the Rev. John Caspar Lutz, son of the late Herr Meyer Lutz, so long musical director at the Gaiety, is endeavouring to raise for an organ for the Church of the English Martyrs at Walworth. The district is among the poorest in London, and Father Lutz's task would be manifestly a formidable one if he had only the members of his flock to appeal to. The organ, if provided, would be regarded as a memorial of Herr Lutz's work in the musical world.

Mr. Lewis Waller has collected, by means of his autograph, a further sum of £4 18s. 11d., and sent it to the Actors' Benevolent Fund. The remittance from Mr. Martin Harvey, which we noted last week as £ . should have read three guineas.

Mr. Arthur Collins's "Gift from Drury Lane" this year will be highly appreciated by the little ones who are fortunate enough to secure one. It is the story of Dick Whittington as told by a little bird to Fifine Fiddleface, who is seen knitting a pair of stockings for Uncle Arthur Collins's Christmas present. The little book is again written and illustrated by Winnie Burnand, and the pictures are presented in the form of postcards, of which there are eight. The drawings are deliciously quaint, and it would be difficult to say which is the funniest, but perhaps the attitude of Dick listening to the bells on Highgate Hill and the cat's expression of pleased interest in the announcement are the most whimsical.

Mr. Oscar Barrett has been the object of much sympathy this week on the loss of his wife, whose death took place at St. Margaret's Bay, near Dover, on Sunday. The funeral was announced for Thursday at St. Margaret's-at-Cliffe.

The Bill to abolish the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect of stage plays, and to transfer to the local authority the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect of the licensing of theatres in London, was introduced by Mr. Robert Harcourt in the House of Commons, on the 17th inst. The Bill is backed by Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. A. E. W. Mason, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, so that the principle is, therefore, approved by members of all parties.

Representatives of both sides of the House attended some informal committee meetings previous to the introduction of the Bill, and approved its terms. Three of the sponsors of the Bill are themselves dramatic authors, and an endeavour is made to give effect to the desire expressed by a large number of their colleagues in a letter to the Press on Oct. 29, 1907, and in their subsequent deputation to the Government. The Bill was only introduced at such a late period of the Session with a view to its terms being made public.

The text of the Bill was issued on Tuesday. So far as the censorship is concerned, it is proposed to make theatrical performances subject to the same control as performances in music halls. The promoters of the Bill point out that the licensing of theatres is now under the control of the local authority in practically the whole of Great Britain where theatres are found, except the central district of London, the University cities of Oxford and Cambridge, and places where His Majesty resides. Even in the central district of London, the London County Council, as the local authority, has already extensive powers over the structure of theatres under the Metropolis Management Act, 1878. We give the text of the Bill elsewhere.

We record with regret the death, at the age of seventy-five, of Mr. W. Wybrow Robertson, the husband of the late Marie Lytton. Mr. Wybrow Robertson was at one time a prominent figure in the theatrical world, and built the Court, Vaudeville, and Imperial Theatres. He was the son of General Robertson, a well-known man in India, and passed from Cambridge into the Indian Civil Service, which, however, he left on the death of his first wife, and returned to England, where he obtained a post in the Home Office, and married as his second wife Alice, daughter of the Right Hon. Thomas Milner Gibson. He afterwards married, thirdly, Miss Marie Lytton, the well-known actress. After the death of Miss Marie Lytton he married his fourth wife, who survives him.

Mr. George Alexander's statement as to the abuses of the "charity performance" has aroused much interest, says the Standard, among London managers, several of whom have been interviewed on the subject. Mr. Forbes-Robertson is in complete agreement with Mr. Alexander. "Various causes," said Mr. Robertson, "are responsible for the waste to which Mr. Alexander refers—as often as not the inefficient way in which amateurs who are ignorant of the stage run into quite unnecessary expense. That enormous demands are made on the managers and actors alike I can prove by telling you that during the short time I was at Mr. Alexander's theatre recently, I received two requests to lend the house, while since I have been at Terry's I have had three such applications. I appeared at six such performances during five weeks last autumn."

Mr. Henderson, who is managing for Sir Charles Wyndham at the Criterion, said it was only by the closest scrutiny of all applications that the type of abuse to which he referred could be eliminated. Referring to the charitable benefits with which Sir Charles Wyndham had been associated in the last twenty-four years, he remarked that the charities concerned had benefited by some £30,000.

Mr. Dana, at His Majesty's, was unable to refer to any occasion on which he personally had been victimised. At Daly's, Mr. G. F. Minor was rather sceptical as to the extent of the abuses. Mr. Oswald Stoll, whose wide experience, both in metropolitan and provincial theatres, makes his opinion peculiarly valuable, expressed himself as strongly of opinion that all admission money should be paid over to the charity for which the benefit was being given.

The Herald-square Theatre, New York, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday evening. The outbreak occurred while the theatre was full, but the audience filed out in an orderly manner. The building was the property of the Shubert Brothers, and seated 1,300.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, who is conducting his aerial flights with so much success at the Palace, will make his reappearance at the regular theatres in Richard Harding Davis's play The Dictator, the musical version of which will be done by Mr. Hicks in conjunction with Mr. Paul Rubens. Meanwhile Miss Ellaline Terriss will be seen as the "star" of His Grace, as the musical version of A Court Scandal is likely to be called, at Nottingham on Feb. 8. Mr. Courtice Pounds will play the title-rôle, and Miss Louie Pounds will be included in a fine cast. With all these projects in hand Mr. Hicks finds time to keep up the running of his touring combinations, and to-night (Saturday) three Gay Gordon companies open in the provinces.

The annual dinner of the Grand Theatre staff, Swansea, was held at Fitt's Grand Hotel on the 18th inst., under the presidency of the lessee and manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks, who in the course of his speech said that for the first year under his managership the theatre had been a financial success. Occasion was also taken to present Mr. Walter Dean, the late acting-manager and treasurer of the theatre, with a travelling rug and set of gold links and studs on the occasion of his temporarily giving up the acting-managership of the Grand to take on the more onerous position of business-manager for Mr. E. Oswald Brooks' New Housemaid company, Mr. Brooks speaking very eulogistically of Mr. Dean's services. Vocal items by Miss Nellie Dean, Miss Phippin, &c., and a dance brought the function to a close.

The football match of the London League at Fulham on Boxing Day will be for the benefit of Mr. F. Waterson, when Fulham Reserves will be opposed to Woolwich Arsenal Reserves. The kick-off is at 11.30. The team will comprise—Fryer, Harper, Waterson, Moucher, Littlewort or Prout, Goldie, Bradshaw, Millington, Freeman, McCourt, and Duff.

The Queen's Royal Theatre, Dublin, will close on Jan. 9 next in preparation for the rebuilding operations commencing immediately afterwards. For some time past a prosperous variety season has been carried on, and its close will be marked by a bioscope and variety entertainment. The present lessee is Mr. W. S. Pearce, and the gentleman who will occupy the position in the coming year as sole lessee and patentee will be Mr. F. Wentworth Marriott Watson, who is well known in theatrical circles in Dublin and in other cities of the United Kingdom, better known in the profession as Brooke Warren, author of The Face at the Window, &c.

Mr. Stanley Cooke, who recently made such a success as The Man from Mexico, is again to be seen in his old part of Charley's Aunt, this time at the Aldwych Theatre. This is his third West End season as the evergreen old lady, the two previous ones being at the Comedy Theatre, 1904-5, and Terry's Theatre, 1905-6. To-day, at the Aldwych Mr. Cooke gives his 2,201st performance of Babs.

Some of the students of the Ben Greet Academy of Acting took part in the recent performance at the Studio Theatre, 3, Bedford-street, Strand, on Saturday last. Miss Madge Trenchard, who has only, so far, had one term's tuition, appeared as Martha in Mr. Keble Howard's one-act play Martha Plays the Fairy, and as Joyce Harford in the comedietta The Peacemaker. In both of these impersonations Miss Trenchard gave ample evidence of talent as an actress, and a continuance of her studies will no doubt lead to great things. Miss Hélène Millée, another pupil, who recited a monologue from the French, entitled "The Little Widow," also furnished proof of the possession of elocutionary powers, while her acting as the servant in The Peacemaker was a clever little study for an amateur. Miss Lenore Coulfeild and Messrs. Donald Gray and Ernest Deans also played in the two pieces mentioned.

The Playgoers' Club began their customary Christmas charity by taking 1800 of the poorest children to the dress rehearsal at Drury-lane on Thursday—a privilege due to the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Arthur Collins. On the same day the management of the Adelphi Theatre also very kindly invited 600 children under the auspices of the club. Each child is provided by the playgoers with a bag containing a meat pie, an orange, cake, and sweets. The members of the Bons Frères Club, at their dinner last week, generously subscribed the sum of £45 towards the Playgoers' Club Pantomime Fund.

The elocution examination of the students of the School of Musical and Dramatic Art, of which Mr. Cairns James and Mr. Ernest D'Auban are the principals, has just taken place with the most satisfactory results. Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Sydney Brough, and Miss Decima Moore were the examiners, and awarded prizes to Miss Barbara Everest, Miss Gretchen Sawyer, and Mr. Harry St. A. Hilliard in the senior class, and Miss Gwendoline Arch in the junior.

The report of the adjudicators was as follows:—"We examined the students of the School of Musical and Dramatic Art. We were thoroughly satisfied with the excellent quality of the work, and the admirable results achieved in the training of the students. We were particularly impressed by the clearness of the elocution shown by the great majority of those we heard. Altogether the work we saw did very great credit to the teaching of the school, which seems to be thoroughly practical and useful for anyone seeking to follow the musical or dramatic profession."

Mr. E. W. Silverthorne, who has been re-engaged by the well-known Hutchison management for the spring, is being kept well occupied during the vacation endeavouring to find an original musical or farcical comedy, the rights of which he is anxious to secure for the autumn on behalf of a syndicate. Mr. Silverthorne has every reason to believe that prior to renewing the management of Lady Frederick for Mr. Percy Hutchison in January the right play will have been discovered and all preliminaries settled.

Miss Sophie Lingwood has been specially engaged to play Janet McCleod for four weeks, opening on Monday.

A highly successful concert was given at the Theatre Royal, North Shields, on Monday, in aid of the Old Folks' Christmas Treat, Mr. Stanley Rogers kindly granting the free use of the theatre and staff for the occasion. The leading members of Messrs. Jazon and Nightingale's pantomime company and the ever-popular Mr. Adam Tomlinson also generously gave their services. The performance was greatly appreciated.

"Short Plays from Dickens" is the title of a small volume issued by Chapman and Hall. Its contents consist of a number of episodes taken from the pages of the popular novelist and arranged in dramatic form by Mr. Horace B. Browne, M.A., assistant master at Hymer's College, Hull, and president of the local branch of the Dickens Fellowship. The plays number twenty, and are selected from "Sketches by Boz," "Barnaby Rudge," "Bleak House," and various other works. In each case the dialogue is formed from the text of the book, the original words being also utilised, as far as possible, for the descriptions of the characters.

It is questionable whether amateurs, for whom the pieces are intended, would realise the descriptions of the characters so well as the pen portraits of Dickens, but doubtless there would be compensating humour of another sort. Most of the playlets are very short, the scene of one amounting to just nine lines! Others, however, would lend themselves more readily to performance, notably that of The Friendly Waiter, in which young David Copperfield's arrival at the Yarmouth inn is depicted. The book is embellished by the original illustrations of "Phiz," George Cruikshank, &c.

The Dramatic Productions Club will present The Test, a new play in three acts, by T. W. Eastwood, and The General's Past, a new one-act comedy, by Clotilde Graves, at their next performance, which will take place at the Court Theatre on the evening of Sunday, January 3. The Test will be sustained by Mr. Dennis Cleugh, Miss Edyth Olive, Mr. Hubert Willis, Miss Dorothy Fane, Miss Alice Mansfield, and Mr. A. Douglas Newman. The action is laid in the sitting room of a hydro in North Wales at the present time. The General's Past will be portrayed by Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, Mr. Scott Buist, Mr. Wallett Waller, Mr. Leon M. Lion, Miss Gertrude Heinrich, and Miss Ethel Warwick. The scene of the play is that of a private room at a café in Soho. The performance will be repeated on the afternoon of Monday, Jan. 4.

Mr. Norman A. Overton is terminating an eleven months' successful engagement with Mr. T. Morton Powell's Woman Who Gambles company as Baron Cratzlaw, a part in which he has made a great hit.

For the tenth successive Christmas Day Mr. Wilford F. Field will, assisted by a number of professional friends, entertain the old folks at Isleworth Workhouse. The programme will include the old-time farce The Area Belle.

At the Manchester Assize Courts on Monday was heard an application by Harry Carver, Wilberforce Turner, and John Thomas Malpass to restrain Lester King from interfering with the management by the plaintiffs or their authorised agents of the entertainments given under their superintendence at the Central Hall, Henshaw-street, Oldham.

It was explained that the plaintiffs formed themselves into the Franco-British Animated Picture Company, and employed the defendant in his spare time to look out for a suitable hall for the purpose of giving animated picture entertainments. He engaged the Central Hall at Oldham, and obtained a tenancy agreement in his own name, but he afterwards transferred this to the plaintiffs. The venture proved fairly successful, and the plaintiffs thought that the duties of Mr. King as manager of the Opera House in Salford would not admit of his giving sufficient time to the Oldham enterprise, and they appointed a Mr. Percival as local manager. He refused to allow that gentleman to take charge, induced the staff to refuse to proceed with the entertainment on Nov. 30, and informed the waiting public that there would be no performance that evening in consequence of the failure of the electric light.

An affidavit by defendant was read, who stated that he engaged the hall on his own account, that he transferred the agreement to the plaintiffs in consideration of their undertaking to finance him, and that it was never intended he should be in the position of being their servant. The incident on Nov. 30 was, in fact, due to the failure of the electric light.

His Honour appointed Mr. Malpass receiver and manager until the trial, to act without salary. Mr. Bather suggested that the defendant be restrained by injunction from going on the premises, but his Honour said if the defendant or anyone under his control interfered with the receiver it would be a contempt of Court, and he could be dealt with accordingly.

Early on Sunday morning, at St. Stephen's Church, Twickenham, by special licence, a quiet wedding took place between Mr. Austin G. Melford and Miss Jessie Winter. The ceremony was performed by the bride's brother, the Rev. John F. Winter, and only members of the families of the bride and bridegroom were present. A small reception was afterwards held by Mrs. Austin Melford, the mother of the bridegroom, at Gardenhurst, Twickenham, after which Mr. and Mrs. Austin G. Melford left for Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The bulk of the parts in the works to be presented during the approaching opera season at Covent Garden will be sustained by British-born singers, foreign stars having been engaged for the remaining characters because Mr. Neil Forsyth was unable to find vocalists at home who had the temperament—musical and dramatic—efficiently to impersonate them. This encouragement of British artists is keenly appreciated, not only by the singers themselves, but also by the directors of the principal training schools, who have much native talent in process of cultivation. All the English singers in the chorus who are of moderate financial means are being paid for their attendance at rehearsals, and all are being trained in stage business free of charge.

The season will start on Jan. 16 with three complete cycles in English of Wagner's Ring, which will be conducted by Dr. Richter. Later will come three festival representations of The Mastersingers in English, a special translation having been made for these performances by Mr. Frederick Jameson, Gounod's Faust, an English version of Madama Butterfly, and the new opera, The Angelus, by Dr. B. W. Naylor. The King and Queen have granted their patronage to the season of opera.

At the Clerkenwell Sessions on Tuesday Henry Watson pleaded guilty to having attempted to obtain 12s. 6d. from Mr. Ernest Alfred Carpenter, managing-director of the Lyceum Theatre. On Nov. 20 last Mr. Carpenter received a letter from prisoner, who gave an address in New Kent-road, in which he described himself as an acting advance theatrical manager. He explained that after serious reverses, extending over many months, he had at last secured an engagement to tour for twelve months with a company playing Her Nameless Child. He added that he had not a cent, his boy had died, and he had been seriously ill. Poverty had overwhelmed him and his wife; the latter had pawned her wedding-ring to keep the home together and purchase food. He further explained that he was "stuck," and required assistance—5s. 3d. for his fare and 4s. to redeem his boots, the absence of which prevented a personal call. Mr. Carpenter found that the prisoner's story was false, and he was arrested. He was sentenced to twelve months' hard labour.

Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee has again been engaged by Mr. William Greet to play Marcus Superbus in his No. 1 Sign of the Cross company, opening at the Grand, Wolverhampton, on Jan. 4.

After a serious illness of eight weeks of typhoid fever, Mr. Alfred Terraine, the well-known scenic artist, is on the way to convalescence. No doubt his numerous friends will be pleased to hear the good news.

Mr. Horace Sinclair and Miss Rosamond Thompson have been engaged by Mr. Jas. Elphinstone of the Lyceum Theatre, Stafford, for his Christmas season. Mr. Sinclair is producing on Dec. 30 a new one-act play, Love and the Thief, written by Miss Edith Carter.

"King John" will be given as a dramatic reading by the British Empire Shakespeare Society on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 5, at the Victoria Hall Archer-street, W. Mr. Robert Loraine will read the rôle of the Bastard, Mr. Acton Bond that of King John, and Miss Esme Beringer that of Constance. The Council of the Society now includes Mr. W. L. Courtney, Lord Howard de Walden, Mr. Alan Mackinnon, and Sir Charles Mathews (who were already on the roll of patrons), in addition to Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Forbes Robertson, and Mr. Lewis Waller, as vice-presidents; Miss Morritt and Mr. Acton Bond as hon. general directors; and H.H. Princess Marie Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, as president.

"The Flag Lieutenant" company, touring under the direction of Mr. Lyn Harding and Mr. Sidney Cooper, terminated its autumn tour on Saturday at the Gaiety Theatre, Hastings, before an enthusiastic audience. The company then enjoyed a three days' vacation prior to opening at Preston on Christmas Eve. The Flag Lieutenant has attracted enormous audiences everywhere, and in some towns has vied very closely with The Merry Widow.

Mr. Peter Davey's twelfth pantomime at the County Theatre, Kingston, which is produced this evening, bids fair to be as attractive as any former annual. The title is Cinderella, and the entire production is devised and arranged by Mr. Davey. The title-rôle will be played by Miss Dorothy Grassdorf and the Prince Paragon will be Miss Hilda Vining. The cast will also include Miss Alice Coverick, Miss Providence Leslie, Miss Bessie Butt, Mr. Lauri Wylie, Mr. Arthur Carlton, Mr. Bobbie Hall, Miss Edith Deverell, Miss Nellie James, Mr. George Hirste, Miss Alice Mosley, Miss Dolly Rawleigh, Mr. G. Kingsley, and Mr. F. Percy Cann. The chief scene will be Mid Silver Birch and Purple Heather, and other picturesque effects will be secured in the State Ball and in the Great Hall, where the keeping of Christmas in the good old way is depicted. Mrs. Davey has again designed the costumes.

Mr. Douglas Gordon will spend Christmas on the ocean, having sailed on Wednesday for South Africa. Mr. Gordon has been engaged by Miss Katharine Cole to play the leading parts during her twelve weeks' season at the Standard Theatre, Johannesburg.

The Crystal Palace Company has deposited its proposed measure at the Private Bill Office for introduction in Parliament next Session. The preamble of the Bill states that the work of the company "is of such benefit to the public as to justify a loan out of public money" on the security of the lands and other property forming their undertaking, for the repair, maintenance, and improvement of the structure of the Palace, and for the redemption of all or part of the debenture stocks of the company.

The Bill, therefore, proposes to empower the Public Works Loan Commissioners to lend on mortgage £50,000 for the repair and improvement of the structure, and such a further amount "as may be requisite" for the redemption of all or any part of the existing £495,000 debenture stocks. The loans made by the Commissioners are to be repaid within sixty years, and to bear interest at a rate not exceeding £3 15s. per cent. The Bill provides for the discharge of the debenture stocks "at such price and upon such terms as may be agreed," and power is sought to enable the company to prepare schemes for "the promotion or extension of the usefulness of the Crystal Palace and the grounds thereto belonging for any purposes beneficial to the public." These schemes are to be subject to the sanction of the Board of Trade.

A seasonable spirit animated the proceedings at the Covent Garden fancy dress ball on Saturday morning. "Christmas in an English Home" was the name of a dress on which were illustrations of a decorated Christmas tree and a children's party, while the headdress was of holly and mistletoe, and there were plenty of crackers. The dress won first prize for Mr. W. Clarkson. One of the costumes represented a snowstorm, and was a white satin dress trimmed with swansdown, and the wearer had an illuminated iceberg for a headdress. There was a large attendance, and the ball was a great success.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the Theatrical Ladies' Guild, held at the St. James's Theatre, on the 18th inst., was a great success under the presidency of Miss Fanny Brough. In the annual report, presented by Miss Carlotta Addison, it was stated that the subscriptions in 1907 were well up to previous years, being £194 18s. 11½d. The capital at the end of the year was £1,498 6s. 8d. During the year thirty-nine maternity cases passed through the hands of the committee, and the cast-off clothing department assisted 648 cases. Stage costumes were provided for every applicant—105. Several cases were sent to seaside resorts, and many of the very poor of those attached to the working staffs of the London theatres were during the winter given tickets for food and coal. Miss Lilian Braithwaite moved the adoption of the report, which was carried.

Lady Gilbert presented the badges won by "Bee workers." In proposing a vote of thanks to her ladyship, Mrs. Beerbohm Tree said she could not make a speech about Lady Gilbert, because it would be like providing waterproofs and umbrellas for the snowdrops and violets. She had never known Lady Gilbert do anything but a kind action, and in the torrent of speech that babbled from her lips there was never a word that was cross or unamiable. She had seen Lady Gilbert riding like a queen on a camel, scintillating among the dim hieroglyphics of the tombs of the Ptolemies, wrestling with three giant turbaned housemaids in an Alexandria hotel for a can of hot water, and bareheaded but undaunted among the bonnets of the Rue de la Paix; but never had she seen Lady Gilbert anything but calm, cheerful, kind, and wise.

Recent competitions at the Royal Academy of Music have resulted as follows:—The Battison Haynes Prize (for composition) has been awarded to Ethel F. Woodland, a native of London, Emma Lomax being commended. The Hine Prize (for composition) has been allotted to Francis Hutchens, a native of New Zealand, Vivian Langrish being commended. The Sainton-Dolby Prize (for contraltos) has been secured by Mary A. Davies, a native of Llanelly, Dorothy Webb being highly commended, and Bella Newstead, commended.

The Rutson Memorial Prize (for sopranos) has been awarded to Eugénie Ritte, a native of London, Alice Baxter and Olive Turner being very highly commended. The Bonamy Dobree Prize (for violoncello) has been won by Audrey S. Whitaker, a native of Palermo, Sicily. The Westmorland Scholarship (for male vocalists) has been awarded to James M. Blair, a native of Uddingston, Scotland, Frederic Gregory being very highly commended. The Potter Exhibition (for female pianists), has been secured by Helen M. Dodd, a native of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

An application was made at Bow-street last week for a licence to enable little Marjory Carpenter to take part in the forthcoming pantomime at the Lyceum up to eleven o'clock at night. The magistrate granted the licence, but stipulated that the child must not be on the stage after 10.30. The case was reopened on Saturday, when counsel stated that in consequence of that decision an elder child would have to be found to take the part, but that would be very inconvenient, as the pantomime was to commence on the following Wednesday. The child who was intended for the part was a daughter of Mr. Carpenter, the managing director, and he (counsel) applied that she might be allowed to perform up to eleven o'clock for a fortnight, by which time a substitute could be found. Miss Carpenter was a healthy child, and would be driven in a motor-car to her home, which was close to the theatre. The magistrate granted the extension asked for for one week only.

A fairy opera, entitled Good Luck and Bad Luck, was produced by the students of the Hyde Park New College on Saturday afternoon, on the occasion of their annual prize distribution, held in the Salle Erard, Great Marlborough-street.

Mr. Allan Wilkie's Shakespearean company pays its first visit to the King's Hall, Ilkley, to-day (Boxing Day), when a seven days' engagement will be begun. The répertoire will consist of The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, Othello; Romeo and Juliet; Julius Cæsar, She Stoops to Conquer, Sleigh Bells, and David Garrick. An augmented orchestra has been specially engaged for the visit.

At the conclusion of the Christmas term of the Royal College of Music on Saturday the following awards were made by the Director and Board of Professors:—Council Exhibitions: Composition, Rebecca T. Clarke, £20; violin, Sidney C. Bostock, £20; Violet T. M. T. Pearce, £10. The annual amount (£13) bequeathed by the late Edwin S. Dove for pupils who have distinguished themselves was awarded to Ellen C. Edwards (Pringle Scholar), pianoforte.

Mr. George Edwardes will present every member of the audience with a copy of Queen Alexandra's Christmas gift book, "Photographs from my Camera," at the matinée performance of The Merry Widow at Daly's to-day.

We record with regret the death on the 13th inst., of Mr. Fred Whitby, a well-known tradesman of Yeovil, who took a keen interest in dramatic affairs, and acted as secretary of the first dramatic society founded in the town. During recent years he had been instrumental in bringing to Yeovil many first-class companies, which gave performances at the Assembly Rooms. Mr. Whitby was partner with his brother in a firm of stationers and printers. The funeral took place on the 16th inst. amid many signs of sympathy and respect.

The matinée to be held at the Queen's Theatre, on Tuesday, Jan. 26, in aid of the funds of the Royal Ear Hospital, promises to be of unusual interest. Mr. Tom B. Davis is responsible for the programme, and many prominent artists have already promised their services. The committee hope that the hospital will be able to re-open some of the beds—which have been closed for want of funds—early in the New Year. Donations, which are urgently needed, may be sent to Lady Constance Hatch, of Portland Place, W.

The Princess of Wales and suite were present on the occasion of the matinée given by Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore, in aid of the London Poor Children's Boot Fund at the Criterion Theatre on the 18th inst. Her Royal Highness visited the Criterion in the evening also, and witnessed the performance of Miss Mary Moore in Lady Epping's Law-suit."

Miss Nancy Beresford, who has just concluded a tour as Lady Alethea in The Walls of Jericho, has been engaged by Mr. Percy Hutchison to succeed Miss Decima Moore in the part of Mrs. Dot. Miss Beresford has already achieved considerable success in two other Marie Tempest parts—Suzanne in The Freedom of Suzanne, and Margaret Verrall in The Barrier.

Mr. Alfred Lester, who since the last night of Havana at the Gaiety has been taking a well-earned rest and change of air in Cornwall, returns to vaudeville to fulfil outstanding contracts. He opens on Monday at the Tivoli, where he will present selections from his monologues and duologues.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The Origin of Pinkie.

"MR. TREE," writes Mr. Raymond Blathwayt in Pearson's Weekly, "wandering in a sunlit summer scene, met once upon a time a charming little girl of his acquaintance. Raising his hat to her with that absent-minded courtesy for which he is so famous, he said: 'Is it true what I hear, that you no longer believe in fairies?" The child grew very red. 'Well,' she replied, 'I will explain to you exactly how it is. I don't really believe in the fairies we read about in books, but,' she continued, pointing to the daisies and buttercups at her feet, 'but I believe these flowers are fairies.' 'And so,' said Mr. Tree, as he told me this incident on the stage of His Majesty's Theatre the other day, 'I determined that, if ever I got the the opportunity, I would try and revive the dying faith of modern childhood in the fairies and the Fairyland which made my child-life so happy and so beautiful.'"

Irving's Birthplace.

MR. ERNEST JARDINE having purchased the late Sir Henry Irving's birth-place to be preserved as a memorial to the great actor, the Vicar has supplied some details in connection with the place. Keinton Mandeville is one of the many old-world villages embosom'd in the fair county of Somerset. It commands lovely views, northwards to Glaston-Tor and the Mendips, and Wells is visible when the atmosphere is clear. Brodribb's cottage, in which the distinguished successor of David Garrick and Edmund Kean in the roll of great English actors first saw the light on Feb. 6, 1838, is a humble tenement in the main street, and attached to it is a piece of land some six acres in extent.

JOHN HENRY BRODRIBB, the father of Irving, was only a short time at the cottage where Henry Irving was born. He at other times lived in two other houses in the place, and finally went to reside in the adjoining village of Charlton Mackrell. Irving left the place when quite a child, and once said that his only recollection of it was the Galinaes (Guinea fowls), which abounded there. None of the Brodribb family remain in the neighbourhood. It is characteristic of Irving that he should have been most generous to his native place in the way of subscriptions. The cricket club is called the Irving Club, after its distinguished patron. A personal item of interest is that Irving's old nurse, Sophia Morris, is still alive. She does not live in Keinton Mandeville, however, but in Camden Town.

THE chief products of Keinton Mandeville, which now has a population of about 500, are apples and stones. There are few lovelier spots in England than Keinton Mandeville when the apple trees are in full bloom. The wealth of pink and white blooms in the orchards is alone worth a journey to see, and now that the village will have so much public attention focussed upon it artists may be trusted to convey some of its glories to canvas. It will surprise many to learn that the noted Blenheim Orange apple thrives so well at Keinton Mandeville that a trade has been established between the village and the Continent. Last year Blenheim Oranges from this secluded spot fetched 4d. each in Paris. The chief industry of the place is stone (blue lias full of fossil sea shells) obtained from local quarries.

Wilkie Bard and the Caddie.

SOME good stories of pantomime favourites have appeared this week in that popular and well-edited publication, Cassell's Saturday Journal, which devote a good deal of attention to the stage. Mr. Wilkie Bard is an enthusiastic golfer, and while appearing at a town where his song "It cost me seven-and-sixpence" made an unusually pleasing hit went to the links to enjoy a round before preparing for his evening engagement. But, for some reason or other, he seemed quite unable to do the right thing. Time after time he ploughed the ground in his endeavour to find the "wee sma' ball," and at last, becoming exasperated at the bad play, he swung his club with such vigour that had it hit its mark without doubt it would have disappeared from view. But alas! the club again struck the ground, and next instant Mr. Bard was standing gazing mutely at a shattered stick, while the part that makes the stick a club lay some twenty yards away. The youthful caddie gazed from the stick to Mr. Bard's face, and back to the stick. Then, borne on the gentle breeze the disappointed golfer heard: "It cost me seven-and-sixpence!" The caddie had recognised the popular comedian, and was unable to resist the haunting words.

One in the Eye.

MISS MILLIE LINDON recalls with glee an incident which occurred while she was appearing in a Manchester panto. She and her sister had to effect a quick change from coon costume into court robes, and afterwards appear on the stage together. Miss Lindon gives the story as follows: "Just as I was going on I noticed my sister standing with her crown on the side of her head, holding her face between her hands. When I asked what was the matter she showed me a face streaming with tears—all the 'make-up' running together—and said: 'Someone has just poked his nose into my eye!' I roared with laughter—why, I shall never know. But I went on the stage, my sister followed, and when I looked at her I could not speak a word. The more I tried to be serious the more I laughed. Presently the band laughed, and then the audience joined in. Then my sister swept off the stage and left me. But I could not go on, and was obliged to retire in my turn. My sister appeared no more that night, but I had to enter again. Just as I got to the wings I met the call-boy—holding his nose! Then I knew who had run into my sister, and my attack came on worse than ever. I don't think I ever had such foolish feelings in my life."

How He was Discovered.

MR. HARRY TATE, who, with his inimitable impersonations and humorous sketches, has made the fortune of more than one pantomime, is invariably aided in his scenes by a youthful assistant. The story of the discovery of one of these assistants is told by Mr. Tate. He and a party of friends were fishing in Dublin Bay when their attention was attracted to a little Irish boy who was busy hauling in some nets. Overhearing one or two quaint remarks fall from the youngster's lips, Tate turned to him and asked: "Why does a chicken cross the road?" "Oi suppose it's becos he can't get underneath, sorr," was the ready answer. "What time is it when a clock strikes thirteen?" next asked Tate. "Toime the blessed t'ing was mended," replied the boy. That settled it. The boy's parents were interviewed, and he joined Harry Tate's troupe.

An Economical Irving.

WHILE preparing for a pantomime at the Brixton Theatre a season or two back, Mr. Arthur Rigby required the assistance of a super. An application to the manager of the theatre brought him a man whom he immediately commenced to prepare for the part. The super merely had to make a certain gesture and exclaim, "Never!" "I explained this," says Mr. Rigby in telling the story, "and tried hard to make him proficient, but he could form no conception of what was required. So at length I gave him up in despair; I told him I must find somebody else. Turning his coat collar up, and making towards the stage door, he fired a parting shot with an air of fine contempt: 'Lumme!' he said, 'you want Irving for your eighteenpence a night!'"

Mr. Beerbohm Tree has again presented the London public with one of his surprises. It is a far cry from the abysses of Faust to the arbours of Surrey, but the same resourcefulness and happy knack of doing exactly the right thing at the right moment has stood Mr. Tree in good stead this Christmas. Pinkie and the Fairies is a delight to old and young. Every child and every "grown-up" in play-going London will have to see it, or confess himself or herself devoid of all desire for the quaint, the poetic, and the beautiful. It is just imaginative enough and not too fantastic; just picturesque enough, yet not over-loaded with spectacle; and it is cast, mounted, rehearsed, and acted with as much care as though, instead of being a "fairy play for children and others," it was a drama dealing with the greatest interests of life and death.

It was quite in harmony with the traditions of Christmas that the triumph of Pinkie and the Fairies should be achieved by a child. Miss Elsie Craven, who played the Queen of the Fairies in the new piece which Mr. Beerbohm Tree produced at His Majesty's on Saturday evening, is a marvel of Terpsichorean training and cool self-possession. Her work sur les pointes is that of a veteran première danseuse; her voice and delivery are consummately modulated; and her appearance is distinctly quaint. The little story which is used as a peg on which to hang Miss Craven's personality can be easily and quickly told. Two children, Tommy and Pinkie, living near Haslemere, in a house on the edge of a wood, are in the habit of receiving visits from three fairies named respectively Pickel, Whisper, and Twinkle. These elves are only visible to children, but a young lady named Molly, who is not yet "grown-up," is admitted to the guild of fairy-seers, under protest. Outsiders and elders, who are blind to fairy presences, are two aunts, Imogen and Caroline, and one Uncle Gregory, a fat and stupid elderly gentleman. Molly and the children, in the first act of the play, receive an invitation from the Queen of the Fairies to an evening party in the adjoining wood, the card being brought by a fairy herald, accompanied by an escort of frogs and fairies, who blow horns made of lilies.

The second act take place in a wood at night. The elves assemble, and the Fairy Queen rises from a bed of rushes seated on a throne composed of an expanded flower. Pinkie is asked whom she would like to invite to the party, and thus all the celebrated fairy-tale heroines are introduced. Cinderella, now a fashionable princess, arrives overcome by her social obligations, and prattles in true society style of her troubles, one of which is that her fine carriage and horses change into the original rats and pumpkins if she stays at a ball after midnight. This transformation, and that of Cinderella's ball dress into her kitchen garb, are shown; and the Sleeping Beauty, Jack the Giant Killer, and Jack of the Beanstalk and Beauty and the Beast also arrive in turn. The Beast, very stupidly, precedes Beauty, and Pinky tries to drive him away with Cinderella's broom; the two Jacks fall a-fighting; and the Queen of the Fairies resents the conceit of Cinderella by asking her if she would mind moving from the centre of the stage. There are some very pretty stage pictures, and some pleasant singing. In the last act Molly falls asleep, and Uncle Gregory has to wake her with a kiss, with other agreeable trivialities. The dialogue is very pleasantly written, Aunt Imogen speaking of "the plain book-muslin of a blameless life," and Uncle Gregory defining patriotism as "the love of someone else's country, and the natural desire to possess it."

The appearance of Miss Ellen Terry as Aunt Imogen was the signal for prolonged applause, and her perfect diction and gentle, amiable comedy were immensely enjoyed. An effective foil was the authoritative Aunt Caroline of Miss Augusta Haviland, a neat and decided bit of acting. Master Philip Tonge and Miss Iris Hawkins were unimpeachably natural and admirably intelligent and efficient as Tommy and Pinkie, and did their work with commendable care and ease, making every possible point, and winning an encore for a pretty song and dance in the first act. Miss Stella Patrick Campbell is a charming lady, with a great deal of delicate grace and a touch of gentle mystery that is fascinating. Her style and delivery are delightful, and, though the part made no demand on her powers, it displayed her personality very pleasantly. Mr. Frederick Volpé was, of course, more than equal to the simple task of representing Uncle Gregory, and performed it with his usual aplomb and ability, his make-up being excellent; and the three elves had dainty and distinct representatives in Master Sidney Sherwood, Miss Marjorie Burgess, and Miss Kathleen Yorke, Miss Hermine Gingold being acceptable as the Fairy Herald, and Master William Parke making a good Prince Frog. Of Miss Elsie Craven we have already spoken; she won encore after encore by her droll dance of explanation in the first act, and the audience were enraptured with her from the first, the serious importance which she gave to her rendering of the Fairy Queen proving irresistible. Miss Marie Löhr was airily playful and winningly pretty as Cinderella; and Master Francis Walter and Master Frank Varna were spirited exponents of the parts of the rival Jacks. Miss Viola Tree, a superb Sleeping Beauty, showed the vocal power and skill which she has cultivated by serious study; and Miss Winifred Beech gave a picturesque performance as Beauty, the Beast being drolly portrayed by Mr. Walter R. Creighton. Mr. Smithson took evident pains with the rôle of a stolid gardener, and Mr. Henry Mather contributed a praiseworthy rendering as the Butcher. Mr. Joseph Harker's beautiful scene for the second act was full of the mystery of the woods, and wonderfully well imagined and realised, and the dresses designed by Dion Clayton Calthrop formed colour schemes of the most harmonious and artistic kind. Mlle. Elise Clerc's arrangement of the movements and dances had much to do with the excellence of the general effect of the production, which was under Mr. Tree's superintendence. At the conclusion he came forward and announced the name of the Queen of the Fairies, which had been previously concealed in the programmes by the description, "a young lady who makes her first appearance on any stage." Pinkie and the Fairies is heartily welcome at Christmastide. It is an entertainment to which any child may take his or her parents with complete confidence that they will have a happy evening or afternoon.

MISS ETHEL IRVING AND THE PLAYGOERS.

Miss Ethel Irving had a gratifying tribute to her talent and popularity on Sunday last, when at the Playgoers' Club Ladies' Christmas Dinner she was presented with a silver mirror, and a picture of her was sold for ten guineas, being offered at auction to the guests, who numbered over 400. The proceeds of the sale were devoted to the Playgoers' Club Pantomime Fund. Mr. Osman Edwards, the president of the club, was in the chair, and amongst those present were the Earl of Clonmel, Mr. Lionel Brough and daughter, Mr. Gilbert Porteous, Mr. Bram Stoker, Mr. W. Clarkson (vice-president), Mr. F. S. Hess, Mr. G. Spencer Edwards, Mr. Louis Harfield, Mr. C. E. B. Kibblewhite, Mr. C. H. Workman, Miss Kate Cutler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Desprez, Mr. Frank Glenister, Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Kitty Gordon, Mr. James Sharpe (hon. secretary), and Mr. G. J. Farrington (assistant hon. secretary).

MR. OSMAN EDWARDS, in proposing the health of Miss Ethel Irving, said: Why is Miss Ethel Irving in the chair? Because at last we succeeded in running her down. For a whole year Lady Frederick has been still running with all London behind her—from the Court to the Queen's, the New, Wyndham's, and the Haymarket—wherever she ran the playgoers followed. At last she was caught, popped in the chair, and here she is. Her great success gives critics the pleasure of saying, "I told you so." Long before the public had taken measure of her talents, the critics prophesied a great future, which is being rapidly fulfilled. This admiration of the critics is happily reciprocated—a case of mutual love. In a recent interview Miss Irving says: "I never can say I am satisfied with myself, or really pleased, no matter how well I think I have done, until I have read the criticisms. This satisfaction or pleasure is always dependent on the attitude of the critics, and, until they have spoken, all such beguiling feelings are held in restraint." In classical comedy this versatile actress captured the superior persons who only admire an author who has been dead at least 200 years (Shakespeare or Congreve), or who lives at least 200 miles away, in France or Norway. The playing of Mrs. Millamant in Congreve's Way of the World, a brilliant tour de force—most difficult to make alive the fine lady of Restoration period in gorgeous, stiff brocade of seventeenth-century prose. But who can ever forget the coquette in the great scene when she promises "by degrees to dwindle into a wife"? This evening she is playing the part of Millami, for we represent 1000 playgoers who are all her friends. In modern comedy she has given us priceless memory of Lady Frederick, who is in a state of suspended animation. We want to hear that nice Irish brogue again. We want to see in Act I. the merry widow in mauve, breaking men's hearts, but not the bank at Monte Carlo; in Act II. the heroic fury in pink, turning fiercely on her persecutors, but generously burning the letter that would have confounded her enemy; and in Act. III. the disenchantress en déshabille, who reveals to Lord Mereston the secrets of her toilette, and to the public how independent her art is of all trivial accessories. I believe Miss Irving is capable of performing the miracle wrought by Réjane, who, after making us laugh in Sans-Gêne and Ma Cousine, suddenly moved us to tears in La Course du Flambeau. I remember quiet but moving references to Lady Frederick's dead child and unhappy married life. All we want is English Hervieu. After sincere praise of Miss Irving's art, will she let me protest against her demoralising extravagance? Are our wives and daughters to be told that "To run into debt is a positive virtue; it keeps women out of mischief?" Are they to be deluded with the idea that if they gamble at Monte Carlo or hide their bills in an escritoire, some convenient man—the husband, if he is fool enough—will always pay them? Why should Dolly Telfer pay "45s. for three pairs of blue silk garters," when Mr. Walkley says that ladies have given up wearing them? Think of these words, Miss Irving, continued Mr. Edwards, when you look in the mirror I have now the honour to present to you in the name of the Playgoers' Club. In your defence of cosmetics to Lord Mereston you said: "In this little pencil I have at will roguery, tenderness, malice, sprightliness, passion." But that was an exaggerated compliment—to the pencil. On your forehead and in your eyes you will see written the secrets, which even you cannot reveal, which only you and the chosen of art possess—the secrets of winning and keeping the hearts of both critics and playgoers.

MISS ETHEL IRVING, in returning thanks, said: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen,—I rise in happy fear and trembling—happy because I am so delighted to be here, and the fear and trembling is only because I can't tell you in the words I should like how very proud I am to be your guest to-night. I shall always think of myself in connection with this charming evening a "what might have been," for, to be frank, I had asked a friend of mine—a man especially qualified—to write me a speech. I had visions of standing here saying the most frightfully clever things, and reading in my Express to-morrow that "Miss Ethel Irving made a brilliant speech." But it was not to be. My friend, whose judgment I greatly value, wrote me that though he might write what he thought suitable for the occasion, perhaps, like some parts I have played, it wouldn't suit me. He suggested that it would be far better for me to try to thank you in my own poor words, and, as it were, off my own bat. So I let it go at that. I asked my husband, who helps me in all things, for an idea. He also failed me. He could only propose—being a born Press agent—that this would be a grand opportunity of letting playgoers know my future plans. I appealed to my friend Mrs. Frank Curzon, who knows a lot about this sort of thing. She could only suggest, "Ethel, be sure you break it to them that you're going to play Lady Macbeth!" So that is why I am, so to speak, speechless. Your kind President, Mr. Osman Edwards, has, with his usual delightful blarney, told you how clever I am. His very flattering speech has been a little embarrassing to listen to to-night, but I haven't a doubt that to-morrow morning when I wake up and think it over I shall positively grin with delight, and try to persuade myself that a lot of it is true—I have a vivid imagination. For his warm welcome to the ladies and to me I am sure we are most grateful, but to his question as to why so many ladies are here there is surely only one answer: we have never been known to miss a good thing, and, moreover, we shouldn't let our husbands and brothers come without us. As to why I am here, did you ever know a woman run away from compliments, and such compliments? I am most honoured to be in the position I occupy to-night. Mr. Edwards has paid the ladies a very great compliment in saying they control the fortunes of the stage. Speaking from the actresses' standpoint, I can only say: we will do our best to think so. I have heard of one or two actors on the stage, but we will let them pass. From the lady playgoers' point of view there can be no doubt that they do control the fortunes of the stage. Give the women a piece they like, and success is assured; the men always, as ever, follow on. To the kind suggestion that the critics are glad to see me I ought to have a lot to say, but at the moment it only occurs to me to feel, ah! more grateful to them than I could ever possibly express. I know if it had rested with most of the critics I should, years and years ago, have been—well, the very proud leading lady of the Haymarket. And I would like to take this opportunity of paying tribute to my musical comedy days. I loved my musical comedy work, and would go back to it without hesitation if I could find a good big part and a good big salary, though it was in musical comedy that I nearly left the stage for ever. I was playing in San Toy at Stoke, and as the maid, Dudley, singing a few songs, I noticed a stage hand night after night looking at me thoughtfully from the side. He came up on our last night and said, "Good evening, Miss Irving; ever played Fairy Queen?" I said, "No." "Why don't you try here for Christmas?" I said (blushingly), "Fairy queens have to do most of the singing, and I'm afraid my voice is not quite up to that form." "Ah," he said, wearily, "we have heard worse." I understood after that why Mr. George Edwardes always gave me talking songs to sing. Now we come to a very serious subject—the National Theatre question. I am not going to be drawn into a discussion, but I don't mind telling you in confidence that I hear on very exalted authority that the nation is approaching the present Government with a view to engaging me as leading lady, and that musical comedy will predominate. I can say no more till my contract is signed. I have been asked, shall I ever play tragedy. I say, Ah! try me. I don't know what the result would be on an audience—I am afraid I should be the only one gratified—but in connection with this my name has been associated to-night with that of one of the greatest artists, and that ought to inspire me if ever I get the chance of doing something very serious. Your President has scolded me for my extravagance on the stage, and has referred—ah! Mr. Edwards—to the controversy raging between Mr. Henry Arthur Jones and Mr. Walkley as to whether ladies do or do not wear garters. To settle this very momentous question—as Dolly Reforming Herself—I assert that Mr. Henry Arthur Jones is right. He knew what he was talking about. On behalf of Lady Frederick I vote entirely for Mr. Walkley. Lady Frederick's financial difficulties were chiefly caused by the high price charged for garments usually associated with principal boys in pantomime, so both gentlemen are right—we do wear them and we don't. Now I must thank you for this delightful and cruel present. Cruel, because as the years go on so quickly I shall see so plainly the changes in my poor face; but so delightful because I shall still see your kind faces just as I see them to-night—never changing, so cheering, so encouraging, so friendly, and ah! so good-looking. My very best thanks. Now I have nearly done, but after talking so much about myself—Mr. Edwards told me to—I do want to say how much we actresses owe to the playgoers; how we are indebted to them for our successes. We all know what an audience can do to make a piece—and to make a reputation. It's from you in front we get our inspiration. We can see the smile on your faces when we play merry parts, and that gives us heart and confidence, and we can make the scene go; and we feel your sympathy when we come to the tear-in-the-voice part. I won't go so far as to say that playgoers can make a bad actress a good one, but I do say they can make a good actress a much better one. This also applies to mere actors. You playgoers give us the help and sympathy we want, and which we can't do without—to say nothing of the box office. You judge us on our merits. If we can act, you tell us so by your applause, and tears, and laughter. It isn't a question of whether you like us personally or not; the acting's the thing. If we do well—and if we deserve it, even if you don't like us—we know you say in your hearts, as Kitty Clive said in words while watching Garrick from the wings, "Damn the man, he could act a gridiron!" And then the Playgoers' Club does a lot to help along the kindliness of the theatrical world. It surely helps us to be kindly to be here to-night. It's Christmas when we get sentimental, and I think it does us good to be sentimental sometimes. And this is the Christmassing we all love—when we get the spirit of goodwill to all. Now thank you all a thousand times. On behalf of the ladies and myself I thank you for your kind toast. Our response, in which we include all the men, shall be in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us everyone!"

After Miss Irving had spoken, her husband, Mr. GILBERT PORTEOUS, added a few genial observations, which were cordially received.

Amongst those who contributed to the excellent entertainment which followed the dinner were Mr. Lionel Brough, who told some of his amusing anecdotes, Miss Ethel Bevans, Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Phyllis Davies, Miss Kitty Gordon, Miss Marie Schulz, Miss Maria Vinent, Mr. Harrison Brockbank, Mr. Robert Cunningham, Mr. Stuart Debnam, Mr. W. Devereux, Mr. Guy Docwra, Mr. Arthur Grover, Mr. Harrison Latimer, Mr. George Mozart, Mr. Arthur Royd, Mr. Fred Upton, Mr. Albert Whelan, and Mr. Gwilym Wigley, Mr. Mansell Stevens being the accompanist.

Two Sorts of Acting.

"IT is in a theatre at Munich," says a writer in the current number of The Mask. "The audience of students is very unruly and is continually interrupting the performance of Hamlet with bursts of laughter and loud criticisms. The King is suddenly seen striding towards the footlights. He is about to speak—silence prevails. He does not move as, with tragic and intense eyes and firm voice his sentences roll out: 'I have to act a King. It is very difficult. You have only to act at being gentlemen, and you are unable to.'"

"Extras" and Their Outlines.

A CONTRIBUTOR to the Pelican writes with deep feeling of the determination of "shapeliness" in pantomime choruses. "The scarcity of imposing 'extras,'" he says, "no doubt explains the scragginess which too often distinguishes the average pantomime chorus. Girls who look well enough in skirts and petticoats look the opposite when clothed in conventional tights and trunks. No doubt it is this unfortunate state of things which has led in so many cases to the abandonment of fleshings and the substitution of long skirts and much be-laced underwear, a style of dressing the chorus which has been gradually growing in popularity. Certainly it has its advantages.

"NOTHING is more disappointing than to gaze upon a chorus garbed in tights and displaying a want of contour about their limbs. The gentle art of padding has not yet arrived at that state of perfection whereby the eye—unless it be very blind indeed—is deceived into the belief that what the artist in 'shapes' has supplied is the real thing. Padding is rarely, if ever, successful, and a padded leg never looks 'alive.' Hence it comes about that padding is generally disliked, and native scragginess preferred to artificial plumpness."

Mr. Welch's "Jimmy."

MR. JAMES WELCH, the well-known comedian, created much amusement, according to Pearson's Weekly, by his jocular manner in opening a bazaar at Newcastle-on-Tyne the other day. Mr. Welch said he supposed he was asked to open the bazaar because the vicar had heard the story of a certain burglar. The latter, when asked how he was getting on, said, "Very well; I have opened a shop." Asked where the money came from, he said, "Oh, I opened the shop with a jemmy!" He would open the bazaar with a jemmy. In Cockney slang a sovereign was a "jimmy"—a "Jimmy O'Goblin"—and he would give that for the first article placed in his hands. The stall-holders promptly rushed Mr. Welch, and a pin-cushion was what he got for his "jimmy."

"MANAGEMENT."

Comedy, in Four Acts, by Curtis Brown, produced at a Matinée at the Kingsway on Monday, Dec. 21.

Lady Culthorne ..... MISS KATE PHILLIPS
Chambers ..... MR. STEWART DAWSON
Maid ..... MISS DOROTHY N. EDWARDS
Ellice Harborough ..... MISS ELAINE INESCOURT
Arthur Somerville ..... MR. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Jessamine Harborough.. MISS DOROTHEA DESMOND
Robert Harborough ..... MR. SIDNEY PAXTON
The Hon. John Barclay-Wallace MR. RUDGE HARDING

The patience of an over-indulgent audience was severely tried at a matinée at the Kingsway on Monday, when the English Play Society made an attempt to introduce two new playwrights to the public. The project was not a success, and the four acts which constituted Management revealed little that was fresh in the way of story or personality. It is a most erratic composition, in which the author, after weakly striving to create situations of sentiment, endeavours to wreck them by some absurd farcical suggestion. He evidently set out with the intention of portraying the peculiarities of an impulsive young lady named Jessamine Harborough, whose self-imposed mission is to "manage" people. She tries her hand upon Arthur Somerville, an impecunious young gentleman with an inherited distaste for work, who lives on other people's bounty. Somerville had fallen in love with Jessamine's cousin Ellice, an heiress in her own right, but, contrary to his usual practice, was unwilling to propose until he had made some effort to obtain a position. He began by writing a tale, but was so disgusted with his effort that he determined to burn the manuscript, and brings it to Ellice for that purpose. Ellice, however, sends it to a publisher, by whom it is accepted! Meanwhile Jessamine begins operations by adding Somerville to the staff of the Atlantic Monthly, of which her father, over whom she exercises an autocratic sway, is editor, and the Hon. John Barclay-Wallace, who is deeply in love with Jessamine, is assistant. Jessamine visits the editorial sanctum to find out how her protégé is progressing; Ellice and her aunt, Lady Culthorne, also arrive, and the party are engaged in a mimic game of golf when old Harborough arrives. In the result both sub-editors are discharged, and Ellice is in tears because she believes that Somerville is in love with his patroness. Jessamine returns to reassure Somerville, and finds him kissing a handkerchief, which she imagines is hers, but which the young man himself thinks belongs to Ellice. Whose handkerchief it really was it is not easy to conjecture.

Extreme measures are resorted to by Jessamine, who visits the young man at his lodgings, and coolly informs him that she has come to stay in view of their marriage. Somerville breaks the news to her as gently as possible that he does not love her, and is hurrying her off when the Hon. John arrives, and Jessamine takes refuge behind the bed-curtains. The scene that follows is an unsavoury one, for Barclay-Wallace hears a feminine shriek, and refers in no refined terms to the presence of a woman; but the sight of her cloak on a chair convinces him that it is Jessamine herself who is present, and he deals Somerville a knockdown blow. The girl comes forth, and after creating a diversion by pouring the water intended for Somerville's mouth over his head, she declares her innocence, and Harborough and Ellice arrive for no apparent reason, except to convince the latter of Somerville's affection for Jessamine. The fourth act deals with the cross purposes of Lady Culthorne, who wants to marry Jessamine to Somerville, and with the meeting between the latter and Ellice, who treats him with scorn; but in the end Ellice learns that Jessamine and the Hon. John are betrothed, and is convinced of Somerville's fidelity to herself.

A cast of well-known performers did their utmost with the material at command, and aroused interest whenever possible. Mr. H. A. Saintsbury took a grimly humorous view of Arthur Somerville, and acted with his accustomed ease and confidence. He was handicapped by the lines he had to utter, which seldom rose above the commonplace, but he developed the grim humour of the part to its fullest extent. Mr. Rudge Harding was even more heavily beset with difficulties in the rôle of the Hon. John Barclay-Wallace, who had alternately to play the milksop, the chivalrous man of the world, and the gallant lover. He came through the ordeal with the credit which only an experienced actor could achieve. The part of Jessamine Harborough is too ill-defined to afford many chances of distinction, but Miss Dorothea Desmond managed to prove quite bewitching in some of the scenes, though that in Somerville's lodgings was very trying. Miss Elaine Inescourt acted with grace and delicacy as Ellice. The brightness and vivacity of Miss Kate Phillips was all but wasted on the part of the well-intentioned aunt, Lady Culthorne, who had nothing very fresh to say. Mr. Sidney Paxton, admirably made up, gave character to the rôle of Robert Harborough, and a thoroughly finished performance of the butler Chambers was contributed by Mr. Stewart Dawson.

Little more merit attached to the first piece of the afternoon, which was a one-act play by George H. Blagrove, entitled

"MUMBY."

George Fairholm ("Mumby") MR. ALLEN THOMAS
Norah ..... MISS FRANCES DILLON
Cicely ..... MISS DOROTHY N. EDWARDS
Clarence Hartopp ..... MR. CLAUDE KING

The well-worn theme of May and December mated is treated in the little play. "Mumby" is the nickname of a lovable old gentleman who contrives chess problems while his young wife chafes at the dulness of her life in a remote country village. The tempter comes along and exerts his wiles effectively, but while the young wife is getting her cloak and hat preparatory to leaving the house with her lover, "Mumby," who has gone to call on the vicar, is run into by a motor-car. The injured man is brought into the house, and no sooner does his wife catch sight of him than her affection for "Mumby" revives, and she bids her would-be betrayer begone. The characters were treated with painstaking care by Mr. Claude King, who was very sincere and impressive as the tempter; by Mr. Allen Thomas, who was the benevolent elderly gentleman to the life; and by Miss Frances Dillon, who displayed dramatic resourcefulness and a command of emotion as the wife, but was a little inclined to over-accentuate her lines. Neither piece had a particularly hearty reception, and the calls for author were conspicuous by their absence.

Hitting too Hard.

MISS LIL HAWTHORNE, a favourite principal boy, represented Jack the Giant-killer some years back, and had to force her path through a dense forest, where the trees gave way before her as she smote them with a cudgel. She is a muscular young lady, and made the scene very realistic. One evening a super came to her as she was waiting for her cue, and, touching his hat, said: "Beg pardon, miss, but might I ask you not to 'it so 'ard to-night?" "Who are you?" she inquired. "Well, I'm the first tree to-night," replied the super; "the other man resigned, because he says you 'alf killed him, so they've put me in his place, and I can't resign because I've got a wife and family!" Miss Hawthorne then, for the first time, realised that the movable trees had men inside them.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

HOLBORN EMPIRE.

The enterprising manager who originally adopted the two-houses-a-night scheme of entertainment undoubtedly displayed much wisdom; and the success of the idea is proved up to the hilt by the many variety houses now being worked on that system. The Holborn Empire, where a most entertaining two-hours' show is given twice nightly, is now to be numbered amongst the most popular houses in the West devoted to song and smoke, and on the evenings preceding Christmas, when one usually expects business to be somewhat slack, it is difficult to find a vacant seat soon after the opening of the doors. A much-appreciated interlude in the fine bill for the current week is that for which those established favourites Clark and Hamilton are responsible. The clever and resourceful comedian of the twain impersonates the amorous musical tramp with all his old success, and is always introducing fresh business and patter that never fail to create merriment. He is just now singing a very amusing number, "Home, sweet home," also a new song, "Different Kinds of Girls," in which he drolly warbles for a trio of captivating damsels, Sue, Di, and May, and his versatility is further proved by his concluding contribution, the pretty Japanese scena, My Princess of Japan, with an entirely new scene, representing Yolian's House Outside Yokohama. Mr. Bert Clark appears as a sailor-man, who serenades a demure Japanese damsel, and is anxious to take her back with him to England; and the dainty little scena concludes with a smartly-executed speciality dance, which is loadly applauded.

Mr. George Gilbey, a comedian with a quiet, droll style, has a very funny number in "Constable Duffy," in which he impersonates a grotesque-looking member of the force, who waylays a small boy and annexes his packet of Woodbines and a couple of coppers. When a ferocious-looking cracksman appears on the scene, however, he quickly changes his tactics, and the contempt of the burglar at the cowardly attitude adopted by the constable is very funnily depicted, the facial expression of Duffy being very eloquent. Miss Eileen Douglas appears as a fascinating aspirant for fame on the legitimate boards, her song "I do want to go on the stage" and the attractive little dance which embellishes one of the verses being much appreciated; and one is always sure of amusement when Miss Lily Langtry, the vivacious and entertaining comedienne, occupies the stage. Miss Sylvia Cavalho is presenting here her admirably-enacted and humorous playlet The Husband of Peggy, in which she appears with complete success as the comely damsel who so quickly and effectually disguises herself as a most formidable-looking female, and Mr. Clifford Pembroke drolly enacts Lord Arthur Hallington, the sketch being played to the accompaniment of laughter throughout. Hunt and Thomas, in the comedy sketch Her Birthday, is another amusing item in the programme, which also includes Will English, the coloured comedian; the Carina Sisters, in their musical act; the Irish tenor, Dave Carter; the O'Gorman Brothers, in their clever clog-dancing; Arthur Melrose, whistling comedian; Terka Semmeloff, singing and dancing artist; Lydia and Anelys, in their famous Apache dance; and the always interesting Imperial Bioscope display, which on the evening to which we are referring showed some amusing pictures depicting the adventures of a man who manages to get imprisoned in a truss of straw and comes in for much rough treatment ere he is released. Mr. E. Leslie Conroy is the vigilant and courteous first-lieutenant here; and the excellent orchestra is under the careful control of Mr. James Sale.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

The few days immediately preceding Christmas are not, as a rule, very good for business at our theatres and music-halls, but an uncommonly good programme is having no difficulty in attracting excellent audiences to the Shepherd's Bush Empire. At the head of the bill is that popular actor-vocalist Mr. George Leyton, who, besides singing an excellent song, "I do like to be where the girls are," presents his grand military scena The Last Muster. Mr. E. P. Morgan, the acting-manager of the Shepherd's Bush Empire, has managed to secure ten local Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans, representing famous regiments, to appear at each performance in Mr. Leyton's scena this week, and naturally this adds greatly to the interest of the item. Wednesday this week was a military night at Shepherd's Bush, the second performance on that evening being under the patronage of Sir William Bull, M.P. for Hammersmith, and also of the Mayor of Hammersmith. The latter gentleman, unable to be present personally, forwarded to Mr. Morgan a cheque for £5 5s., to be included in Mr. Leyton's Veterans' Relief Fund. As usual when Mr. Leyton is performing, books of the words of his successful songs have been on sale during the week, and have realised a considerable sum for the above-mentioned fund.

The Jackson family find much favour with their well-known musical act, and Miss Lily Flaxmore sings a light comedy song in very taking style, and dances in a very remarkable and clever way. Harry J. Crane and company appear in a pathetic musical episode entitled Truth in Absence, a dramatic little piece which is well acted, and is evidently to the taste of the audience. Steve McCarthy achieves success as a comedian and dancer, and Tom Child, the Yorkshire tenor, winner of the 100-guinea prize, is vociferously applauded for his rendering of "Alice, where art thou?" Edie Endon is a bright and attractive comedienne, and her dancing in the acrobatic style is clever. Frederic Villiers, the famous war correspondent, provides one of the best items on the programme with his "Fifteen Minutes on the Warpath," a novel and interesting descriptive talk of the many campaigns Mr. Villiers has taken part in. The lecture, if so it may be called, is illustrated by actual photographs of stirring scenes of war. George Auger (the giant actor) and company present that unique and intensely humorous playlet Jack the Giant-killer. George Auger is the tallest actor on earth, and the rest of the cast are said to be some of the smallest. The sketch is extremely funny. A turn that secures as great a reception as any is that provided by Miss Marie Kendall, who, charmingly attired, sings a couple of songs with a fine sense of comedy, and goes very "big" indeed. The programme is completed, as usual, by the American Bioscope, showing a new series of up-to-date pictures. Mr. E. P. Morgan, as before-mentioned, is the acting-manager, and he has an able assistant in Mr. Herbert Mack.

The New Cross Empire will be concerned with Fred Karno's latest sketch, G. P. O., in which the humour is safe with Fred Kitchen. The Selbinis are also to be found in a fine bill.

At the Canterbury to-night will be found the licensing-bill comedian Ernest Shand; Pipifax and Paulo, in "Humsti-Bumsti"; The Grip of Iron, with Fred Powell in his remarkable creation of Simmonet, a character he played at the Princess's a few years ago; Gertie Gitana, Phœbe Mercer and Co., Fred Russell, Jack Lorimer, Lively Lily Langtry, and dainty Daisy James.

Mr. J. L. Graydon may rely on a packed Boxing night audience this evening. Jules Garrison and company is topping the bill at the Middlesex, and in addition are Tom Costello, Spry and Austin, Frank Seeley, Mona Garrick, the Gilberts, and Charles Baldwin and company.

EDWARD SWANBOROUGH DEAD.

After a long illness, extending over a period of two years, Mr. Edward Swanborough passed away on Monday at the residence of his sister, Mrs. William Lyon, of 1, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, where he had been nursed with loving care and tenderness. He finished his active work in connection with the management of the Chelsea Palace in the spring of 1906, and though he for some time was sanguine of being able to resume his duties, those who were intimate with him had no such hope. Mr. Henri Gros, managing-director of the Metropolitan and Chelsea, recognising the seriousness of his case, put himself at the head of a movement which resulted in a testimonial matinée that was held at the London Pavilion on June 28, 1906, when, among others, Mr. Charles Hawtrey appeared. Before his appointment as manager of the Chelsea Palace in 1903, the deceased manager had been out of employment for a considerable period, and for a long time he was hampered with financial responsibilities not of his own creation, which he honourably and secretly discharged.

A son of Mrs. Swanborough, the highly esteemed lady who for so long directed the fortunes of the old Strand Theatre, the deceased gentleman filled the position of treasurer at that house for many years. He was the brother of Ada Swanborough, who played principal parts at the Strand in the palmy days of burlesque and Byronic comedy; and his brother, Arthur Swanborough, was at one time manager of the Royal Music Hall.

Mr. Swanborough had many happy and humorous recollections of the old Strand Theatre. On two occasions as a youngster he decorated the house with cheap gold and red French paper bought in Cannon-street, being assisted in this undertaking by the painter's labourer, Tom Christian—who, by the way, had a pension from the proprietress until the day of his death—and Mr. Swanborough used to recall, with a laugh, that the newspapers at the time highly complimented him upon his artistic and decorative abilities. Another little anecdote he used to relate did not appear to flatter the old playhouse in the Strand. A piece, called The Woman in the Dusthole, written by John Oxenford, was produced there, and Oxenford wrote his own criticism upon it in the Times, stating in the course of his remarks that a more appropriate title could not have been chosen, as the place in which the play was produced was, indeed, a dusthole. Later on, however, when Mr. Swanborough's sister took possession, very great alterations and improvements were effected in the old house.

The Prince of Wales (now the King), accompanied by the Princess and their children, as a rule paid three or four visits a month to the Strand, and the Prince's first request was always, "I want to be received by my boys," meaning Mr. Swanborough and his brother Arthur. Mr. Swanborough was the first theatrical manager who went over to the music halls. At the time of his becoming connected with the London Pavilion—which, by the way, has been rebuilt since he managed it—there were no stalls, the space where these are now being then occupied by lounges and tables.

The deceased gentleman stood on a high rung of the ladder of Masonry. In December, 1864, he was passed into the Lodge of Joppa, 188, some years later becoming a member of the Asaph Lodge, with which he was associated for thirty-six years. In 1879 he was a Master of this Lodge and journeyed to Truro with the Grand Lodge of England to witness the Prince of Wales lay the foundation-stone of Truro Cathedral. He was also, together with Mr. James Willing, one of the founders of the Strand Lodge, and its first Senior Warden.

Mr. Swanborough's sister, Mrs. Major Lyon, is the original Miss Swanborough who played at the Olympic with Robson and Emden, and, prior to that, she was at the Haymarket Theatre, under J. B. Buckstone's management, playing Juliet to Miss Cushman's Romeo. It was William Swanborough, a brother, who built the Prince of Wales's Theatre in Birmingham, the other brother, Arthur, being the acting-manager of the Strand for many years.

The deceased gentleman was buried on Thursday at Brompton Cemetery.

PIRATED MUSIC.

Charles Martin, 26, a licensed pedlar, was charged before Mr. Biron at Old-street on Saturday with being in possession, for the purpose of sale, of a quantity of pirated copies of copyright musical works.

Police-constable Filber, 164 H, said that on the complaint of an agent of the Music Publishers' Association, he that day (Saturday) took the prisoner into custody in Brick-lane, Spitalfields, and found in his possession 38 pieces of music.

Fredk. Malee, the agent, said the 38 pieces comprised copies of "The Merry Widow valse," "Love me, and the world is mine" (song), "Down the vale" (song), and "Will you love me in December," &c. All were illegal prints of copyright works.

The prisoner said he would plead guilty, and he added that he was not offering them for sale, but had been in a coffee-shop to separate them as they were mixed.

Mr. Biron supposed the prisoner knew the music was pirate stuff.

The witness Malee said the man was quite aware of the nature of the trade, as one of his brothers had been fined £15 less than two months ago for carrying on the work.

Mr. Biron fined the prisoner 40s. and ordered the copies to be destroyed.

The Prisoner: Will that conviction interfere with my pedlar's licence?

Mr. Biron: That is a matter for the police; I cannot tell you.

THE PECKHAM HIPPODROME.

The Crown Theatre, Peckham, newly redecorated and upholstered, opened its doors last Monday evening with a two-houses-a-night variety entertainment. The house is under the proprietorship of the Crown Theatre, Ltd., and Mr. Cecil Paget is still the popular manager. The entertainment given is a bright and varied one, and should the level of the present programme be sustained every week large audiences should be de rigueur. The bill of fare is opened by Mr. Walter Wallis, comedian, who wins applause for his efforts. Messrs. Freeda and Preston are two amusing cross-talk comedians and vocalists, who also dance effectively. Miss Cissy Dryden, comedienne and dancer, scores well both in vocal and terpsichorean efforts. Cecile Francois and company present an ingenious scena, An Artist's Studio, in which the gentleman sings and waltzes gracefully with a pretty damsel, who steps out of a picture-frame, and afterwards performs some clever feats on a revolving globe. Miss Sybil Montague, a comely soprano, distinguishes herself as a ballad vocalist. A very attractive item is a powerful military sketch by Cecil Newton adapted from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story "A Japanese Revenge," in which Mr. Ferdinand Conti as an heroic little Japanese Major, and a gentleman whose name is not on the programme, as a tall Russian Colonel, greatly distinguish themselves. Mr. Jack Sharman, a young gentleman with a commendably distinct enunciation, sings with excellent point "What's the use of worrying father?"; and the Varrios are two ladies who prove themselves clever instrumentalists. Some first-class animated pictures are shown on the Bioscope, including a comic series entitled How Paddy Liked the Horseflesh, and The Customs and Birds of St. Kilda, in which the fishermen at work and the stormy petrels, herring gulls, &c., of this storm-beaten coast are wonderfully shown in their native haunts on the cliffs. The entertainment concludes with a capital Christmas item St. George and the Dragon, produced by Messrs. Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink. It is presented by a large company, and the scenery, effects, and costumes are of the most gorgeous description, the final fight in the air between St. George and the Dragon, the latter a horrible monster who belches forth huge flames, being most realistically depicted. Seven mail-clad warriors with their steeds, representing the champions of the various Christian nations, also cross and re-cross the stage, and the item is received with great enthusiasm. Altogether there is plenty to please both the youngsters and the grown-ups in Mr. Cecil Paget's latest programme.

NEW PAVILION AT ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

A very short period has been occupied in the erection of the latest palace of entertainment in Old-street, Ashton-under-Lyne, by Messrs. Broadhead and Son, proprietors of the Ashton Empire Hippodrome. The time covered from the clearing of the ground on which the building stands to the final touch of decoration in its spacious interior was sixteen weeks. It is built on the American plan of steel girder and brickwork, the interior walls are of glazed brick and plaster, the outer façade is of red Accrington and white-glazed bricks, forming a neat design. The opening took place on Monday evening. The walls on the level of the stage and the stage proscenium are covered with fibrous plaster, and the same material lines the circle front. The latter is in a raised design, picked out in gold and colours. The decorations throughout are of the Louis XIV. period. The floors of the stalls and pit are of easy gradient, the former covered with cortezine and seated with tip-up chairs upholstered in maroon plush. Other backed seats are similarly upholstered; the pit is also furnished with backed seats. In the circle, which is of immense width and depth, the best seats are placed, viz., tip-up chairs of the lounge pattern upholstered in crimson plush, and the floor carpeted. Every precaution has been taken in case of panic for speedy exit. There are six entrance and exit doors in the front of the building, and two wide exits which open on to Williamson-street in the rear. The structure has practically been in the minds of the proprietors for some six months and the architect's plans under consideration, and a goodly portion of the material ready for placing in position; hence the speedy raising of the Pavilion. It will be chiefly used by the proprietors for vaudeville entertainments, combined with bioscopic pictures. It will also be let for public functions and public meetings if required. Mr. Edward Leigh is the principal artist who has been engaged in the work of embellishment. The electric lighting throughout is supplied from the Ashton Corporation cables, and there is every convenience for visitors, including heating and a thorough system of ventilation. An adornment to the walls is framed pictures of noted artists and other photographic studies and drawings. Large palms and other plants and greenery will also be prominently placed. Mr. W. Leech, of the Empire Hippodrome, is the resident-acting-manager, and Mr. T. Edward Owen assistant-manager for the proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son.

BOW PALACE.

Although the days immediately preceding the Yuletide holidays are not generally looked upon as a good time for business by music-hall caterers, audiences here have been by no means discouraging. The programme is excellent. For those with a leaning towards the boisterously mirthful there was Charles Austin with his company of depression-deflers in a burlesque termed Parker, P.C. Few sketches have produced such a wholesome chorus of merriment. Tattered and begrimed, Parker (Charles Austin) struggles into the local station dragging vigorously a small, weak-looking boy, who holds a little wooden horse Horse-stealing and assault are the serious offences charged; and Parker looks bewilderingly at the mirthful countenances of his fellow-officers. Worn out after a long succession of such foolery, the sergeant dismisses Parker, who suddenly resolves to start a force of his own. He does—such a procession of unkempt "slops" has never been seen. The piece goes on its merry course, until the third scene discloses the interior of Parker's Police Station. The force is seen practising the latest step-dance under the guidance of an expert. And then in the midst of the fun, and just as a powdered flunkey is about to depart for whiskies and sodas, a cry of "Fire!" drowns the laughter. It is the house of his late employer, the sergeant of the legitimate force. Parker dashes out, and returns with the sergeant's young daughter. And so, with the promise of reinstatement, the curtain drops after a succession of side-splitting incidents.

For the lover of sensationalism there is a finely-acted playlet, Avenged, by Miss Edith Lewis and Co. The admirer of the piquant finds a favourite in Marie Gray, and the boy in the gallery can sing his chorus song after Rose D'Alby with a gusto equalled only by the sweetness of the little girl's voice who joins with her. There is also an exhibition of feats of strength by Leo and Roland for the physical culture faddist, and a comedy act, The Lady Artist, by Wright and Elton. Admirers of daintiness—and there were evidently many present—have their tastes fully satisfied by the items of Miss Freda Fern and Minnie Kirby. Ted Lowry also entertains. A very warmly-worded Christmas greeting is thrown on the sheet, and when this is succeeded by a photograph of Mr. Harvey himself, a great cheer goes round the hall.

THE LATE MR. FRANK HEATH.

The late Mr. Frank Heath, whose death we announced last week, was born at Woolwich in 1856, and was educated at King's College. On the completion of his education he travelled abroad for several years, gaining a knowledge of foreign countries which afterwards he put to good use. In 1881 Mr. Heath was engaged by the Royal Polytechnic Society to give a series of lectures on foreign travel. Many well-known people attended these lectures and complimented Mr. Heath upon their excellence. He left the Polytechnic to pilot Mr. Marlande Clarke's company through the provinces, and on this tour he made excellent use of his fine baritone voice, meeting with instant success at every appearance.

After the death of Mr. Marlande Clarke he became associated with Mr. William Bailey, who was then manager of the Metropolitan Music Hall, Edgware-road. His official connection with this well-known place of amusement lasted about seventeen years, and during that period he made many friends, not only amongst members of the music-hall profession, but also amongst the habitués of the "Met." As evidence of this he was presented with a gold star badge as a token of good-fellowship and esteem from a number of his friends who frequented the hall. The inscription on the badge, "Semper Paratus" (always ready), was particularly appropriate as applied to Frank Heath. He was always ready and willing to help anyone in distress or difficulties. This was shown in the case of the late G. W. Hunt, the secretary for about thirty years of the Music Hall Sick Fund. On Mr. Hunt's retirement from this post, Mr. Heath, as one of the hon. secretaries of the testimonial fund, worked like a Trojan so that the benefit entertainment which took place at the London Pavilion should be a success. Many stars of the profession appeared on this occasion, and a sufficient sum was raised to enable Mr. Hunt to pass his remaining days in comfort. On the death of Mr. Herbert Campbell, for many years the esteemed president of the Music Hall Sick Fund, Mr. Heath started in The Era a subscription list to raise money to provide a fitting memorial to the deceased comedian, but unfortunately he did not meet with sufficient support in his laudable intention, and the proposal had to be abandoned, much to Mr. Heath's disappointment and regret.

Mr. Heath made his last public appearance as a lecturer at the Oxford Music Hall, when he gave an interesting and instructive lecture on the Röntgen rays.

Mr. Heath joined the Music Hall Sick Fund in its early days, and as a member of the management committee rendered most valuable service, always attending whenever able the monthly meetings. On the retirement of Mr. William Bailey from the position of hon. treasurer four years ago, Mr. Heath was induced to accept the vacant post, and he devoted a good deal of his spare time to the duties of the office. He always showed a keen interest in the welfare of the Fund, and as hon. treasurer took care that it was conducted on business lines. The society has sustained a severe loss by his deeply-regretted death.

The Funeral.

The funeral took place at Kensal Green Roman Catholic Cemetery on Monday last, the remains being interred in the family grave. The cortège, consisting of a glass-panelled car, drawn by four horses, and followed by ten private broughams, left the residence of the deceased, 40, Teignmouth-road, Cricklewood, at 11.45 a.m., and arrived at the cemetery at 12.30 p.m. The principal mourners included the widow, Mrs. Heath, Mr. J. W. Heath (son), Mrs. Watts (sister), Mr. Pat Carey (hon. treasurer pro tem.), Mr. Fred D. Harris, Mr. W. G. Eaton, and Mr. Tom Carney (members of the committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund), Mr. R. T. Baines (secretary of the society, Mr. and Mrs. Copeland, Mrs. Richards, Mr. Hiscock, Mr. Britton, Mr. H. Trask, Mr. F. C. Mander, Mr. E. Robinson, Mr. H. Thompson, Mr. Abbey, jun., Mr. Owen Edwards, and others.

The Rev. Rev. Canon Fleming conducted the requiem service most impressively.

The outer coffin was of English oak, with artistic brass handles, the plate bearing the following inscription:—

William Denis Sheahan (Frank Heath),
Died 16th December, 1908,
Aged fifty-two years.
R.I.P.

Amongst those who sent flowers were the following:—The officers and committee of the M.H.S.F., Mr. and Mrs. Pat Carey, Mr. Algernon Daniel, Mr. F. G. Abbey, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Abbey, Mr. and Mrs. A. Copeland, Mr. and Mrs. L. Britton, Mrs. Demetrius, Mrs. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. R. Erredge, Mr. and Mrs. P. Y. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. E. Greaves, Nurse K. Healy, Mr. and Mrs. Mander, Mr. Salo Lichtwitz, Mr. and Mrs. F. Vanoni and family, Mrs. J. Blake, Mr. H. Trask and son, Mr. and Mrs. E. Roberson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hiscock, and the cook and manservant. A letter was received from Mr. W. J. Wainratta, vice-president, expressing his regret that an important business engagement prevented his attending the funeral of his old and esteemed friend and colleague.

The funeral arrangements were conducted by Mr. T. W. Muzzell, of Edgware-road and Harrow-road, W.

NEW ACCRINGTON HIPPODROME.

This beautiful new home of variety is situated on the Ellison's Tenement, near the site of the old Hippodrome, which was totally destroyed by fire on June 26 last. The wonderful expedition with which the building has been erected is regarded as having created something like a local record. Its position is well chosen, as in addition to drawing its audiences from the rapidly-increasing population of the surrounding district, it is only one minute's walk from the railway station, and is in close proximity to the Corporation electric tram station. A special stopping-place for these cars has been arranged, and passengers will be set down and picked up immediately outside the theatre. The building itself is of imposing proportions, and is a very handsome structure, filling every requirement of an up-to-date theatre of varieties. All the latest improvements have been introduced for the convenience and comfort of the patrons, and is as near perfection as possible. The main entrances to the house are in Ellison's-street, adjoining Blackburn-road, the principal thoroughfare of the town. The pretty façade is of terra-cotta with Bath stone facings, making a neat and attractive elevation. The building is lighted throughout with electricity, electroliers being fitted in the roof and around the balconies. Around the walls also are gas-burners, which will be used only in the event of the failure of the electric current.

The ground floor slopes gently from back to front, and there are two divisions, viz., orchestra stalls and pit. The floor of the stalls is covered with a heavy green carpet, and the draperies of the boxes (of which there are two), the tableaux curtains, and the seating of the stalls and circle are of dark crimson velvet, in strong contrast to the general colour scheme. The seatings, floors, and roof are of fireproof construction, and in the flies and in front of the house are the latest spring coupling fire equipments. There is a thorough system of heating, which will be much appreciated by those who remember their experiences in the old structure. The whole of the furnishings and decorations are on a most elaborate scale, and no expense has been spared in this respect. The building is a two-tier house, with the sight-lines as near as possible. It has been decorated in strict accord with architectural precepts, the details being of excellent character. The ceiling, almost flat, is enriched with three panels. The large one in the centre is a pretty floral design with a pale green background, with one smaller on each side. The predominating colour scheme is cream and gold, enriched with shades of salmon, pink, and turquoise blue. The papers on the walls are of a dark red colour, as is also the tableaux curtains, which are of heavy plush decorated with gold lacings and tassels, the whole combining to give the interior an effect which is entirely comfortable and pleasing.

Refreshment buffets are provided in the circle and pit, and a specially-prepared Biograph chamber has been erected at the back of the circle on the latest principle, and should a film flare up, the flames could only go up a wide funnel or chimney running through the roof of the house. The circle is fitted up entirely with red plush tip-up chairs, and will seat about 500 people. The gallery is a very commodious one, and the exits and entrances lead to the side of the building. Altogether there is accommodation for seating 1,600, with standing room for an additional 500. The stage is 32ft. wide, and is fitted with fireproof curtain and sprinkling apparatus, whilst all the doors leading to the stage are fire-resisting and self-closing. The numerous dressing-rooms are of ample size and fitted with every convenience for the artists. The building has been constructed by Messrs. J. Parkinson and Sons, of Blackpool, while Mr. Bertie Crewe, of London, was the architect, Mr. F. de Jong, London, the decorator, and Messrs. A. and R. Dean, Birmingham, are responsible for the upholstering and furnishing.

The building was commenced on Aug. 5, 1908, the whole of the work being completed in a little over four months. The opening performance attracted enormous crowds, a great many people being turned away. The management have been fortunate in securing a strong bill for the opening week. The Ottoways, speciality artists, had the honour of opening the programme, and were well received; Mr. Charles T. Aldrich, versatile entertainer, proved the tit-bit of the bill, and was repeatedly recalled; Frazer and French were accorded a hearty reception for their clever dancing; and Fred Bamford, the whistling newsboy, was a big favourite. Miss Ethel Loftus proved herself a capable comedienne, her song "Father" being popular; Wild, Willie, and West in their comedy act were received with laughter and applause; and Joan Deering won much favour as a vocalist and violinist, whilst the pictures on the Bioscope were very entertaining. A splendid orchestra has been engaged, and is under the able leadership of Mr. Taylor, late of the Lyric Theatre. Mr. Walter Mould, the popular manager of the former hippodrome, is again to be resident-manager, and was heartily welcomed back to his old post. Mr. Fred Willmott is director of entertainment, and a competent staff has been engaged before and behind the curtains.

Caicedo, the wonderful walker on the wire, the Dunedin troupe of cyclists, Maude Rochez and her monkeys, and Joseph Hart's "Raindears" will be seen, among others, at the London Hippodrome, in addition to Bolossy Kiralfy's Christmas play To-morrow, produced by Mr. Kiralfy and Mr. Frank Parker.

Charged at Croydon on Monday with embezzling £1 12s. 3d., received on account of the Empire Palace Company, a young fellow named Knight, living at Bynes-road, Croydon, swooned in the dock, and had to be carried out. He was employed to sell cakes and chocolates in the music-hall, and one night he disappeared without having accounted for the sum mentioned.

Mr. Eustace Jay, manager of the Empire Palace, Croydon, said he could not think Knight was right in his head. He was a guttersnipe when witness took him in hand. No one cared for him and no one would harbour him. He had worked for him honestly, and witness believed he had been led away. A remand of a week was granted, and Mr. Jay stood bail.

Mr. Fred Ginnett's company will appear in Dick Turpin at the Hackney Empire. Mr. Fred Ginnett's mare has perhaps attained the highest place occupied by any equine performer. Clever horses have not been few, but all associated with this famous steed declare her to be unique in her part. It may be too much to say that the scene in which the good mare dies, induced by exhaustion, "makes" the sketch, but however that may be, it is a certainty that the pathos of the incident cajoles the ready tear from the sympathetic eye just as easily as does the death of Little Willie in East Lynne. Mr. Fred Ginnett declares that there never has been such a mare for the part as the Bess to be seen at Hackney next week.

The turn bottoming the Hackney bill will be the Musical Twelve, in a new and original mélange founded on the famous opera, The Bohemian Girl. The twelve consist of six pianists and six vocalists, the latter including Mlle. Louise Van Dalle, the celebrated prima donna; George Hilton St. Just, operatic tenor; and T. H. Wood, the popular baritone. A special turn of great interest will be Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

AT the Empire Music Hall, Wrexham, this week Billy Bland and Carrie Nono produced their successful comedy sketch The Long-Lost Son; Baroux and Bion proved themselves clever and eccentric acrobats; Joe S. Atkin is a quaint vocal comedian and Harry Daubney a novel ventriloquist. As usual, a special feature of the entertainment was the series of amusing and instructive pictures.

MR. GEO. O. STARR, the manager of the Crystal Palace, has during the past year received a great many applications from season-ticket holders and from others who are anxious that greater facilities for lawn tennis should be given during the summer months. It has therefore been decided to set apart a portion of the cricket ground for lawn tennis courts form May to September, 1909.

AT the Opera House, Tunbridge Wells (Hippodrome season, Mouillot and De Frece circuit), Lux's clever poodles and terriers in their feats and the Parisian minstrelsy of the Feodora Trio are great attractions this week, and the farmyard and other imitations by Harry Carsdale, the humorous ventriloquism of Burt Welch, as well as Chas. Leighton's eccentric entertainment at the piano, and the singing and dancing of Ena Richards, make up a capital programme.

THE premier attraction at the Empire Palace, Wolverhampton, for Christmas week is the Craggs in a highly-amusing sketch, Billy of the Channel Queen, which affords ample scope for displaying the acrobatic ability of this celebrated troupe. Another excellent turn is that of Randolph King, protean actor, who portrays a number of diverse characters with considerable skill; Ruby Dahl presents a clever marionette show; Zena Pana at the piano sings nicely; Charles Andrews, comedian and dancer, makes a hit; and also in the bill are Jenny Lynn, in character songs, and Fred Dunstone, comedian.

MR. SYDNEY T. PEASE has once again been proving his versatility. Concluding on Dec. 5 a starring engagement with Mr. Bannister Howard as the Silver King, he was secured by Mr. George Dance to stage-manage his No. 1 Havana company. Owing to the sudden indisposition of the principal comedian, Mr. Pease at once undertook the rôle of Nix the Bosun, and opens in the part on Boxing Day at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth. Mr. Pease, who only returned last June from a 50,000 mile tour in the Far East, received an offer by cable on Friday last to return immediately to Calcutta viâ Marseilles and Bombay; but, owing to another contract, was unable to accept Mr. Bandmann's offer.

THE 110th annual publication of the "Post Office London Directory," issued by Kelly's Directories, Ltd., comes along with its usual regularity, and brings its welcome with it. The whole volume being kept standing in type enables corrections to be made in some of the divisions down to the latest moment, compatible with its appearance about the middle of December. The already overgrown proportions of the "London Directory" were increased when the addition was made of the section covering the County of London. Although for many years past the book has been bound in two volumes, this form of publication was so little in demand that it was obvious that the convenience of having all the information within two covers exceeded the discomfort of excessive bulk. With a view of consulting the convenience of the majority of their customers the publishers have increased the width of the pages by adding another column, thereby reducing the number of pages of the complete volume (with County Suburbs) to 3,440, while not curtailing any of the contents of the various divisions. No addition having been made to its height, the Directory can still occupy its accustomed place on the bookshelf. The admirably defined linen map of London still occupies its place inside the cover.

SYDNEY C. CASTLE.—Our Boys was originally produced at the Vaudeville Theatre, Jan. 16, 1875, and ran at that house until April 18, 1879, the number of performances being 1,362. It was not produced at the old Prince of Wales's.

J. H. EAST (Nottingham).—There is an excellent list, with full particulars of plot, &c., in the shilling "Guide to Selecting Plays," published by French, Ltd., 26, Southampton-street, Strand.

ALEXANDRA.—Mr. Harry Lauder returns to London in the early spring. He should have appeared this Christmas in Mr. Fred Wyndham's Theatre Royal, Glasgow, pantomime.

CONSTANT READER (Brixton).—1. They are not related. 2. Not till next year.

J. THOMSON.—1. Miss Evie Greene played the title-rôle of The Duchess of Dantzic in America. She made her first appearance in variety at the Palace recently, and is now at the Coliseum.

W. J. ARMOUR.—The phrase, "Am I right, or any other man?" was first used in this country by the stump orator, Unsworth. The "oration" was afterwards given by W. West and other "Ethiopian" entertainers.

C. WERNTIE.—1. Miss Billie Burke informs us that her height is 5ft. 4in.; that she was born Aug. 7, 1885; that her favourite flowers are long-stemmed roses. 2, 4, and 5. No details to hand. 3. Neither, so far as we know.

F. BROWN.—You will have plenty of attractions of that sort to choose from this Christmas. There will be three regular pantomimes at the West End—the Drury Lane, the Adelphi, and the Lyceum—besides spectacle at the Hippodrome and a pantomime at Hengler's. A few of the suburban theatres will produce pantomimes.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

GUY'S TONIC may be particularly recommended to those with whom iron or quinine does not agree. Though entirely free from these, it contains many strengthening ingredients, is of vegetable origin, and is distinctly palatable and nice to take. Convalescents and dyspeptic sufferers find it an appetiser and digestive of high value, while it strengthens and nourishes the nerves, curing neuralgia, sleeplessness, and flatulent or nervous indigestion. Guy's Tonic dispels depression and gives comfort and confidence to the patient. Its general effect may be stated briefly—"Guy's Tonic invigorates."

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required. — St. James's Gazette.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1908.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Once more we have Christmas with us, and there is nothing to prevent it being really, as well as conventionally, a "merry" season. The joys of Yuletide have often been ridiculed; but it has not yet been proposed to abolish Christmas. The roots of the rejoicing lie far deeper than a mere date. It does not require to be very strong on the subject of "solstices" to understand the feeling of relief and hope that we experience when we have passed the shortest day of the year, and have spring to look forward to. In London, especially, the thought that we are leaving the worst of the foggy period behind us is a great satisfaction. And though, for some time past, we seem to have usually met with mild and "muggy" weather at Christmas, that very "mugginess" makes us the more grateful for the light and colour of our homes and our theatres.

There is something absolutely appropriate in the association of Christmas with fun and spectacle. We cannot live completely without sunshine and music and colour—bright, vivid colour such as Nature gives us in flowers and sunsets and autumn leaves; joyous song, such as she supplies in her bird orchestras among the branches. There is probably no uglier and more depressing place in Europe than the streets of London on a raw, "sloppy" December day. But the resources of civilisation are not exhausted. We return to our homes; we exultantly remove our mud-stained garments; we wash the coat of carbon from our skin; and we seek from Art what has been denied us by Nature. And Art responds most liberally to our demand. The old-fashioned pantomime was only a burlesque with a "transformation" scene and a harlequinade tacked on to the end of it. The ballets were not first-rate—they could not compare with those which are now offered at the Alhambra and the Empire—and the artists in the play had to make the most of rhymed dialogue interspersed with puns. The old-fashioned pantomime has gone with the old-fashioned Christmases, all snow and frost, and carols and waits. We want something with more beauty in it to comfort our starved senses. And we get it. Already Mr. BEERBOHM TREE has led off the ball with an entertainment artfully combined of quiet, clever, refined acting, juvenile ability—he has, with his usual happy luck, discovered an Infant Phenomenon of the first class—sweet music and exquisite stage pictures; and then we have the glorious displays at Drury Lane, the Adelphi, the Lyceum, and the other pantomime-producing playhouses. For some time the transformation scene was behind the age. The art of the painter, the art of the illustrator, and the art of the home decorator had been reformed and improved; but we still adhered to the scenic traditions of the past. It is not too much to say that the only courageous colourists of the day are the little-known geniuses who arrange our ballets and the scenic effects of our spectacular pieces. It is simply astounding how they manage to combine such powerful colours under the electric lights without jarring on the sensitive eye. The only trouble with regard to the larger spectacles is that the optic nerve becomes satiated with so much pleasure; and contrivers of spectacular entertainments might well consider the possibility of varying from time to time the amount of light supplied. In a big ballet the lights seem to be full on, or nearly full on, all the time. In Pinkie and the Fairies, at His Majesty's, there are changes and degrees in illumination; and the backgrounds supply the necessary delicate browns and greys. But after all, brightness is the great thing at Christmastide.

It is not only the public that may congratulate itself this Christmas; the manager and the player as a whole should have cause for satisfaction. For—owing, it is said, to the White City, but, we think, due to the excellence of the entertainments offered at our theatres—the past season has been a prosperous one. We have one play approaching its 600th performance; two working up to their 500th; nearly half a dozen which may hope to attain their 300th; and nine or ten over their 100th performance. And in the list of comparative failures there is nothing that need depress us. The only one of the pieces of which we can say that we regret that it failed to attract was The Swayboat at the Kingsway; a remarkable work of the superior order which asked of the general public too great a sacrifice of its prejudices and too earnest an absorption in the scientific study of morbid psychology. The "slump" in theatres which was at one time prophesied seems not to have arrived; and we wish our readers, great and small, low and high, rich and poor, with confidence and cheeriness,

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

"OOP AT KIERSTENAN'S."

A Play, in Three Acts, by Bertha N. Graham, produced at the Court Theatre on Sunday evening, Dec. 20.

Mrs. Kierstenan .....MISS INEZ BENSUSAN
Ada Rowbotham .....MISS MARGUERITE CELLIER
George Kierstenan .....MR. CLARENCE DERWENT
Bessaria .....MISS BERYL FABER
Adam Raby .....MR. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN
Zebra Reynard .....MISS ELINOR FOSTER
Edith Reynard .....MISS LORNA LAURENCE

"Do be real!" cries one of the characters in this play to another, and the advice might very well have been taken to heart by the authoress herself. For if Miss Graham had made her people in Oop at Kierstenan's more lifelike her piece would have benefited accordingly. One of the principal characters is an emasculate, pseudo-literary dreamer, who prates about culture, and expresses his silly ideas in absurdly high falutin phrases. We find it difficult to believe in him at all. He is altogether an intolerably effeminate personage, who upsets one's nerves every time he begins to speak.

This irritating decadent returns to his Lancashire home after an absence of eight years, to find that his father, a mill-owner and once a mill-hand, has been dead three months. It appears that, not being able to agree with his father's materialistic views of life, George Kierstenan had left the paternal roof to seek a literary fortune in London. He does not seem to have succeeded very well, and we learn as he returns to the old home with his wife (Bessaria) that that lady has been mainly responsible for keeping him from starvation. Now the management of the mill devolves upon him and his wife. George, it may be at once admitted, possesses no business ability whatever, and his commercial ineptitude is a matter of which he proudly boasts. However, Bessaria's commonsense and practical mind, along with the energies of Adam Raby, the manager of the mill, are brought to bear with good result upon the working of the property. This means, of course, that Bessaria and Adam are frequently in each other's company, and on one occasion they are seen by two of the mill-hands to embrace each other. The knowledge thus acquired is made use of by one of the girls, Zebra Reynard, in demanding an advance in wages, which, being refused, certain information is given to George Kierstenan. The latter, "wet rag" though he be, realises that he is largely to blame for the situation which has arisen. He has neglected his wife and his business in order to give play to his vain fancies. Instead of being by his wife's side, he allows another man to usurp his place, while he discusses his poetry and a play he is writing with the help of his unmarried cousin, who is also "cultured." Small wonder, then, that Adam Raby falls in loves with Bessaria! And, indeed, Bessaria frankly confesses to George that genuine affection exists between her and Adam. George, with his lack-adaisical, decadent spirit, tells her to choose between him and Adam. Bessaria feels she has a duty to perform towards her weakling of a husband and towards Kierstenan's Mill. She will stay. Adam goes to Australia on the business of the firm, but before he leaves tenders six months' notice, which George accepts.

Miss Graham certainly has the gift of writing for the stage, and Oop at Kierstenan's can be made suitable for general production by alteration. And there is no reason, granted the effecting of certain improvements, which probably will be now quite apparent to the authoress, that the play should not enjoy a successful run in the provinces if not in London. Perhaps the most lifelike character was that of Zebra Reynard, the blunt, outspoken mill-hand and leader of the "winders." This was admirably played by Miss Elinor Foster. Miss Beryl Faber acted with charming freshness as Bessaria; and Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn was seen in an interesting and carefully studied portraiture of the Lancashire-mill manager. It would have been better, we think, had Mr. Clarence Derwent, who appeared as George Kierstenan, acted a little on his own initiative, and toned down the absurdities of what, as it stood, was an impossible character. As it was, however, he satisfactorily carried out the authoress's ideas. Miss Inez Bensusan was good as the grumbling, weeping, hypocritical dowager Mrs. Kierstenen; and Miss Marguerite Cellier as Ada Rowbotham made the most of an indifferently-written part.

The production furnished another interesting evening under the auspices of the Play Actors.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

JOHANNESBURG, NOV. 28.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, B. and T. Wheeler, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Woodman.—Money still continues to fill the coffers of this popular house of amusement. The Girls of Gottenberg is the draw this week. As Mitzi Miss Maud Aston is exceptionally attractive, winning all hearts as soon as she enters the stage. A manly Prince Otto is Mr. F. J. Blackman. The comic business of Messrs. Foster Courtenay and Alf Beers as Max Moddelkopf and Brittlbottl respectively, causes endless hilarity. Following up The White Man, which was a decided success, the Leonard Rayne company at the Standard Theatre this week staged A Royal Divorce, with Mr. Rayne as Napoleon and Miss Gertrude Godart as Josephine. Although the piece is far from new to the Randites it met with continued applause, a fact no doubt owing in a large amount to the artistic acting of Mr. Rayne and Miss Godart. Miss Freda Godfrey as Stephanie de Beauharnais acted in a talented manner.

"DOROTHY."

Phyllis Tuppitt .....MISS CORALIE BLYTHE
Tom Strutt .....MR. HERBERT STRATHMORE
John Tuppitt .....MR. F. J. VIGAY
Dorothy Bantam .....MISS CONSTANCE DREVER
Lydia Hawthorn .....MISS LOUIE POUNDS
Geoffrey Wilder .....MR. JOHN BARDSLEY
Harry Sherwood .....MR. C. HAYDEN COFFIN
Lurcher .....MR. ARTHUR WILLIAMS
Squire Bantam .....MR. LEMPRIERE PRINGLE
Mrs. Privett .....MISS EMILY SPILLER
Lady Betty .....MISS BETTY HARDRESS

It is a little further back than twenty-two years since Dorothy was produced under the management of Mr. George Edwardes at the Gaiety Theatre. To be precise, the date on which the piece was first seen was Sept. 25, 1886, so that Messrs. Stephenson and Cellier's play has more than attained its majority in a very healthy condition. The same piece, older playgoers may remember, was played at the Prince's (now Prince of Wales's) Theatre shortly after its production at the Gaiety, and with it, too, was opened the Lyric Theatre in December, 1888. With this and other unnamed records, one scarcely wondered at being told that Monday's performance was number 2031st of Dorothy's career.

A special interest attached to the present revival in view of the re-appearance in their original parts of, respectively, Lurcher and Harry Sherwood, of Mr. Arthur Williams and Mr. C. Hayden Coffin. It seems something in the nature of a record that two famous artists should be entertaining a fresh generation in parts in which they had in the years ago entertained the fathers of that generation! It may be of further interest to refer to the source to which Stephenson was indebted for his libretto of Dorothy, and to relate a little tale of history which hangs thereby. On the night of Feb. 4, 1715, was produced at Drury-lane a comedy written by Charles Johnson, called Country Lasses; or, the Custom of the Manor. The author, born in 1679, was intended for the law, and entered at the Middle Temple, but he changed his vocation. Forming an intimate acquaintanceship with Wilks, the famous light comedian of that time, he found means through that gentleman's influence to get pieces on to the stage without much difficulty. Pope alludes to Johnson in "The Dunciad" as famous for writing a play every year and for being at Button's coffee-house every day. The truth is, however, that he occupied thirty-one years in writing nineteen plays, and some of these met with considerable success. At length he married a young widow with a tolerable fortune, on acquiring which he set up a theatrical tavern in Bow-street, Covent Garden, but quitted the business at his wife's death, and lived privately on the money he had saved. It is from Johnson's Country Lasses that Dorothy has been adapted. In the original cast of the former piece Wilks played the part of Madely, Johnson that of Sir John English, and Bickerstaff, his nephew, that of Lurcher, a character curiously enough retaining the same name in the play of Dorothy. Two separate plots were worked up in this bustling comedy. One was suggested by Fletcher's Custom of the Country, and the other by Mrs. Behn's City Heiress, this authoress having been indebted for her plot to a play by Middleton, entitled A Mad World, My Masters. Dr. Kenrick turned Johnson's comedy into a comic opera called The Lady at the Manor, which was acted at Covent Garden in 1778, and John Philip Kemble re-wrote some portion of The Country Lasses, and reproduced it as a three-act play in 1789 at Drury-lane, changing the title to The Farm Houses. And so, after many years and many modifications, Country Lasses re-appeared at the Gaiety under the name of Dorothy. Both the composer and librettist of the opera are dead.

Messrs. E. D. and J. Maundy-Gregory, under whose management Dorothy is being presented at the New Theatre, could scarcely have desired a heartier welcome than that accorded the play on Monday evening. It may be at once said that the piece was beautifully staged, the scene of the hop gardens (Act I.) and the round coppice (Act III.) being exceedingly pretty and picturesque, while the ancient hall of Act II. was admirably conceived. So far as the individual vocal efforts were concerned, the chief honours, of course, fell to Mr. Hayden Coffin, who cut a gallant figure as Harry Sherwood, and gave a fine rendering of "Queen of my heart." Perhaps a recollection of twenty-two years ago was borne to Mr. Coffin's mind, for he rose to the occasion on Monday night as much as he rose to that other occasion, when, a few days after Dorothy's first night, this song was introduced, and its inclusion determined the success of the play. The audience were not to be satisfied with merely one or two renderings—they encored again and again—there was only one thing to do, and that was to carry out their wishes. As to Mr. Arthur Williams' Lurcher, what can be said more than has been already said? An impersonation more quaintly humorous can scarcely be imagined. Mr. Williams acted once more with a fine sense of the farcical possibilities of the rôle, and the house shrieked with laughter at the comical attitudes, expressions, and sayings of the sheriff's officer. Indeed, the success of this revival was in part the success of Mr. Williams as Lurcher. A charming and springhtly Dorothy—the part originally played by Miss Marion Hood—was found in Miss Constance Drever, who sang most effectively, her number, "Be wise in time," being particularly well delivered. Mr. John Bardsley furnished a pleasing portraiture of the spirited Geoffrey Wilder, and his capital tenor voice was heard to great advantage in "I bend my back and bow my head," which he sang three times. Mr. Lemprière Pringle acted with the appropriate semblance, dignity, and authority as old Squire Bantam, and his interpretation of "Welcome to Chanticleer Hall" proved vastly to the enjoyment of his hearers. Miss Louie Pounds as Lydia Hawthorn and Miss Coralie Blythe as Phyllis Tuppitt were altogether engaging young ladies, and sang nicely, particularly in the song, "Have a care." Miss Emily Spiller as Mrs. Privett was an extremely amusing old lady, and the Lady Betty of Miss Betty Hardress, the Tom Strutt of Mr. Herbert Strathmore, and the John Tuppitt of Mr. F. J. Vigay were able characterisations. The chorus executed some commendable work in the direction of both dancing and singing, and the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Frederich Rosse, gave enchanting renderings of Cellier's delightful music.

THE Prince of Wales and Prince Edward of Wales attended the Lyric Theatre on Monday for the performance of King Henry V., and on the same evening the Princess of Wales, Princess Henry of Battenberg, and Princess Patricia of Connaught visited Terry's Theatre to see The Passing of the Third Floor Back.

MR. EDITOR,—SIR,—In your issue of the 7th inst. you state that Miss Hanid Alexander will play second girl in the forthcoming pantomime at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross. It should have been principal girl.—Yours faithfully, L. ALEXANDER, 168, Kennington Park-road, Kennington.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince Edward witnessed the performance of The Merry Widow at Daly's Theatre on Saturday evening.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The chief musical event of this winter will, of course, be the season of opera in English to be given at Covent Garden on Saturday, Jan. 16, under the management of Mr. Neil Forsyth, with Dr. Hans Richter, Mr. Percy Pitt, and Mr. Emil Kreuz as conductors. Practically all the boxes and stalls have been sold out, while the King and Queen have graciously given their patronage. In the Ring performances some changes have been made in the cast. Mme. Gleeson-White will impersonate Fricka in The Valkyrie and The Rhinegold, and Miss Alice Prowse will sing the part of Weglinde in The Twilight of the Gods, with Miss Edith Evans as Gutonne. Mr. Walter Hyde, who has so rapidly come to the front, will be one of the chief tenors; while the cast embraces a very large number of English vocalists, including Mr. Frederic Austin and Miss Caroline Hatchard, trained at the Royal Academy of Music, who has already been successful in former seasons. A newcomer, Miss Dilys Jones, from the Royal College, will also appear, as well as Mr. Bryndon Ayres, of the Guildhall School. Also among the cast are Mme. Donalda, Mme. Edna Thornton, Mr. Thomas Meux, Miss Florence Gaston, Mr. Robert Radford, Mr. Clarence Whitehill, Miss Edith Clegg, Mr. Albert Garcia, and Mr. Helge Nissen from the Copenhagen Opera; while a new Brünnhilde will appear in the person of Mrs. Sattzmann-Stevens, an excellent vocalist, from the United States, as also is Mrs. Rachel Frease-Green, both pupils of M. Jean de Reszke. Besides the names already given, a number of other English singers will be in the cast and the chorus of ninety members. Some of the vocalists have much operatic experience, others practically none; but good progress is being made at Covent Garden in all departments. Besides the Ring the list of operas will include The Mastersingers, Faust, Madame Butterfly, &c., and Dr. E. Woodall Naylor's new opera The Angelus, which gained the £500 prize offered by Messrs. Ricordi for the best opera by a British composer. Dr. Woodall Naylor is organist at Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

On Monday, Dec. 7, an event of great musical importance was the production of Sir Edward Elgar's new symphony at Queen's Hall by the London Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Dr. Richter. Large as Queen's Hall is, it could not contain all who wanted to hear the new work, originally produced at Manchester in the previous week. Superbly played by the London Symphony Orchestra, the beauty of Sir Edward Elgar's latest composition was brought out to the fullest extent, and the eminent conductor had frequently to bow his acknowledgments to the enthusiastic applause. The symphony is most impressive, and a great triumph for the talented English composer.

An interesting performance was given on Dec. 7 by the students of the Royal College of Music, at His Majesty's Theatre, of Hermann Goetz's last opera, Francesca, heard on this occasion for the first time in England. A very large audience assembled at His Majesty's Theatre eager to hear the new opera. The composer, known to fame by his opera The Taming of the Shrew, has in "Paolo and Francesca" a somewhat gloomy subject, and the new opera was in many respects disappointing.

The Patrons' Fund concert at Bechstein Hall on Monday, Dec. 7, with the exception of Mr. Edward Isaacs' clever Trio in E flat for pianoforte, violin, and 'cello, was tame and uninspiring, fully justifying Mr. Joseph Bennett's critical article in the Daily Telegraph on these concerts and modern young composers, who take their themes from such sombre and morbid subjects. "Orpheus with his Lute" would not have exercised so potent a charm with the modern music of our younger composers. German's pretty song has it that "Love is meant to make us glad," and why not music? At a recent concert at the Royal College of Music a new composition by Mr. Ahn von Carse proved so excellent, and was so favourably mentioned by the London musical critics, that some surprise was shown that the clever work was not produced at a concert of the Patrons' Fund.

Mr. Isidore de Lara's new opera Sanga will be produced at the Opéra Comique, Paris, and it is stated to be the first time an opera by an English composer has been mounted at this famous theatre. Mr. de Lara's opera was given for the first time two years ago at Nice, where it attracted much attention. The chief characters in Sanga will be sustained by Mlle. Chenal and Mlle. Nellie Marty and Messrs. Fugère and Bayle, and particular attention to the scenic effects is being given by Mr. Albert Carré, the manager of the Opéra Comique. Mr. de Lara, who was born in London, and acted as professor at the Guildhall School of Music, has composed six operas, and at Covent Garden three of these, The Light of the World, Amy Robsart, and Messaline, have been produced.

At the Philharmonic Society's Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall on Friday, Dec. 11, Mr. Landon Ronald made his second appearance as conductor. Brahms's Symphony, No. 2, in D major, and Dvorák's "Carneval Overture," were successfully performed under his guidance. In this concert Mr. Frederick Delius directed his new orchestral work, "In a Summer Garden," which was most favourably received; and Mr. Busoni gave an interesting performance of César Franck's Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue, and the solo part in Liszt's intricate Pianoforte Concerto, No. 2, in A major. After the performance of the latter work Mr. Busoni was recalled no fewer than five times to the platform.

The distinguished French pianist Mr. Raoul Pugno made his appearance at Queen's Hall Symphony concert on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 12, and introduced a clever Concertstück in three movements, of his own composition, which was well received; the fine pianist also played the solo part in Saint-Saëns' Concerto No. 4 in C minor. The orchestra gave performances of Dvorák's symphony "From the New World" and the Introduction and Polonaise from Moussorgsky's music-drama Boris Godounov, performed at the Paris Opéra last May, and heard on Saturday for the first time in England.

The pupils of Mme. Eugénie Joachim gave at St. James's Theatre on Tuesday, Dec. 8, a first public performance in England of Mascagni's operetta Zanetto, originally produced at Pesaro in 1896. The libretto is founded on François Coppée's one-act play Le Passant, and the music is scored for harp and strings.

The Audrey Chapman Orchestra, which was founded in 1898 to give free concerts in poor neighbourhoods, gave a successful concert at Queen's Hall on Tuesday evening, Dec. 15. Ninety players, chiefly ladies, compose the orchestra, and the conductor, M. René Ortmans, secured an excellent performance of Schumann's Symphony in C. The pianist on Tuesday evening was Mme. Leschetizky, heard in a brilliant rendering of Saint-Saëns's Concerto in G minor. Mr. Heinz, the vocalist, was well received by the large audience.

Mr. Wilhelm Kuhe, who celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday on Thursday, Dec. 10, received hearty congratulations from his numerous friends and admirers. Affected as his sight is, the veteran musician spends much time at the piano, where, in spite of his eighty-five years, he is still an excellent executant. Mr. Kuhe in 1845 began his career in London, and did not resign his professorship at the Royal Academy of Music until he was eighty-one years old.

At St. James's Hall on Saturday this week, and also on next Monday and Tuesday, under the direction of Mr. Westlake-Morgan, organist of St. Bride's, Fleet-street, carol concerts in costume will be given in the afternoon and evening each day, with different programmes. A special feature will be Christmas carols of all times and nationalities. Old and modern Christmas music will also be heard, and performances of the Toy Symphonies of Haydn, Romberg, and Mr. H. M. Higgs given. "A Christmas Greeting," by Sir Edward Elgar, is also to be included in the programme. The vocalists will be Miss Ada Forrest, Mme. Gleeson-White, and Miss Perceval Allen.

On Dec. 16 a testimonial concert was given in Brixton Hall in honour of Dr. A. Madeley Richardson, the organist of Southwark Cathedral, on his retirement from that post. The programme commenced with Sir Charles Villiers Stanford's musical setting of Lord Tennyson's verse "The Revenge: A Ballad of the Fleet," which was heard at the Leeds Festival in 1886, when it made a marked impression. The Southwark Choral Society, under Dr. Richardson, gave an excellent performance of Sir Charles V. Stanford's artistic work. The leader of the orchestra was Mr. W. Frye Parker, while the organ was presided over by Dr. G. F. Huntley, of St. Peter's, Eaton-square.

THE NEW CENSORSHIP BILL.

The following is the text of the Bill which has been presented to Parliament by Mr. Robert Harcourt, supported by Mr. Alfred Mason, Mr. Ponsonby, Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, with the object of abolishing the censorship of plays exercised in Great Britain under the authority of the Lord Chamberlain and transferring to the London County Council, as the local authority, the power of licensing and controlling theatres exercised by the Lord Chamberlain in the central parts of the metropolis:—

A Bill to abolish the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect to stage plays, and to transfer to the local authority the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect of the licensing of theatres in London.

Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

1. It shall not be necessary to submit any stage play to the Lord Chamberlain before the first acting or presenting thereof, whether for hire or otherwise, and it shall not be lawful for the Lord Chamberlain to forbid the acting or presenting in Great Britain of any stage play.

2.—(1) The powers of the Lord Chamberlain under the Theatres Act, 1843, in respect of the licensing and closing of theatres within the ancient Parliamentary boundaries of the cities of London and Westminster, and of the boroughs of Finsbury and Marylebone, the Tower Hamlets, Lambeth, and Southwark, shall be transferred to the London County Council.

(2) The licence of the London County Council shall be required in respect of a theatre within the said ancient Parliamentary boundaries authorised by virtue of letters patent from His Majesty or his predecessors (in this Act called a patent theatre) in the same manner as if no letters patent had been granted in respect thereof.

(3) The licence of the London County Council shall be for such period not exceeding one year as the council may think proper.

(4) The London County Council may delegate its powers under this Act with or without any restrictions or conditions as may be thought fit to a committee (or to the justices of the County of London in the same manner as if these powers had been transferred to the council by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1888).

(5) The fees payable to the Lord Chamberlain under section 4 of the Theatres Act, 1843, shall be payable to the London County Council, and shall apply to patent theatres.

3. Nothing in this Act shall affect the powers of the Lord Chamberlain under the Theatres Act, 1843, in respect of the licensing and closing of theatres in those places outside the Administrative County of London in which His Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall in their Royal persons occasionally reside.

4. The enactment mentioned in the schedule to this Act is hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that schedule.

5. In this Act the expression "theatre" means any house or other place of public resort for the public performance of stage plays.

The expression "stage-play" has the same meaning as in the Theatres Act, 1843.

6. This Act may be cited as the Theatres Act, 1908.

THE Morning Leader has elicited the following opinions on the Bill:—Mr. Forbes Robertson: "Am not in favour of Bill." Mr. Arthur Pinero: "Have not read Mr. Harcourt's Bill, and am therefore unable to express opinion upon it." Miss Lena Ashwell: "Judging from conditions in countries without censors, I consider our present conditions preferable." Mr. Sydney Grundy: "Out of the frying-pan into a fiery furnace. I can imagine no greater disaster." Mr. George Alexander: "I hope the Central London theatres will always be under the Lord Chamberlain's jurisdiction and the censorship retained; but I am in favour of free trade in amusements." And Mr. Lewis Waller can "see no reason for changing the existing order."

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

At the St. James's Hall on Thursday evening, Dec. 17, the orchestral concert of the Trinity College attracted a large audience. The orchestra, which consisted of many well-known professors, assisted by the students, gave performances of Beethoven's "Prometheus Overture" and the Adagio motto and Allegro con brio from Symphony in D, No. 2. Also excellent were their accompaniments to the vocal and instrumental items in a somewhat full programme. The lively Gigue from Sir Hubert Parry's Suite for Strings was given with great spirit, and in vocal music the orchestra never overpowered the singers. Miss Margaret Richardson in her pianoforte solo, Allegro from Concerto in A minor (Schumann), proved herself a careful and intelligent performer; while Mr. James Carroll gave a neatly-executed rendering of Mendelssohn's popular Allegro from Violin Concerto in E minor. Master Richard Johnson, who played in place of Miss Tomlin, unable through illness to appear, is a clever little boy, who looks under eight years old. The youngster played the Allegro from Mozart's pianoforte Concerto in D minor remarkably well, and took the ovation with which he was greeted quite calmly. The choice of the composer also was singularly appropriate, for was not Mozart himself a wonderful child performer? The other instrumentalist in the concert on Thursday was Mr. Walter Britton, an able 'cellist, heard in Boellmann's fine "Variations Symphoniques." Miss Florence Griffiths sang "Softly Sighs," from Der Freischutz, and may be commended for her clear enunciation; but Weber's famous scena requires operatic singing and experience. Miss Hilda Felstead, who was heard in "O Love! from thy power," from Saint-Saëns' Samson and Delilah, sang intelligently, but the fire and passion such music demands are not at present at her command. Both ladies had excellent voices that will amply repay further cultivation. Another ambitious song was "Gazing around upon this fair assembly," from Tannhäuser, sung by Mr. Horace Witty with a fair amount of success.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

By the time these lines are in print our readers will be enjoying with their families the Christmas season that brings in its train peace and goodwill; and the best friends of the profession, therefore, must feel keen regret that the cloud between artists and agents has not lifted.

We have an inkling, however, that the light of a better understanding between the disputants is brightening the horizon of the music hall world, and we hope that the new year will not be far advanced before the sins of "omission" and "commission" will be entirely forgotten, and that all concerned will enjoy the fruits of the prosperity of the halls, ever growing in their number and ever widening in their influence.

Hengler's Circus is to be reopened to-day by the London Theatre of Varieties with a "ring" version of Cinderella, and many acrobatic novelties, equestrian attractions, and Continental combinations. When the run of the Yuletide spectacle comes to an end the work of reconstructing the house, and making it the London Palladium of Pleasure will be commenced.

Mr. Fred Ginnett, of Dick Turpin fame, has been elected King Rat of the grand order for the year 1909, and succeeds in that office Mr. W. H. Clemart, now secretary of the V.A.F. Mr. Ginnett bears a name celebrated in circus and variety annals, and Mrs. Ginnett takes a prominent part in the benevolent work of the Music-hall Ladies' Guild, of which she is president.

Mr. Alfred Moul has much pleasure in announcing that he has engaged for a term of years the clever and accomplished dancer and teacher Miss Elise Clerc, not only to perform at the Alhambra in the various ballets, but to give him her valuable assistance in their production. Miss Clerc will be best remembered as a versatile comedienne and understudy to Mlle. Genée, while at the moment the success of her little pupil, Elsie Craven, at His Majesty's Theatre, is the talk of the town.

Theatres do not now favour the one-act play as much as formerly, but it is nursed more tenderly at the variety houses, where the higher development of such works has been taken in hand by legitimate stage favourites. It was only the other day that we saw Miss Fanny Brough and Mr. Stanley Cooke in a play specially written for that clever actress, and now Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks are delighting Mr. Alfred Butt's patrons in The Fly-by-Night, by Mr. Paul Rubens, who created Mr. Popple of Ippleton.

Later in the year we hope to see Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bourchier at the same house, and here we may reveal the fact that Mr. Butt—a great lover of the one-act play—will produce through the medium of the clever pair a number of pieces light in texture and comic in dialogue. These are now being written by well-known authors specially for variety stage representation; and Mr. Butt's idea is to present a new play each week until the whole series is exhausted.

Mr. C. Blyth-Pratt's humorous leanings have prompted him to issue a comic prospectus of the Gold Mine of Mirth (Unlimited), the capital being one million roars. The brokers are said to be Catch and Catchcan, 267, Throgneedle-street, N.S., and the solicitors Grin and Bearit, of 41, Bunionhill, London. The company has been formed to carry on the colossal Christmas company at that famous house, the Oxford, where a matinée will be given on Boxing Day.

All nominations of candidates for the Executive Committee election of the Variety Artists' Federation must be received at the head office by 12 noon on Jan. 9, 1909. All male members over twenty-one years of age are eligible for office, providing they have been members for the preceding six months, and are not in arrears, as per the rules. The nominee must signify in writing his willingness to serve, if elected, and must be proposed and seconded by two members in full benefit.

Mr. Robert Harcourt has introduced a Bill to abolish the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect of stage plays, and to transfer to the local authority the powers of the Lord Chamberlain in respect of the licensing of theatres in London. The Bill is backed by Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. A. E. W. Mason, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. Ramsay Macdonald. The principle is, therefore, approved by members of all parties, while, with regard to other members whose names do not appear on the Bill, it may be mentioned that Mr. Russell Rea, Mr. G. Faber, and others attended informal committee meetings previous to the introduction of the Bill, and approved its terms.

The local authority exercises power in London's environs such as Richmond, Walthamstow, East Ham, and other districts, and audiences at the halls in these outer metropolitan areas are favoured both with stage plays and variety fare. In fact, free trade in amusements has been established in spite of the Moll Flanders Act passed in the reign of Good Queen Anne, of imperishable memory—in defiance, too, of the Theatres Act of the early forties, which recked not of the establishment of variety palaces in all parts of an ever-increasing London.

Three sponsors of the Bill are dramatic authors, and an endeavour is made to give effect to the desire expressed by a large number of their colleagues in a letter to the Press on Oct. 29, 1907, and in their subsequent deputation to the Government. The Bill, of course, was only introduced at a late period of the session with a view to its terms being made public. The double licence, we think, is a very simple way out of the licensing difficulty, the smoking restrictions to be at the option of the management.

The late Mr. Frank Heath, an account of whose funeral will be found in another column, was a man of fine physique, and had in his prime distinguished himself as an athlete. On one occasion, when an attempt was made by some roughs to obtain possession of over £200, the proceeds of sports held on behalf of the Sick Fund, Mr. Heath, assisted by another member of the committee, Mr. Pat Carey, the present hon. treasurer, "went for" the would-be thieves in such vigorous and determined style that they were glad to beat a hasty retreat. Mr. Heath's death is a severe loss to the society, with which he had been connected so many years.

Mr. Wilkie Bard makes his first appearance to-night in a London pantomime, and we may be sure his ingenuity, resourcefulness, comicality, and admirable elocution will be of immense value in Mr. Arthur Collins's gorgeous production. Mr. Bard has a lively sense of the value of humorous invention, and his freshness is undeniable.

Mabel Edith Countess Russell, of Bray Lawn, Bray, who died on Sept. 22 last, aged thirty-six years, daughter of the late Sir Claud Scott, and who was married to Earl Russell in 1890, left by her will, which bears date Sept. 21, 1908, the whole of her estate to her sister, Lina Mary Russell, of Gledstanes-road, Barons-court, Kensington, wife of Mr. Richard Russell, and appointed her as sole executrix thereof. Her estate is of the gross value of £122.

More about the abandoned Brighton summer and winter palace scheme was heard at the meeting on Saturday at the Royal Pavilion of those who had opposed it. Sir Henry Kimber, M.P., presided, and a report from the executive committee was adopted. This explained the steps taken in opposition, and showed that the expense was only about £50.

A suggestion was made by the Chairman that, although this scheme had been disposed of, the opponents' organisation should be preserved in order to meet the casino project recently launched. Lord Rendel urged the formation of a general committee, whose object should be to preserve the Brighton foreshore from exploitation in private interests, but who should also have power to appoint committees to oppose particular schemes.

On the motion of Lord Rendel, the general and executive committee were thanked for their successful opposition to Messrs. Lyons and Forbes's scheme, and requested to oppose the new project. They were also instructed to consider the propriety of forming a permanent association, prepared to take the initiative in opposing any "attempts to interfere with the rights of the public" in the foreshore.

Councillor Yates said he did not believe the Board of Trade would allow the pier which formed part of the new scheme to be built. He understood there would be considerable opposition on the part of members of the corporation.

The Oldham Watch Committee on the 16th inst. had before them an application for a dramatic licence for the new Grand Theatre and Opera House in King-street, which was applied for by Mr. Joseph Platt on behalf of the Oldham Empire Theatre of Varieties Co. Mr. Platt stated that the shareholders of the company were all local men. They already held three licences, and they had been complimented on the excellent manner in which the theatres were conducted.

Referring to the objection that had been raised to the licence, Mr. Platt said it was a remarkable thing that no objection was taken to the granting of the licence a few weeks ago to the Palace Theatre. The privilege was required for those patrons who required reasonable refreshments. If this was not provided inside the theatre, people would go outside.

The committee afterwards inspected the theatre, and subsequently the Chief Constable, in answer to Councillor Schofield, said no one had ever been convicted for drunkenness in the theatres. They were conducted in an excellent manner. It was unanimously decided to grant the full licence until the annual licensing day in June.

Visitors to the Alhambra throughout the week have had an opportunity of witnessing the sensational Apache Dance as performed by its original exponents, M. Max Dearly and Mlle. Mistinguette, in Paris. This weird evolution of the Terpsichorean art is a prominent feature of The Red Hand, the third of the series of art films which Mr. Alfred Moul has presented.

Mr. Thomas Barrasford allowed a special matinée to be held at the Liverpool Hippodrome on Saturday in aid of the Christmas Hot-pot Fund, which annually provides food for 100,000 poor people of the city. Among the packed audience were the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress. Hundreds of children from charitable institutions and nurses engaged at the hospitals were also present, their admission being paid for by several citizens. The affair was a big success, thanks to the valuable efforts of the hosts of artists who attended through the kindness of local theatre proprietors.

The popular resident-manager of the Cambridge Theatre, Spennymoor, Mr. David Collins, took his second annual benefit on Wednesday, 16th inst. A crowded house witnessed a capital performance of A Christmas Story by the members of the Spennymoor Dramatic Society, which was greatly appreciated. A miscellaneous programme was contributed to by the following:—Miss Dolly Harper, Miss Nance Green, Miss Ruby Machin, Mr. Tom E. Lowe, Mr. G. H. Barrett, Mr. Bob Cooper, Mr. Will Redshaw, Mr. Bert Clarance, Mr. Jack Harrell, and the famous Musical Six.

Mr. Alexander, the manager of the variety company performing last week at the York Theatre Royal, proved himself a true friend of the poor little children. In every town which he visits with his company he gives, on the Saturday morning, free breakfasts to several hundred of the poor little ones, and in accordance with his custom, Mr. Alexander on Saturday morning provided a good meal for about 700 of the children of York.

Using the police as the main channel for distributing his invitations, he sent out 600 tickets, the holders of which were told to be at the Theatre Royal to receive a good meal. The invitations were readily responded to, not only by the fortunately invited guests, but also by some hundred others who had not been so fortunate, but went on the off-chance that something might be left for them. Not a single child was sent empty away.

The invited guests were admitted by the exit door of the pit, and passed out by way of the entrance door. As they entered each child was given a bag containing a meat pie, a bun, a packet of sweets, and an orange, and as they passed out they were supplied with a cup of hot tea, having brought their own cups. The packets of food were distributed by Mr. and Mrs. Rainer, and the tea was dispensed by Miss Kitty, the daughter of the donor of the feast. Mr. Alexander, Mr. H. J. Dacre (general-manager of the theatre), and members of the staff acted as marshals. Mr. Alexander must feel proud of having cheered the hearts of 600 or 700 little ones.

Mr. Gilbert's generous effort on behalf of the widowed mother of John Jackman, one of the victims of the "Boy's Own" disaster in the North Sea, resulted in the Hippodrome, Great Yarmouth, on Thursday night (16th), being crowded in every part. An excellent programme was presented, and in replying to a vote of thanks Mr. Gilbert, who had a great reception, stated that as a result of the effort at least £100 would be available for the benefit of Mrs. Jackman, whose son was her sole support.

An interesting wrestling match for £100 a side has been arranged between John Lemm and O'Kelly. The latter recently distinguished himself by winning the Olympic Championship at the Stadium. John Lemm, winner of the great tournament held in London last April, has won the applause of the public by his sportsmanlike behaviour and straightforward challenges to his opponents, and might be justly styled the legitimate champion of the world.

The match has been arranged for Thursday, Jan. 14, to take place at the Oxford, at three o'clock, the men to wrestle the best two out of three falls, catch-as-catch-can style, to a finish. Should no decision be arrived at, the match to be continued the following day, all the door receipts the second day to be devoted to charitable purposes.

To encourage the gathering in of the "siller" for the Music Hall Home, The Era has decided to give a gold medal to the collector who gets most money for that deserving charity.

The collection for the New Year Shilling Fund has now commenced in earnest. As soon as collecting cards are full please forward them to the hon. treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, and get another card.

At the moment of going to press we hear of the sad death of Mrs. Jack de Frece, who leaves a baby boy of fifteen days old and a little laddie of five. The interment was to take place on Christmas Day, the cortège leaving 245, Brixton-road, at 11 a.m. The bereaved husband will be the recipient of much sympathy in his sorrow.

Mr. Alfred Lester, who since the last night of Havana at the Gaiety has been taking a well-earned rest and change of air in Cornwall, returns to vaudeville to fulfil outstanding contracts. He opens on Monday at the Tivoli, where he will present selections from his monologues and duologues.

Mr. John E. Coyle's friends will be pleased to hear that he is now recovering from his recent attack of double pneumonia and pleurisy, though it is not likely he will be able to resume his work for some considerable time.

Mr. Herbert Shelley, who returned to London on Monday, has been presenting his successful protean Irish play, Dan the Outlaw, four times nightly at Camberwell and Walham Green. He has just completed a successful twenty-three weeks with Mr. Stoll.

George Fuller was not forgotten on his birthday last Tuesday, when he completed his forty-ninth year. One of his most cherished friends is Pony Moore, who, though he is nearing his ninetieth year, made a point of visiting and cheering the sufferer. Mr. Moore brought his stepson with him, and other welcome visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stratton, Mrs. C. Mitchell and Mr. C. Mitchell, jun., Mr. Wilson, Miss M. Jefferys, and Mr. and Mrs. George Marriott.

The new musical sketch to be presented by Mr. Alfred Moul at the Alhambra on Jan. 4 is La Petite Bohémienne. There are but four characters in the piece—Mlle. Leonora and Miss Julia Seale, who appear respectively as boy and girl; M. Volbert, who represents an artist; and Mlle. Blaney, who is cast as the artist's wife. It will be a sort of play without words, bearing some resemblance to La Cigale in its story. The two scenes, an exterior and an interior, are laid in present-day Italy. The new Alhambra ballet is due in March.

Miss Mary Law, a clever young violinist, who has been appearing at the Tivoli, took to the violin when only seven years old. She appeared at the Queen's Hall at the tender age of eleven. In 1902 she won the Carwardine Prize at the Guildhall School of Music, and proceeded to America, where, at the Chicago Musical College, she was one of the three selected to compete for the diamond medal, and was awarded that prize both in 1904 and 1905.

The American Music-Hall is the new name given to the theatre at the corner of Forty-second-street and Eighth-avenue, New York, which recently passed under the management of Mr. William Morris. With the new name was inaugurated a new policy, which aims to give the New Yorkers a music-hall on the London plan. Smoking is now permitted in all parts of the house, and the programme is made up of what is known as "straight" vaudeville. There are more acts than usual in the bill, but no sketches.

By and by, perhaps, we may expect to have a "lightning programme" à la Graydon. That would indeed be a novelty. How many managers during the last ten years have undertaken to give us a music-hall on the London plan! Perhaps Mr. Morris will succeed where others have failed. He has certainly started well, and provided his patrons with a remarkably fine "array of talent." Ray Beveridge, Grace Hazzard, Emma Carus, Willie Hoppe, Manuel Romaine, and quite a number of clever people are in the bill.

Miss Jessie Preston received a splendid welcome at the Colonial Theatre last week, when she made her first appearance before an American audience, and everything points to her being as big a favourite on this side of the water as she is on the other. Miss Preston sang "Dear Loch Lomond," "Hae ye seen Jock MacPherson?" "A reply to 'I love a lassie,'" "A Scotch skit on Salome," and "Maggie Snyder." Her songs moved the audience to frequent laughter, and called forth expressions of approval from all parts of the house. The "Glasgow lassie" remains at the Colonial for a fortnight. Miss Ruth Allen and her London Johnnies have made a hit at the same theatre, and Jean Marcel's living statuary are another attractive feature of the programme.

An exceptionally strong and varied programme will be given at the London Coliseum next week. In addition to Miss Cecilia Loftus, Miss Carrie de Mar, and Joseph Hart's "Polly Pickle's Pets," there is a notable newcomer, Mlle. Saharet, who has earned the title of Australia's greatest dancer. Mlle. Saharet arrives in London with a great reputation, and Continental critics have been profuse in their praise. Last week in Berlin she created a furore, particularly with reference to her Spanish and acrobatic dances. She has cut out a distinct line for herself, and holds equal honours with all the great dancers who recently have appeared in London.

It seems the fashion for the leading pugilists and wrestlers to become music hall entertainers. One remembers in the old days that such champions of the prize-ring as Jem Mace, Tom King, and Tom Sayers occasionally appeared on benefit nights at the old Surrey in the famous Tom Cribb's parlour scene of the drama Tom and Jerry; and in later days—to be exact, in 1894—Gentleman Jack was written round James Corbett, who was then the fistic hero of the States, and in it he appeared in our own Drury Lane Theatre without any great success.

Such dramas are generally feeble stuff, and this criticism applies to the sketch A Man's a Man for a' that, which was put on at the Oxford on Monday evening for the purpose of introducing the renowned fighting man Bob Fitzsimmons to the London public. Action or plot is not necessary in such a mere pièce d'occasion, and much may be forgiven the hero for his introduction to English variety of Miss Julia Gifford (Mrs. Fitzsimmons), who on Monday night sang so very charmingly and with such sweetness that she was enthusiastically encored. Her second essay was "Comin' thro' the rye," given without accompaniment.

Mr. Fitzsimmons himself gave a slight outline of his career. To smooth the wrinkles in his fond mother's brow, he bethought himself of fighting to gain a purse of 500 dollars, and, leaving his smithy and his "heavy sledge," he fought and won. He at one time claimed three championships, and pronounced from the footlights his readiness to defend one and all of them against any man, black or white. He punched the ball with such terrific force as to break the strong cord fastening it to a wooden roof. Mrs. Fitzsimmons was presented with a lovely horseshoe of flowers tied with the American national colours.

The ladies' concert of the Terriers' Association will be held at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington, on Jan. 3, 1909; and on the 10th of that month will be held the annual dinner of the fraternity at the Hotel Boulogne, Gerrard-street, W.

Mr. George Leyton, who is now on the Stoll tour, is playing his military sketch, The Last Muster, which is a most effective picture of the Army veterans in their last phase, and realises quite artistically the great picture by Sir Hubert Herkomer. As everybody knows, this artist is a true friend of the Crimean and Mutiny veterans, having up to date collected for them over £3,000.

Mr. Leyton was once in an artillery regiment, and is a descendant of an old fighting family. Though born in New Orleans, he has spent most of his life in London. Originally intended for a commercial career, it was quite by accident that Mr. Leyton came before the footlights. He was singing in London in an amateur capacity, and a gentleman who had considerable influence in the theatrical profession was so interested with his talent that he invited the young vocalist to sing at the Grand Theatre, Islington, with Mr. Yorke Stephens, in a military sketch entitled The True Heart.

Mr. Leyton has chiefly devoted his attention to military sketches, and he tells an amusing story of an experience in which two Zulus were concerned. He was producing a piece entitled The Last Grip, which was the realisation of a famous picture. In this tableau Mr. Leyton appeared as a trooper whose dead horse lay beside him, and he was supposed to shoot a couple of savage Zulus who circled round him brandishing their assegais.

The men were given minute instructions how to act, and when the curtain went up and the Zulus came on the scene, Mr. Leyton fired his revolver, and one man dropped and pretended to be dead. After a good deal of dodging about, amidst breathless excitement, Mr. Leyton fired at the second man, but the savage merely shook himself and remained erect. One after the other he fired the remaining barrels, and still the warrior refused to die.

Mr. Leyton began to grow anxious. It was Monday night, and if anything went wrong with the performance it would ruin the show for the week. He suddenly recollected the sword that hung at his belt. Drawing this he gave his adversary a savage thrust under the arm, at the same time muttering in an undertone, "Die, you silly beggar, die!" This appeared to bring the Zulu to his senses. "Oh, hang it," shouted the obstinate warrior, and without further ado he walked off the stage. Mr. Leyton afterwards administered a stern rebuke to his assistant, but the only satisfaction he received was, "Do you think I am going to stand being knocked over for eighteen-pence a night?"

Mrs. John Lawson will produce her travesty, Why Did Third Floor Pass? at the Metropolitan on Monday. It is in two scenes—No. 1, Outside Terry's Theatre; No. 2, A Lodging House at Camberwell. The cast engaged includes Edward Thane, Dan Curzon, Albert Mason, Selina Seaforth, Daphne Williams, and Cissie Lawson.

During the week at the London Hippodrome Mr. Joseph Hart, the New York producer, has presented the Rain-Dears, eight vivacious girls and a principal who dance and sing. The scenes represent Toyland, where the Dears cleverly execute a wooden shoe dance. The scene shifts afterwards to Dreamland, and then to Iceland, and "down yonder in the cornfield," where the girls appear in mackintoshes, and dance in a rain storm of real water, which comes down from the flies above the stage. The costumes and settings of the act are most pleasing. Caicedo, the wire king, in his remarkable act, has been renewing his Hippodrome triumphs after an absence in America.

Mr. Oswald Stoll presented the chief attraction of his Christmas feast of variety at the Coliseum on Monday. It is entitled Polly Pickles' Pets, and is known as an American vaudeville sketch, for which Mr. Joseph Hart, a well-known American producer, is responsible. Ostensibly intended as an attraction for children, it possesses amusing possibilities that will appeal also to the grown-ups of holiday audiences. It tells a story of adventurous children who make their way into fairyland in search of missing toys.

Petland is an Arcadian region where toys go when they are lost, and thither Polly Pickles comes on an elephant's back to look for them. She finds that her dog, her cat, her parrot, and her Teddy-bear have grown to abnormal proportions, and that they can sing and prattle and chatter in a way only to be imagined at the season of Yule, when such good genii as Mr. Oswald Stoll do their best to realise fairydom for the little ones. The elephant is not too tenderfooted to dance, and of course the parrot talks in a way that is quite customary. We hear, too, the Teddy-bear, and of course the cat unfolds a tale with a "purr-puss." The chief musical numbers are "Has anyone seen a kitty-cat?" "The Feline Flirt," and the "Jack-o'-Lantern Men," the final being sung in a pretty scene where "Jack-o'-Lantern Men" provide the chorus. The novelty is plotless, but the children can weave a story for themselves out of such an exhilarating spectacle of Toyland, in which there is plenty of fun.

On behalf of the committee of the Music-hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) wishes to thank the following, who have so readily responded to the appeal for the dear children's Christmas tree:—Miss Marie Lloyd, £1 1s.; Miss Alexandra Dagmar, £1 1s.; Mme. Haydee (collection), 9s.; Mr. Gus Elen, £2 2s.; Mr. Wal Pink, £1; Dr. Goldberg (Strand), £1 5s. and promise of ton of coals; Leoni Clark, £1 1s.; Mrs. Pettitt (collection), 8s. 9½d., gift of £1, and games for tree; Miss E. G. Clarke, A.C.N., 2s. and gift of new clothing for tree; Rev. Stephen Barrass's children, toys and games; Miss Lottie Albert, 5s.; Miss Ettie Albert, 1s.; Miss Kate Vulcana, 5s.; Mrs. James Horne, 2s. and parcel of new stockings for Christmas tree; Miss Maggie Bowman (collection), 2s. 6d.; Miss Bennet (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Mrs. W. Northern (collecting and giving), 5s.; Mrs. Northcott, 1s.; the Three Rubys (collecting), 2s. and a present of golliwogs and pincushions; Mrs. Vernon Cowper, 5s.; Mrs. Crowther, 2s.; Mrs. Edwards (Albion House), toys; Rev. Arthur Brinckman, confectionery; Huntley and Palmer (Reading), cakes, &c.; Mr. C. Thomas, sweets; Mrs. Fred Ginnett, boxes of children's boots and shoes; Miss Belle Elmore, children's clothing; Mrs. Eugene Stratton, games, fruit, toys, &c.; Miss Irene Rose, 100 bags of sweets; Miss Lil Hawthorne, presents for tree and cheque for £2 2s.; Miss Evelyn Mildred, two boxes of useful clothing; Sister Macarte, children's games, toys, and parcel clothing; Harry Blake, parcel clothing; Mrs. Rogers, sweets; Mr. Mash, florist, Brixton, for kindly lending Christmas tree; Miss Lillie Lucerne, parcel of pincushions; Mrs. Oswald Stoll, £2 2s.; and Mrs. Ernest Collins, parcel of clothing.

It is the intention of the committee to give the children dinner, tea, entertainment, many presents, and much comfort, so that they may have one bright day in their lives; also roast beef and Christmas pudding, as an extra, to many poor artists in the profession.

Mr. Herman Finck, the musical-director of the Palace Theatre, who has been responsible for musical ententes and other international harmonies at the Palace, is responsible for a seasonable array of popular tunes from all sources entitled "Now and Then."

Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Miss Lil Hawthorne, Mrs. Eugene Stratton, Miss Irene Rose, Miss Belle Elmore, and Miss Melinda May (secretary) did their best by selling programmes at the Coliseum to aid the Cripples Fund, which Sir William Treloar has so much at heart. Sir William, too, is a great friend of the music-hall profession, and is deeply sensible of its readiness to assist the noble charity for which the Water Rats specially appealed at the Coliseum on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. R. G. Knowles has first place in the bill at the Lincoln-square Theatre, at which the attractions are booked by Mr. William Morris. Mr. Knowles is telling the New Yorkers that modern London is the home of the Forty Thieves, thirty-nine of whom are in the hotel business, the other having succumbed during the Olympian games.

Miss Vesta Victoria, not in the least perturbed after being involved in the Sunday performance muddle, was the "head-liner" at the Lincoln-square Theatre last week, where her songs went as well as ever. "Sally, the pride of the ballet" is probably the best in her budget. It made the audience laugh consumedly. In the same bill was Miss Maude Odell, whose clever and interesting poses were well received, her performance being decidedly novel. Miss Francesca Redding and her company, including Mr. John V. Keates, who played for several years in London and the provinces, appear in a capital sketch called Honora, which has made a big hit wherever it has been presented. Miss Redding and her company are looking forward to a London engagement.

"To-morrow," the children's great spectacle, which is Mr. Oswald Stoll's chief Christmas attraction at the London Hippodrome, has taken shape. The chrysalis has become a caterpillar, and has developed into a butterfly more beautiful than ever seen in the metropolis of arenic spectacle. Mr. Bolossy Kiralfy has seen—who has not?—that of late years the pantomime was fast becoming an entertainment as much for grown-ups proper as for children, who are, however, its chief patrons. He thought—and rightly, too—"Why not combine what will appeal equally to children from the age of six to sixty?" With this thought in his mind, To-morrow was conceived. With its combination of beauty, simplicity, and continuity of plot, together with its fine music and operatic singing, To-morrow appeals to all, and causes the grown-ups to hark back to their happiest days when they also lived in the land of "make-believe."

Every child wants to know how Santa Claus appears only at Christmas, and why he distributes only at that time. Every child would like to see him on his annual round. And every child in London can do so this year, for he will be drawn in his sledge full of toys by two real reindeer (the only ones in Great Britain) twice daily at the Hippodrome.

"To-morrow" is a story that never can grow old, although it will achieve stage longevity. The plot is as simple as the story, but the lavishness of the management in the matter of the scenery, dresses, and the multitude of persons taking part may be taken as a sure indication that the ingenuity of its treatment and the vivid imagination of its producer are quite in consonance with the past traditions of Hippodramatic spectacle. The whole of the large Hippodrome arena and the entire stage will be monopolised for the production.

The story starts in a fine old English country house, where the love interest is foreshadowed by the introduction of a couple of lovers, Albert and Mildred. The real hero of the tale is, however, Willie, who, like so many boys, is never content with the delights of "to-day," but persistently looks forward to the joys of anticipation. Falling asleep, he sees in his dreams the arrival of Santa Claus, through his usual channel—the chimney—who, in his best Christmas mood, demands what he can do for the youthful hero. Willie fain would enjoy a glimpse of that marvellous region where all the toys distributed by the Yuletide saint are manufactured.

Willie's desire is gratified when are revealed to him the wonders of the Cave of Joy in a glowing stage spectacle. Down a crystal staircase the Fairy Queen and her entourage trip. Then comes a grand ballet of animated toys. The Hippodrome arena will be alive with all kinds of nursery favourites—Teddy-bears, rabbits, frogs, punchinellos, dolls, woolly lambs, golliwogs, and suchlike denizens of what was once known as Lowther Arcadia. A realistic snow scene succeeds, and here we see Willie conveyed back to his father's home in a sleigh drawn by real reindeer. Then there is a picture of a Christmas family gathering in a huge ancestral hall.

A great allegorical picture, illustrative of the opening of the New Year and the Triumph of Progress, concludes. In this no fewer than 220 people appear. Milk-white steeds gaily caparisoned with gold and silver trappings bear handsome trumpeters, who herald the approach of Britannia, in a gorgeous golden chariot, and other allegorical figures will typify Industry, Commerce, Science, Art, and Agriculture. For the ballet the services of 160 dancers have been enlisted; and butterflies, fairies, birds, and all sorts of winged creatures help to lend brilliancy and animation to the scene.

The figures ranged on each side form as it were, a living avenue, stretching from the furthest point of the arena up to the back of the stage, where, suddenly, is discerned an enormous Christmas-tree. From its branches hang life-size dolls and toys of every imaginable description. Garlands of mistletoe float down from above, banners are held on high, flags wave in the air, a flight of pigeons is let loose. To the blare of trumpets, the massive strains of the orchestra, and the combined voices of a full chorus, 15,000 electric globes burst into flame. And so in a blaze of light and colour the entertainment comes to an end.

Mr. Kiralfy himself has written the libretto, while the music, which has been composed by Signor Paula Giorza, is tuneful and catchy throughout. Mr. Stuart Alexander, Miss Grace Gray, Miss May Hollom, Mr. Octavius E. Lennon, and Miss Beatrice Willey are the principal vocalists, and Master James Hollom will represent Little Willie. The designs for the costumes are by Mr. Kiralfy, and their making has been entrusted to Hugo Baruch and Co., of Shaftesbury-avenue. Mr. S. E. Baumann, the sole agent for Mr. Kiralfy—who, by the way, has come from America on purpose to produce the spectacle—takes an active interest in the preparations. Mr. Oswald Stoll has left no stone unturned to make this Christmas annual a veritable tour de force.

Mr. David Devant, who has been out of his own bill for the past few weeks, returns to his post at St. George's Hall for the holidays. He has been devising new illusions for the bewilderment of the public, and perhaps the most puzzling of his novelties will be a trick with a young woman. Mr. Devant is going to carry her in his arms, and then the young woman is going into the Ewigkeit. Mr. Devant has a new trick which will appeal specially to children.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY have embodied their Christmas and New Year wishes to the profession, the trade, and song-lovers generally in a smart acrostic, constructed from the titles of several of their successful pantomime numbers, viz.:—"Come, be my Rainbow," "Oh! oh! Antonio," "Mandy Lane," "Parrot Duet," "L. S. D.," "I'm afraid to come home in the dark," "Mandy's wedding," "Every fellow's in love with a girl," "Naomi," "The Gay Gordons," "Sue, Sue, Sue," "Oh, the Daylight Bill," "Far away in Australia," "Take me on the Flip-Flap," "Hang out the front-door key," "Esau, take me on the see-saw," "Shadowland," "Exercise," "Are you the little girl I met the other evening?" "She sells sea-shells," "On the cliffs of Normandy," and "Never, Oh, never get married." The initials form the words "Compliments of the Season."

MISS MADOLINE REES is making a special feature of the National Music Publishing Co.'s song "When the leaves are tinged with gold" at the Marlborough Theatre pantomime. Having heard this song sung by Fred Elton, she immediately secured it for her principal number. This great number is also being sung in almost every pantomime in Great Britain.

"KATE, WON'T YOU ROLLER SKATE," another of the National Music Publishing Co.'s numbers, is rapidly coming to the front, and will unquestionably become a great chorus number. Frank H. Fox, who originally produced this song six weeks ago, gives an excellent account of it.

EVERY pantomime comedian should immediately secure the National Music Publishing Co.'s great comedy number, "Put me upon an island where the girls are few," which is being produced at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, by Wilkie Bard. Another of their comedy numbers, "You all want something to cuddle," will be sung by Neil Kenyon at Drury Lane, in which he will introduce some very novel effects, being assisted by from forty to fifty girls.

AMONG other numbers being made free for pantomime by the National Music Co. are George Lashwood's two big hits, "If it's a lady" and "Nicolo, Nicolo, play on your piccolo." Also Victoria Monks' two big winners, "I wish I had a pal" and "Call round any old time."

LOWENWIRTH AND COHAN begin their London season of ten weeks in the West End on Monday, and they intend featuring their tremendously successful song "My Little Eva," which has already been placed in almost every pantomime in Great Britain by the National Music Publishing Co.

WILL GODWIN informs the National Music Co. that he has repeated the enormous success he made at Greenock last week with their song, "When I've a hundred pounds," at the Palace, Glasgow, this week, being called before the curtain numerous times.

H. TROTER'S favourite waltz song, "Roses, roses everywhere," has been selected by Miss Roberta Swendson for introduction in the Sunderland pantomime, where she is playing Fairy Queen. The same song is also being featured this week at the Hackney Empire by Miss Katie Cohen, with coloured illustrated slides supplied by Messrs. Sheard and Co. She will continue singing it at the various Empires on the Stoll tour.

MISS L. DANBY, the principal boy in the pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Bolton, has secured from Messrs. Sheard the rights for that town for Mr. Frank Stanley Smith's capital song "Ma Limelight Lou."

MISS HELEN ANDREWS, the possessor of a real contralto voice, has made a pronounced hit with Stanley Gordon's fine song "Till I die" at the Hippodrome, Leeds, and other first-rate variety halls.

MR. H. HATTERSLEY is scoring heavily in Nottingham with "Asleep in the deep," "When the ebb-tide flows," and other real bass songs from Messrs. Sheard and Co.'s catalogue.

MISS EDITH HALEY and Miss Maggie Fraser are making a great hit with Messrs. Sheard's American ballad "When you were sweet sixteen" in Mr. Richard Waldon's pantomime, Dickory Dock, at the Princess's Theatre, Glasgow.

MESSRS. SHEARD inform us that they are having a great demand from all parts of the country for the orchestral accompaniments of Stanley Gordon's popular bass songs "Queen of my dreams," "Out of the night," and "When the ebb-tide flows."

T. W. THURBAN'S latest hit, "The war whoop rag," is in general request with all kinds of musical acts and dumb shows generally.

MR. HARRISON BROCKBANK continues to meet with the greatest possible success with Kipling's striking barrack-room ballad "Follow me 'ome" at all his numerous engagements. Mr. Leonard Ashdowne, the well-known baritone of the Meister Singers, is one of the latest to give prominence to this song.

MESSRS. SHEARD AND CO. have accepted from Messrs. Stanley Gordon and Clifton Bingham their latest bass song, "Neptune" ("Lord of the sea am I"), which they consider as the finest effort of these popular writers. The song will be published early in the new year.

MEDLEY BARRETT'S "Baden-Powell's Scout" is a popular number in the North. Lieut.-General Baden-Powell was attending a concert in Sunderland recently, when a little troop of our youthful defenders, hearing of his presence, hastily assembled and lustily sang the chorus.

MEDLEY BARRETT has been the recipient of many congratulations on the success of his grand march "Copenhagen," which has been played at the Oxford during the past week, and is secured for the Palace, East Ham, and the Empire, Camberwell. It will also be played by several of His Majesty's military bands. The march is dedicated to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Alexandra. The Denmark Music Publishing Co. are already busy supplying the trade demand for this work.

MR. JACK EDGAR'S list at the Metropolitan includes Alfred Lester in his humorous Restaurant Episode; George Formby, a lad from Lancashire; the Lyric Mummers; Cissy Lawson in the skit Why the Third Floor Passed; Dolly Harmer, the clever burlesque actress; and others.

A FLAVOUR of the Yuletide spirit is imparted to the programme of the Coliseum by Mr. Joseph Hart's Polly Pickle's Pets from Petland. The playlet is termed a musical fantasy in one act, and is all the title implies, and more. There are plenty of tuneful, bright airs, and a wealth of fantasy in the shape of all sorts of trick animals. Polly has lost her pets, and she goes to Petland to find them. Accompanied by a chorus of "Buster Browns," she enjoys herself in a childlike spirit of fun, and their adventures form the basis of the skit. Pinky, the cat, is played by a clever animal impersonator; so are the parrot, the dog, the Teddy bear, and the Ibsenesque elephant, Peer Gynt by name. The variety on the bill includes Miss Cecilia Loftus, Miss Evie Greene, Miss Carrie de Mar, and Machnow, the Russian giant.

NEW YEAR'S COLLECTION FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era New Year's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support. Another sponsor is found in Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, who for the past six years has acted as honorary treasurer to the fund, and who, during that period, has used his influence and put forth every personal effort to ensure the success of the annual appeals.

MISS MARIE LLOYD,
The Fair Worker for the Home.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that last year (1907) the inmates averaged ten, but that this year there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Fruin) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era New Year's Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

This year Mr. Woodger is endeavouring to get out six hundred Era Shilling Fund collecting cards, and anyone can be supplied with one by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

CHRISTMAS VARIETY CARNIVAL.

THE dramatic or musical or farcical sketch now forms part and parcel of the Yuletide programmes at the variety theatres, and in this way lies the only chance caterers for the lesser stage have of making up for the defection—entirely amiable and quite temporary, bien entendu—of their principal comedians and comediennes who have betaken themselves to the legitimate stage to vivify with their comicality and vivacity that hotch-potch of fun and frolic known as pantomime. To the HIPPODROME spectacle we draw attention in another column; and the principal attraction presented by Mr. Alfred Butt at the PALACE—viz., Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks, who stay at that house for several weeks—was noticed in our columns last week. In the suburbs the Moss-Stoll, Gibbons, and Macnaghten houses will dispense that variety which is said to be the spice of life. At the EAST HAM PALACE pantomime is to be given; and on every hand there will be found ample amusement, calculated to amuse both the masses and the classes.

THE Christmas programme at the OXFORD is of all-round excellence. Mr. Bob Fitzsimmons and his wife, the pretty Miss Julia Gifford, appear in a sketch entitled A Man's a Man for a' That. Mr. Herbert Lloyd causes much amusement by an exceedingly clever burlesque on a vaudeville entertainment, and Mr. Gus Elen's two new songs, "The Coster's Pony" and "Beer," are much appreciated. Chirgwin, the White-eyed Kaffir, Mr. T. E. Dunville, and Miss Gertie Gitana, the comedienne, are among the other artists.

VARIETY in the best sense of the word will be found at the PALACE THEATRE for the Christmas holidays. The leading attraction in Mr. Butt's scheme is, of course, Miss Ellaline Terriss and Mr. Seymour Hicks in The Fly by Night, which is now playing much closer. Les Fleury Duo, with their burlesque revue of Parisian types, have revived their former success, whilst those interested in acrobatic tumbling have the Bogganies in their funny entertainment entitled The Lunatic Bakers. Terpsichore is represented by Tortola Valencia and the Palace Girls, the first-named a handsome Moorish dancer, who has already made success, whilst the latter, clad in gorgeous new "confections" and equipped with new songs and dances, are always a popular feature with Palace audiences. Devotees of the Scottish form of humour find entertainment in the characteristic Gaelic songs of Mr. Jack Lorimer, whilst other items on a long list are Mr. Nelson Jackson in song and story; Rappo and Ella, equilibrists; Max Laube, the well-known Continental whistler; and the Urbanora Bioscope with topical pictures of current events. At the special Boxing Day matinée Mr. Herman Finck has arranged a new pot-pourri of popular airs.

HENGLER'S CIRCUS reopens on Boxing Day at 2.30 p.m. with Cinderella, the children's favourite pantomime, in which there will be a grand transformation scene, and the Prince's state carriage will be drawn by eight Shetland ponies. In the forest glen scene there will be a full pack of hounds. In addition to the pantomime famous troupes of gymnasts and Continental combinations of singers and dancers will appear.

THE grand Christmas company presented on Monday by Mr. Frank Glenister at the LONDON PAVILION includes the special engagement of Arthur Roberts, in the farcical sketch Till Sunday; or, The Girl Who Took the Wrong (Towing) Path. Other variety attractions will include King and Benson, Harry Ford, Chris. Richards, Russell Wallett, Jock Whiteford, Tom Leamore, Ambrose Thorne, Daisy Jerome, Will Edwards, the Motramos, the Three Laurels, Edwin Boyde, and others.

MR. JOSEPH WILSON, at the TIVOLI, for his Christmastide show has secured Marie Lloyd and Little Tich. The former will present three new songs, one of which, if rumour speaks truly, will have reference to the Suffragist crusade. Similarly, Little Tich promises two new ditties. Mr. Tom Dunville will make comic capital out of the "Territorial" in a Haldanic ditty; Mr. Alfred Lester will present a funny interlude; Mr. Henry de Vries will be seen in A Modern Othello; and Mr. Courtice Pounds and Miss Gaston Murray will exploit the musical playlet Charles His Friend, which was seen for the first time last year at the Palace.

THE booking for the Christmas holidays at the EMPIRE THEATRE beats even the records of that famous house. The great feature of the bill is, of course, the spectacular ballet A Day in Paris, which has been smartened and brought up to date; while close on its heels in point of interest comes Mr. W. J. Locke's new comedietta A Blank Cheque, noticed in our columns last week. In the strictly "variety" vein are, amongst others, Miss Lalla Selbini; the Perezoffs, jugglers, in their restaurant scene; the Amaranths, in their charming pas de quatre; and Messrs. Hayes and Merritt, in their droll billiard-table act.

FOR the matinée on Boxing Day there will be a strong programme at the ALHAMBRA. Leonora, in Narcisse; Mlle. Britta, in the romantic ballet Paquita; the Max Wessely Troupe, in their juggling pantomime; the Ten Ji Japanese company of magicians; the Four Black Diamonds; Henry Helme, the French vocalist; and The Two Flags divertissement go to make up the bill. The cinematograph productions of eminent French actors and actresses will be changed, Mr. Alfred Moul presenting the third of the series, The Red Hand.

THE Christmas programme at the ROYAL STANDARD is a long and strong one. Harry Tate in Motoring, Will English, Ray Maskell, and the Brown and Kelly Combination are among the prominent turns. Daisy James, Margaret Huntley's sketch That Girl Carrots, and the Three Royal Dreadnoughts (rifle shots) are the particular stars.

MR. CHARLES URBAN will, in surrender to the ruling spirit of the season, supplement the always interesting "Urbanora" exhibition of animated pictures at the PALACE THEATRE by a film which may best be described as a bioscopic joke. Primarily representing a globe-trotter's flying trip through Europe, living scenes in Switzerland and Sweden and Norway are presented at the rapid rate at which the flying tripper sees them; steamboats arrive and depart with dramatic velocity; while a staid Swiss church parade acquires the rapidity of roller-skating.

THE pantomime of Robinson Crusoe was given for the first time on Christmas Eve at the CRYSTAL PALACE. Until further notice performances will take place at 2.30 and 7.30 p.m. In the centre transept facing the royal boxes Mr. George O. Starr has arranged for an Old English circus. This will be curtained in and well warmed by a monster heating pipe, and there will be seating accommodation for about 2,000 people. In the South Nave there will be a "Yuletide Fair."

THE programme of attractions to be presented at the ALEXANDRA PALACE during the holidays is both lengthy and varied. First and foremost there is to be a grand circus company direct from Hengler's, under the direction of Mr. Austin Fryers. There will be daring riders and dainty equestriennes, gymnasts and jugglers, highly-trained animals, and a host of clowns.

AT the HOLLOWAY EMPIRE strong holiday attractions will be Herbert Darnley's Brigands of Terragona, and Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten.

V.A.F. AND THE AGENTS.

In the King's Bench Division, on Saturday, before Mr. Justice Darling, came up the important question relative to the assignment of commission, the particular test action that was decided by Mr. Justice Darling being Tom Shaw and Co. v. Moss' Empires, Ltd., and Bastow. This was a claim for moneys alleged to have been assigned by the defendant, George Bastow, to the plaintiffs. Mr. Duke, K.C., and Mr. Randolph represented the plaintiffs; Mr. Holman Gregory the defendant Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Mr. Lush, K.C., and Mr. Doughty the defendant Bastow, who was joined as co-defendant on the ground that he refused to be joined as co-plaintiff.

The plaintiffs are dramatic and variety agents, and the defendant Mr. George Bastow is an artist who obtained employment with the Moss' Empires, Ltd., through their agency. On Dec. 10, 1906, Mr. Bastow signed the following agreement:—"To Tom Shaw and Co.—Sirs,—In consideration of your having procured for me an engagement (which I agree to accept through you) with Moss' Empires, Ltd., to appear as comedian at the halls as per contracts (subject to the rules and regulations of the establishment) for seventeen weeks at a salary of £40 per week to commence on Monday, March 2, 1908, also twelve weeks at £45 weekly, I hereby agree to pay you or your assigns 10 per cent. commission on the salary above referred to and on all moneys which should accrue under the said engagement or a prolongation of the same, and a like commission on the salary on the next engagement at the said establishment under the control of Moss' Empires, Ltd., and hereby authorise Moss' Empires, Ltd., to deduct and pay the said commission from my salary in any manner you may deem expedient. In the event of this engagement not being fulfilled the commission shall be notwithstanding payable, unless such non-fulfilment shall be owing to the default of the proprietor or illness.—Geo. Bastow."

Notice in writing of this assignment was given to Moss' Empires, Ltd., early in October, 1908, and the present action was brought in respect of £21 10s. alleged to be due under its terms as the result of earnings by the defendant Bastow during an engagement in October and November, 1908. The defendant, Moss' Empires, Ltd., had withheld this amount from the salary of Mr. Bastow, against which he protested. They now declared themselves willing to pay the money to the plaintiff or to him as might be directed by the Court. For the defendant Bastow it was contended that the document of Dec. 10 did not constitute a valid equitable assignment. Reliance was also placed on the contract of engagement between the two defendants, dated Dec. 21, 1906, clause 13 of which was as follows:—"The artist shall not assign, mortgage, or charge his or her salary, nor permit the same to be taken in execution. Such salary shall be payable to the artist and to no other person, except in the case of the death of the artist." . . .

Mr. Justice Darling said that he thought that the document of Dec. 10, 1906, was a valid equitable assignment according to the judgment of Lord Macnaghten in "William Brandt's Sons and Co. v. The Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd.," (1905) (A.C., 454). It was not like a cheque, with regard to which it had been held that the bank was the drawer's agent and that the cheque was not an assignment of a debt due from the bank to the drawer. The strongest ground for the defence was in the contract of Dec. 21, clause 13. But, though Moss' Empires, Ltd., might bring an action for breach of that contract, if they could show any damages, in his opinion it could no more operate to invalidate the assignment than it could to interfere with the laws of gravitation. It could not prevent that being an equitable assignment which would be one apart from it. He gave judgment for the plaintiff with costs as against the defendant Bastow. As regards the other defendants he made no order as to costs.

THE BEDFORD.

An attractive programme is put forward this week by Mr. B. Pearce Lucas at this comfortable house, over which he so ably presides, and there is much which will meet with the approval of the holiday audiences this evening. At the head of the bill is Mr. Ben Nathan, who is presenting a one-act comedy drama, entitled Filby the Fakir, which recently was played at Wyndham's Theatre as a curtain-raiser, and achieved a great success. The story revolves round an escaped convict who, in his hour of freedom, manages to do a kindly act. It is a dramatic little piece, which holds the audience throughout. Mr. Ben Nathan gives a very fine delineation of Filby, and brings all his ripe experience to bear on the character, which he makes most realistic. The other characters are also capitally played, and a big success is scored.

In a lighter vein a great hit is made by the Three Cunards, whose wonderful simultaneous dancing made a terrific hit. It is really marvellous the precision and dexterity with which they dance together, performing intricate steps, while their sand-dance is as novel as it is clever. Gladys Smart is a bright comedienne, and soon gets the gallery to sing the chorus of her song, "Have you got another girl at home like Mary?"; while her second number, "Christina," is also very taking. Carl Colyer, the Colonial comedian, is very entertaining. His hat manipulation and lively patter soon made him a favourite. May and Hyde present an amusing interlude, and the lady sings very charmingly; while their duet, "Courting and Married," is diverting. George Barnes and company appear in a lively scena, Fun on a Racecourse, and the fun is fairly furious, and keeps the house thoroughly amused. It all ends with a round with the gloves, which is entertaining and also very comical. The Dancing Gilberts are a couple of very talented young ladies, whose dancing is most clever and wins unstinted applause. Phil Ray's Entertainers provide a pleasing turn with song and dance, and sing several catchy numbers.

Evelyn Taylor, always a favourite here, is once again scoring her usual success. Her first song, "When the eagle flies away," has a pretty refrain; while her second, "Mr. Poverty," is a capital number, which she sings in a fine fashion, and greatly increases her popularity thereby. Cyril Dane is a comedian who sings of the various girls he has met; and he is ably assisted by a very charming young lady, who appears in various characters. Bert Brantford, a comedian of the Harry Ford style, has a couple of amusing songs which provoke laughter, one especially, "What's the good," being noticeable for its smartly-written words. Mr. Brantford makes an undoubted success. Mr. Fred Costin appears early in the evening, and the Bioscope concludes. Mr. Geo. R. Hatley and his orchestra, as usual, contribute largely to the general enjoyment; while Mr. Donald Brown, the general acting-manager, does all that is possible to make his patrons comfortable.

We are advised that Messrs. J. C. Plimpton and Co., of Liverpool and London, the well-known firm of American merchants, have been appointed sole European agents for the Richardson Ball-bearing Skate Co., Chicago, and the large stock of skates formerly held by this firm at their branch at New Brighton, Cheshire, has been transferred to Messrs. Plimpton's premises in Liverpool. All communications intended for the Richardson Company should in future be addressed to Plimpton's Buildings, Old Hall-street, Liverpool.

WATER RATS' MATINEE AT THE COLISEUM.

A special matinée, promoted by the Grand Order of Water Rats, in aid of Sir William Treloar's Christmas Fund for the Little Cripples of London, took place at the Coliseum on Tuesday, and was honoured by the patronage and presence of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs. The theatre was kindly lent for the occasion by the Coliseum Syndicate, Ltd., per Mr. Oswald Stoll, the whole proceeds of the matinée being given to the Cripples' Fund. The cheaper parts of the house were well filled, but in the stalls there were a good many vacant seats. In the course of the afternoon Mr. Dundas Slater, the manager, introduced Sir William Treloar to the audience.

Sir W. Treloar, after making a jocular allusion to his introduction to the "house" after the manner of the giant Machnow, said he thought it was his duty to come forward and publicly offer his thanks to Mr. Oswald Stoll and the artists who had so kindly given their services in aid of the Cripples' Hamper Fund. For fifteen years he had been working on behalf of the fund, and though there were so many other appeals this year he was happy to say that his friends continued to support this fund. Indeed, he had been able to extend the benefit to little cripples outside London, including Barnet, Barking, Croydon, East and West Ham, Edmonton, Tottenham, Hornsey, Chiswick, and other places. In this work he had been very much helped by the London County Council, the metropolitan borough councils, headed by the respective Mayors, and the London City Mission. A Cripples' Home and College had also been established at Alton in Hampshire, in which were more than 100 children, who were receiving the best medical attendance and the best food. It was hoped that in many cases that terrible disease tuberculosis would be cured, but the sufferings of the little patients would, anyhow, be alleviated. There were in the school forty boys who were cripples but not invalids, and they were being taught a trade so as to be able to earn their own living. The first twenty-five boys who came into the college were found after five weeks' stay there to have so increased in weight as to give an average of 5lb. to each boy. In conclusion Sir William expressed his warm thanks to the audience for their attendance.

The programme was a most attractive one. The early turns included Miss Jenny Hartley, Mr. Morny Cash, Mr. Carl Lynn, and the Norman Leonard Trio. My Fancy delighted everybody with her smart step dancing, and Mr. W. J. Churchill scored in his ditty in which he makes reference to the suffragettes and other topical subjects. Mr. Harrison Brockbank gave a capital rendering of Rudyard Kipling's "Follow Me," and Mr. Fred Karno's company appeared in their amusing sketch Mumming Birds, which caused general merriment. Mr. Ed. E. Ford, a new turn to most of the audience gave his funny sketch, "Faces I Have Seen," concluding with a parody on "'Twas in Trafalgar's Bay." Next appeared Matchnow, the giant, whose height is said to be 8ft. 2in. He visited each part of the house in turn, after the gentleman who introduced him had given particulars of the giant's height, his meals, &c. Miss Gertie Gitana then sang in pleasing style "I'll die for you" and "Sweet Iona." The O'Gorman Bros. gave evidence of their skill as step dancers, and Miss Marie Kendall sang with excellent effect, "Don't it make you say you wished you'd saved your money?" in which special mention was made of Sir William Treloar's efforts on behalf of the London children. Mr. Joe Elvin and company appeared in the laughable sketch, The King of the Castle, in which the popular comedian caused great merriment as Peter, the man "who has no go in him" until he takes a dose of a potent potion. Cruikshank came next with his funny patter and ditties. Mr. James Stewart scored in his laughable musical sketch at the piano, and Mr. Julian Rose from the Lyceum Theatre also did well in song and patter. Mr. Horace Goldin was seen in his clever and quick conjuring performance. The Lyric Mummers, dressed in picturesque costumes, contributed a charming song. Mr. Eugene Stratton gave one of his popular coon songs, "Nothing like the first love, after all." Miss Evie Greene delighted the audience with an admirably rendered song and an American dialect recitation, "Seein' things at night," which were excellently delivered.

Chirgwin received a hearty welcome, and quickly evoked a roar of laughter by a reference to "Sir William Christmas Tree-loar." He also sang "My fiddle is my sweetheart" with his usual success. Mr. George Leyton appeared with his band of old soldiers in Lucknow, and Miss Cecilia Loftus also contributed to the long programme. The following ladies assisted by kindly acting as programme sellers:—Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Mrs. Eugene Stratton, the Misses Lil Hawthorne, Irene Rose, Belle Elmore, Melinda May, R. Heyden, Vesta Pine, Minnie Pine, Cara Bennett, Fanny St. Clair, &c. The stage directors were Mr. H. Crocker and Mr. Wm. Lee; the acting-manager, Mr. H. Pryme; the musical directors, Mr. Louis La Rondelle and Mr. A. Bond Sayers; hon. accompanist, Mr. Penyston Miles; and hon. Press steward, Mr. Douglas Miller.

"CORA, THE BALLET GIRL."

A Comedy Sketch, by T. Taylor, produced at the Battersea Palace on Monday afternoon, Dec. 21.

Major Hindley .....Mr. Stanley Robson
Charles Masters .....Mr. Donald Young
Cora .....Miss M. E. Ellis

A critical Battersea audience at Monday's matinée expressed its approval and appreciation of the laughable sketch Cora, the Ballet Girl, the amusing situations in which are highly relished. The scene is the chambers of Charles Masters, who on the previous evening had met with a little adventure in Leicester-square. A thief had snatched a purse from a lady's hand, and Masters had chased the man, rescued the purse from him, and taken it back to its owner. Expressions of gratitude follow, and cards are exchanged, the lady promising to call upon Masters next morning. The fair one duly carries out her promise, and Masters discovers that she is by profession a ballet dancer. He is every moment expecting the arrival of his prospective father-in-law, Major Hindley, and the ballet dancer's presence there would be fatal to the fulfilment of his plans. However, the gallant officer comes on the scene before the girl is able to quit the place, and he actually falls in love with her, the playlet ending with the promise of a double marriage. Miss M. E. Ellis was the soul of the little piece as Cora. She danced prettily, and altogether was delightfully entertaining. Messrs. Stanley Robson and Donald Young gave appropriate impersonations of the two men.

Mr. F. J. Connor's circus, which has been engaged for the Christmas holidays at the Crystal Palace, has come direct from Douglas, Isle of Man, after a most successful summer and autumn season, and the full programme, which has now come to hand, includes the Four Kellys, America's premier troupe of acrobats; John Irvin, juggling feats on bareback horse; Miss Douglas, haute école act; Mons. Jean, celebrated foot equilibrist; Little Mona Connor, clever juvenile equestrienne; Miss Ada Pinder, introducing her highly-trained horse, riding collie dogs, and flight of trained pigeons; the Bros. Austin, funny clowns and equilibrists; Bishop and Winkles, clowns and agoustes; Whimsical Walker, the royal clown, of Drury Lane fame; Happy Hicks and his clever ponies, introducing Sunny Jim, the unrideable mule; and La Belle Duchesse, with her wonderful stallions, ponies, and dogs, and champion high-jumping hounds. Father Christmas, with his ponies and escort of clowns, will distribute toys to the children after each performance.

FILM GOSSIP.

We extend to the readers of this column and to all associated with the cinematograph industry our best wishes for a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

AMAZONS OF DIFFERENT PERIODS.—This film depicts in a series of scenes of great retrospective interest the different stages of civilization of the world according to his wife's changes of costume and ideals in the different periods. We pass from the prehistoric warrior, armed with her long spear and clad in the hides of wild beasts, to the gracious amazon of the present time, acknowledging en passant, her sisters of the Middle Ages and the reign of Louis XIV., also the time of the French Revolution (1789), with Théroigne de Méricourt as a prominent figure amongst some thrilling episodes of that troubled period.

A DUEL IN THE TIME OF RICHELIEU.—François of Montmorency, Lord of Bouteville, the famous duellist, celebrated for his single combats at a time when the frequency of duels had caused severe decrees to be enforced, took refuge in Brussels after killing the Marquis Desportes and the Earl of Thorigny and wounding Lafrette. In spite of the intercession of the Archduchess governing the Netherlands, King Louis XIII. refused to pardon him. Bouteville was so vexed when he heard of it that he swore he would go and fight in Paris in the Place Royale itself. He had the audacity to carry out this daring wager on May 12, 1627. His opponent was Beuvron. Each champion had two seconds, who fought also with swords and daggers. Arrested in his flight after this new feat, Bouteville was sentenced to death, and beheaded on June 21, in spite of the entreaties of the highest people in the land. This film shows this last of his duels.

THE INVALID WITH THE WOODEN HEAD.—An old veteran having lost his head during the war has had a complete collection of wooden ones carved for him, which can rival those of an Aunt Sally show. "What head will you put on this morning, sir?" He puts on his veteran's head, and with it come back to him memories of his campaigns, and as he is very thirsty he drinks various and sundry wines. His head begins to swim; he picks a quarrel with everybody standing in his way, and makes profound curtsies to lamp-posts. On Sundays he puts on his best head—a very peaceful head—and goes to the park and sits down on a bench with other invalids . . . and the boys unscrew his head and legs and play skittles with them.

KIDS' STRIKE.—Early last spring the boys of a Grammar School in the west of France held a meeting, during which they decided to stay away from school. It is a scene of this kind that we see here. The boys of a school in one of the Paris suburbs throw books at their masters' heads, and go and make the girls next door join them, when they make a huge bonfire with their books and school requisites. Presently the young strikers march through the streets, clamouring for their "rights." The youngsters' rights! Freedom and truant-playing! A police inspector organises the defence and tries to break up the crowd. Baffled by the girls, the miniature policemen close the gates of the town and arrest the leaders. Then order is at last restored.

THE PRETTY DAIRYMAID.—A farmer is making love to his pretty dairymaid, in spite of the fact that he is engaged to another girl. Mary, however, has given her heart to a dashing sailor, Peter, whose sister is the farmer's fiancée, and she agrees to meet him near the pool, just outside the village. The farmer, having discovered her design, picks a quarrel with her, while Peter, who has been waiting a long time, leaves the pool, thinking she will not come. Mary arrives too late and her master, who has followed her, maddened by the girl's defiance, strangles her and throws her into the water. Peasants having discovered the body, there is an inquest, and Peter, who has been seen near the pool on the evening of the crime, is arrested. But he breaks away, and the gendarmes, having lost his trail, come back to the scene of the murder in the hopes that remorse will bring the culprit back to the place. There they see the farmer walking about. Suddenly the ghost of the girl appearing before his mental eye makes him kneel down on the ground in an attitude the meaning of which cannot be misconstrued. The last scene shows the arrest of the actual culprit.

"IT IS THE HOUSE DECORATOR."—A gentleman on leaving his house sees a young man he does not know entering his flat. Anxious for the safety of his wife, he goes back hurriedly, rings the bell with such force that it breaks, and asks for an explanation. He has only to apologise, however, when he recognises the house decorator with his stained coat. Effectively, just level with the window, there is a scaffolding, but the would-be workman, seeing that he is not safe there, climbs up to the next floor, where he disturbs a young lady at her toilet. Her mother arrives, and indignantly sends the house decorator away. He goes to the top floor, where a kindly laundress lends him a skirt and blouse, which will enable him to leave the house. Unluckily for him, the decorators are waiting for him at the bottom of the stairs, and plunge him into a bucketful of paint.

BOBBY'S DRAWINGS.—Young Bobby's simple drawings represent different people and things. First, there is a gentleman, then two gendarmes, one hooligan, and a long wall, lighted by a lamp. Bobby cuts out his different drawings, which become alive. The gentleman walks along the wall, the hooligan assaults him and opens his arm with a large knife. The kindly gendarmes arrive, and the wicked hooligan is carried away by them. Another picture is that of a lady meeting a little pastrycook's apprentice carrying a cake in his basket on his head. They collide, and sit down on the ground, with the cake between them. These are clever trick scenes.

Edison Manufacturing Co., Ltd.

LORD FEATHERTOP.—Caleb Rankin plays with the affections of pretty Betty Grigsby, throwing her over for another girl. Her entreaties to him are all in vain, and so they part. Twenty years later we know him as Squire Rankin, with a daughter, Polly. Betty Grigsby is an old woman with the reputation of being a witch, and it is to her that the Squire's daughter goes with a party of young people to have their fortunes told. Whilst in the witch's hut the Squire's daughter hears some unpleasant things, and the Squire, coming on the scene, scolds Polly and rates the old woman, who vows vengeance upon him. Having made plans as to the form in which she will have her revenge, she uses her powers of witchcraft to endow a pumpkin-headed scarecrow with life, and creates a modern, foppish youth, who makes love to the Squire's daughter. He is accepted as a lover, and, with the Squire's assent, a grand wedding is arranged. Appearing as a grand lady, the witch attends the wedding, and as the happy couple are about to depart she changes the bridegroom back into a scarecrow, thus righting, to her own satisfaction, the old wrong, and upsetting the Squire and his guests.

MISS SHERLOCK HOLMES.—Jack Rose and Jim Dalton are two employees in the same office, and both are in love with their employer's daughter, Nell. She favours Jack, and learning that Dalton is planning mischief, disguises herself as a boy, and takes service in the firm as office-boy. Having speculated and lost heavily, Dalton robs the safe, placing some papers in the coat of Jack. Seeing this, Nell transfers the papers into Dalton's overcoat pocket, and when Jack is accused but no evidence is forthcoming of his guilt, suggests Dalton's pockets should be searched. This is done, Jack is exonerated and Nell complimented on her sharp work, and paterfamilias gives Jack his consent to an early marriage.

THE OLD MAIDS' TEMPERANCE CLUB.—Whilst preparing the club-room for a meeting of the O.M.T.C. the steward has helped himself from a bottle of whiskey, which he puts in the ice-cooler for safety and forgets to take away when he has finished his work. When the porter comes in with the ice he drops the ice in the chest, and not knowing of the bottle, breaks it, so that the contents make a fine temperance drink. During the meeting the ladies get warm at their debate and, of course, need a drink, and after sampling the iced water (?) some of the staid old maids get a trifle frivolous. A wandering professor happens to bring along a machine with a grand scheme for restoring youth and beauty "while you wait." As a result of a vote on the subject, his machine is given a trial, and when the president enters first and comes out a beautiful damsel of sweet sixteen there is a scramble for places, and we see some curious changes brought about by a "wee drappie." The picture winds up with the throwing out of the professor and his machine, and the O.M.T.C. adjourning in a very hilarious mood.

THE SHOWMEN'S HYMN OF THANKS TO THE REV. THOMAS HORNE.

WRITTEN FOR CHRISTMAS
BY JOHN GAVAN, SHOWMAN.

God bless the King of England
As he sits upon his throne,
And may our God in Heaven
Pour down blessings on us all.
As his Government rules the nations
So do the angels rule the Heavens
For the Lord God, Who Sits high up on His throne.

God with His power in Heaven
He created two big lights,
He ordered one to rule the day
And the other to rule the night;
He created men and women
On earth to rule and pray,
And the Reverend Horne
For the showman's cause
Is ruling night and day.

Don't begrudge your neighbour,
Let him live upon the earth.
Learn to know yourself—
Whatever else you know—
That all the blessings that we've got
They've come straight down from Heaven,
From the Lord God, Who
Sits high up on His throne.

Oh, what a lovely dream I've had!
It might have been my thoughts—
In my sleep I saw the Angel of the Lord
Speaking to the Reverend Horne
And crowning him with glory,
Saying, "Blessed are you
That works on earth for God;
There'll be welcome in the Heavens
For you showmen, said the Lord."

Blessed are you that in your hearts have faith;
When your soul it leaves your body
And it 's on its road to Heaven
It will be guided by the Reverend Horne
And your loving patron saint.

The author of the Hymn of Thanks given above (exactly as he wrote it) is just a good, living showman, a warm-hearted Irishman—whether a Catholic or a Protestant I have not even asked. It presents one or two, if not more, intellectual problems. (1) Whether knowingly or unknowingly, Mr. Gavan has cast his poem in Hebraic form. (2) It may be that he is saturated with the folk-lore of his native country—the songs of the people that express the aspirations of the race. The author tells me that he and his family sing this Hymn of Praise as they gather round the van-fire on Sunday night. This we do know, that it is straight from the heart and soul of the man who wrote it.

T. HORNE, Guild Chaplain.

Xmas Eve, 1908.

FRED EUSTACE will be at the Hippodrome, Peckham, next week, with his successful sketch Our Curate, now in its sixth year.

MISS ALICE LLOYD is the "head-liner" at the Alhambra, N.Y., and the McNaughtons are there too. It is hardly necessary to add that the house is crowded at every performance. These clever artists are as well thought of in New York as they are in London.

MR. GLEN ALVA is playing the part of Puss in Boots in the production of that famous nursery story by Mr. J. H. Savile, who was called upon to make a speech on the opening night in answer to the enthusiasm with which the holiday attraction was received.

MR. H. CURLINE BALDRY is the newly-appointed acting-manager at the Shoreditch Empire. Mr. Baldry has been connected with the dramatic and variety stage for a number of years. Amongst his engagements have been those with Mr. Fred Mouillot, Mr. Fred Melville, and Mr. Arthur Roberts. Since his induction he has made many friends.

A UNIQUE application was made to Mr. Rose at the Tower Bridge Police-court on Saturday by an American named Doone, who asked for a licence to allow a child, a month old, to appear in a performance at the Surrey Theatre. Mr. Rose: That is very young for a child to commence life. I don't think I have power to licence a baby. Mr. Doone said that every care would be taken of the child. Inspector Spencer handed the Act to the magistrate, and pointed out that a child could not be licensed under ten years of age to perform after certain hours. Mr. Rose said he was willing to help the applicant, but was bound to abide by the Act, and must refuse the licence.

MR. PHILIP CONWAY applied on Monday to Mr. Marsham at Bow-street for licences for seventeen children to appear in the Christmas spectacle at the Hippodrome. He said the performance would commence at 10.15 and finish at eleven. The education of the children would be thoroughly attended to, and they would be escorted home after each performance. The magistrate agreed to grant the licences for a month, but remarked that he thought eleven o'clock was too late for children to be on the stage. The children in question were lined up in Court, and one little girl caused some amusement by taking up her position in the dock, where she calmly nursed her doll.

RICHMOND HIPPODROME.

Despite the dullest week of the year, it would not appear to affect the clientele of the Richmond Hippodrome. On the night of our visit we found the theatre packed. Quite a delightful little sketch is rattled through by Liley and Antley. It tells of the tricks of a wily Benedict to bring his better half to submission. This he achieves with signal success, and to the manifest enjoyment of the audience.

Little Victoria sings quite cleverly "Take me on the Flip-Flap," and is accorded an encouraging ovation. The juveniles, indeed, are quite in force here. The Union Jack Boys are an excellent combination, and demonstrate what training will result in. The "Boys" in question are really welcomed, and won it. And then there is Paul Vandy. It may be surmised what Paul doesn't know about conjuring isn't worth knowing; his whole business is clever. His naive astonishment at the amazement of others is a droll feature of Paul's that must be seen to be appreciated. As to his tricks, he produced marvellous changes and juggled inimitably. He was demonstratively applauded, but this was only what he richly deserved; a man who can juggle as Paul Vandy can merits all the encouragement one can give. Early in the evening Edward Claude Gardener takes the audience into his confidence. A happy soul is Claude, who informs the company he really doesn't care for anything so long as "there's a girl there"; the audience seemed to agree, and here one has a further instance of stage unanimity. His second contribution divulged certain elemental advice as to the best time to choose a wife—the vocalist seemed to think the best time is "early"—a.m. The male portion of the audience took notes mentally. Miss Eva Lewis should do better anon. Of her versatility there is not much doubt, so she has it in her own hands; her Terpsichorean efforts are not without merit. Mr. Richardson's orchestra pleasingly fills up the interval with a tuneful selection, and then Lloyd Morgan, a refined and intelligent vocalist, sang in excellent form a ditty anent "Eve and the Apple." The vocalist appeared to be anxious to accentuate the fact that history repeats itself; but it's a pity to put it all on to Eve, isn't it? Mr. Lloyd Morgan is a distinct acquisition. Those who like their drama strong will not cavil at The Last Command. Here we have a strong piece boasting all the elements that go to make a popular drama. The piece is superbly played, and the interest is well-sustained to the fall of the curtain. Mr. Fred Maxwell is altogether excellent as Colonel Yewlett; his elocution is fine, and his earnestness is wonderfully depicted. Capital, too, is the Colonel Desmond of Mr. Dennis Clyde; Mr. F. Fisher puts in some good work as the luckless deserter; and Mr. W. Yorke, as Harry Dunbar, achieved success. A fine performance was the Lola of Miss Lois du Cane; while a good word may be said of the Sergeant of Mr. Fred Danton. The Last Command is mounted with considerable atention to detail, and the production is one of merit. Ruffell's Bioscope is here, and much enjoyed. Mr. Frederick H. Terrell is the business-manager, and, as such, leaves nothing to be desired.

THE chief favourite at the Stratford Empire is to be Miss Kate Carney, who will present her latest coster attractions. The humour of the side-walk has no better exponent.

THE Shepherd's Bush Empire presents Fred Karno's Football Match and Howell and Scott, Hebrew comedians, among its numerous attractions.

IT is said that Miss Carrie Nation, "the American bar-smasher," has been approached by a London syndicate, and has agreed shortly to give short lectures from the stage of certain halls in the Metropolis. Of course, she will appear at temperance houses.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Our Yuletide Wishes.

Here's a Merry Christmas to all ye merry-makers. Whether on the front parade or inside the show, the sad-eyed old world is all the better, all the brighter, and all the more clean-souled for its army of merry men. So again, a Merry Christmas-time to all who dwell in Showland.

The Glad Present and the Sad Past.

When that great literary showman Charles Dickens wrote his wonderful story, "A Christmas Carol," one of his supernatural characters was "the Ghost of Christmas Past" and another "the Ghost of Christmas Present." The memory of many a veteran of the hosts of Showland to-day is still haunted with a "Ghost of Christmas Past"—the memory of the hard times of years ago, the "Hungry Forties," the no less "Hungry Sixties," of the nineteenth century. Well some of us shudder as we think of those sad and bad old times, when "nix of munjarry" and "nanty denari" were the frequent sad words of the men, women, and children of the road. In those bad old times the word "traveller" was more in use than to-day to denominate the showman and the itinerant entertainer of the people at our fairs. We had indeed to travel for our daily bread in those days.

Some Memories of "the Ghost of Christmas Past."

It was the hard, bitter winter of 1860, the middle year of the cotton famine. Our centre for Christmas was Manchester. We were located on a strip of vacant land off Holland-street, on the Oldham-road. Ours was a "dolly show"; the people called it the "puppee show." We could not get an audience, so poor were the starving cotton workers, even at one halfpenny for admission. We tried "free admission," and then were willing to get what "ha'pence" we could in "the nobbings." That expedient even failed us, for your worker shrinks from enjoying a show when he has no money to pay for it. Then it was that a brilliant idea came to the dear old man. "Let us show the slang for old rags. They have no denari, but most of them have old duds, poor beggars. We may get a hundredweight or two of old rags." So in the Christmas week we paraded the streets in the immediate neighbourhood of the showground, and we announced that "the famous marionette show and fantocina theatre" would give a special treat to the children and to parents with children in hand. "No charge for admission, no collection, only bring a handful of old rags." Well, we filled the booth three houses a night, and we realised on our miscellaneous collection of old rags more than enough for our Christmas dinner. That's one of my "Ghosts of Christmas Past." We were sharers in the common lot of the poorest of God's poor in Manchester in 1860.

My "Ghost of Christmas Present."

What a joyous vision it is—a land of milk and honey, a people with full larders, the Yule log burning brightly, just a touch of cold in the air, a merry word for every neighbour! My "Ghost of Christmas Present" is garbed as Santa Claus. God bless every man who acts the part with a smiling face and a full bag of gifts this Christmastide. Do we know a widow with little children who last Christmas had the breadwinner to share their Christmas rejoicing? Yes, we do. Then haste away with that parcel to the post. Have you remembered each one—the mother, the little ones? Yes. Then "God be with you." The Spirit of Christmas Present is yours. Is there an old man somewhere you have done a kind deed for, taken pains to help? Yes, there is. Thank God, you have done it, my brother, my sister. Yours is the true Spirit of Christmas. So again we say, "A Merry, Merry Christmas."

"God rest you, merry gentlemen, were the words sung by the carol singers in olden times. So let us be brave in our faith that merriment is good.
Let nothing you dismay,"

A Memorable Day.

Dec. 23, the day we go to press this week, is the birthday of the grand old man of Showland, George Sanger—eighty-one this memorable day. We are but expressing the profound admiration of the whole body of the showmen of the English-speaking peoples of the world when we say, "God bless and spare you yet more years to come."

The Guild Chaplain to His Venerated Chief.

ASK ME NOT TO SAY FAREWELL.

I cannot, nay, I cannot bring
My tongue to say "Farewell,"
Nor would I have the bells of life
Ring out so sad a knell.
I would not break the fellowship
So strong through many years,
How we won the children's bread
And dried the widow's tears,
How we buckled armour on,
And fought with foemen dire,
How we vanquished ignorance,
And quenched fanatic fire.

. . . . . .

So ask me not to say "Farewell,"
My veteran comrade brave;
'Tis time enough to say "Good-bye"
Beside an open grave.

. . . . . .

In the glory of life's setting sun,
My brother, take thy rest;
Well hast thou fought, and well hast won
Thy guerdon with life's best.

Preston Christmas Fair.

This fair opened on Friday, Dec. 18, and will close on the 28th. The principal show was Capt. Tom Payne's Palace of Delight; the machines were those of Mr. John Green, who exhibited fine sets of motor cars and galloping horses; Mrs. Dewhurst, with overhead jumpers; and Messrs. Wilson, Parr, and Richmond Bros. with juvenile and gem sets, shooters, Winchester ranges, penalty frames; houp-la stalls and throwing games were by Messrs. Harrison, Dewhurst, Garlick, Forshaw, Wilson, Richmond, Payne, Wallis, Bradley, Taylor, Maloney, Bell, Evans, Mallory, and Evers. The fair-ground is admirably arranged by the Superintendent of Markets, Mr. John Hardman, Hon. Member of the Showmen's Guild.

Carmarthen.

Mr. Harry Cowell's Phœnix Theatre at the Carmarthen Fair-ground was well patronised during the week. On Monday evening Josephine was presented; Tuesday, The Lucky Racehorse; Wednesday, Is Marriage a Failure; and Thursday, The Mysteries of Paris. For the afternoon of Boxing Day Aunts and Uncles was announced, and for Saturday evening The Indian Queen. There was no performance on Christmas Day. The company continue to present the various plays with much ability.

The Yuletide Fair at the Crystal Palace is now quite complete, and is brimful of all kinds of novelties. Mr. Hyatt has this year surpassed himself in bringing together a host of entertainments which will please all sorts and conditions of holiday-makers. The monster Christmas tree has been erected this year just outside the concert room. The Auxeto Gramaphone concerts are giving records of distinguished artists, and will continue to do so until further notice.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

By the Rev. T. HORNE,
Chaplain the Showmen's Guild.

"AFTER MANY YEARS."
A Tale of Christmas Eve.
[Copyright.]

I remember two strange guests that we welcomed to our merry Christmas at home quite fifty years ago. I was full of all an inquisitive child's eagerness to know everything and at once, and I recall my puzzlement of mind when my father introduced the guests to mother in these strange words:—

"Mother, I make known to you my friends, Death and the Lady."

The dear mother, with her big heart ready to mother any poor nomad, took the dad's friends in hand, with the reply:—

"Welcome, welcome! A merry Christmas, dear friends!"

I was bursting with curiosity.

What did father mean by "Death and the Lady"? Yet good manners kept my mouth shut. The question kept coming to my tongue-end every now and then; it was the mental sauce that gave piquancy to the feast of that memorable Christmas Day fifty years ago. Why, why the strange names, "Death and the Lady"?

I found myself in a wild fairyland of weird ghost theories in my persistent turmoil of thought to account for their strange, creepy names.

Our guests were evidently showmen—evidently father and son. "Death"—so I separated the titles—was a weak and bent old man, and "the Lady" was a big, lumbering lad, tall for his years. I put it that he was not more than sixteen, but as tall as a full-grown man.

When we gathered round the fire after dinner, I remember how selfish and ashamed I felt when the "Lady" insisted on helping poor mother in the kitchen with the big wash-up of plates and dishes. He would do it, and I, too, rushed to the help of tired-out mother, and we played, so said the "Lady," at a new and most exciting Christmas game—Fairy Clear the Dishes; or, Demon Dirty Pot Vanquished.

What a sweet voice he had! I knew as soon as I heard him speaking to mother that it was his wonderful woman's voice that got him the title "The Lady," so I felt less troubled about his name as he kept on with the fairy tale of the Vanquishment of Demon Dirty Pot.

At last, I thought, I am on the track of the mystery.

All during the dinner the old man, "Death," had been so silent. Repeatedly "The Lady" tried to arouse him; father and mother, too, did all they could to get him beyond the civil "Yes" and "No," or "Ah, indeed, sir," "Quite so, madam." Then the old gentleman would drop into silence, and seemed lost in a world where no speech was.

In the late evening, when we children with the "Lady" and dad were holding wild revel of noise, with games and charades, the old man's face grew young again. He began first of all to hazard a guess at the charades. Oh, how clever "Death" really was, when he began to talk and to join in our play. I was mistaken about his age. It was trouble, not weight of years, that bent his body and aged him. He was so marvellous an actor; his voice was so deep-toned and flexible.

Now, thought I, the mystery is ended. They are mummers, father and son, and the play they act in is perhaps Death and the Lady.

I gladly left it at that, and became a fast friend and ardent admirer of both of them.

Christmas passed away all too soon, but the memory of each Christmas happily spent never passes away, and of that Christmas day I had, after many years, a most wonderful reminder, and this really is the story of Christmas-tide I set out to tell you, my brothers and sisters of the road.

It was Christmas Eve twenty years later. The old mummer I remembered as "Death" had been long gathered to his fathers. I, too, like "the Lady," wherever he might be, was fatherless and motherless, for twenty years of time takes its toll from the sons and daughters of men. In my turn I was a father, and in our turn we kept merry Christmas. We, too, had good guests at our table, and we told tales of shows and showmen around the Christmas fire.

"Do you remember," said Ben Norton, one of our guests, "that strange couple who twenty years ago were called 'Death and the Lady'?"

Strange to relate, in the rapid review of the past my busy mind was then taking, I was just at the very memory-point of that famous Christmas of my childhood, when I first made acquaintance with the old man and his son.

"I will tell you the story as I heard it a year ago to-day in great London town," volunteered Ben, and with his ready and dramatic wit he thus began:—

"Christmas Eve, the snow on the ground, a bitter wind blowing, men and women hurrying home—at least, all who were blessed with home-shelter that cold, cold night.

"A man, forlorn and ragged, stood in the centre of a narrow street in Mayfair. He was a poverty-stricken mummer, busking for his living. His clear, resonant voice, capable of expressing all human emotions, compelled attention. Cold and bitter as was the night, the power and the pathos of that voice held an audience and blocked the traffic in that select side street in Mayfair. From out one of the great houses came a lady—a sweet-faced old lady—and she, too, was arrested by the magic of that wonderful, vibrant voice, as the mummer recited the story, cast in old ballad form, of 'Death and the Lady.'

"'Twas my Lady Ruth Charters,
Who sat in her bower,
Picking petal from petal,
A lovely red flower,
As she asked good fortune
Her lover to bring.
And this was the love-song
My lady did sing:—
'Come quickly, my darling,
To me in love's bower,
He may not come—he will come,
What fortune, sweet flower?'
'I am here'—'twas a whisper
In icy cold breath—
'I claim thee in marriage,
Thy bridegroom is Death!'
With a cry of great horror
My lady did cower—
'It is life and not death
That I want in love's bower.
I pray thee, Death, spare me,
For I'm not fit to die.'
'Why art thou not ready?'
Was Death's stern reply.
'Oh, I never expected
So short time for shrift;
I've wasted God's time,
That most precious gift.'

"The fast-thickening crowd of listeners—most of them like the spellbound, sweet-faced old lady, well-dressed and educated people—were utterly oblivious of the cold, and that the white flecks of snow were again falling. What a scene it was? The actor busking for his Christmas dinner, his stage the snow-covered street, and his patrons magnetised by the weird solemnity of his story in rhyme. The sybilant horror of the whisper of Death's voice, the agony of suffering he put into the prayer of my lady for a little more probation of time, the actor was by turns, so great his artistry, 'Death and the Lady.'

"But even as he continued his recital a greater tragedy was being wrought out in the soul of the sweet-faced woman, clad in her rich furs, yet straining every thought and all her will to probe the mysterious feelings that were rapidly absorbing her whole soul and being.

"'Can it be—can it be?' she moaned, in the tense agony of her mind. 'Yet his voice is full of familiar tones to me. Oh, God guide me right now!'

"Great wonder of wonders!
Stern Death did relent;
He granted my lady
Full time to repent.
Yes, my lady repented,
Was good for a while—
She married her lover,
They lived in grand style,
So swift sped the years
That to her it did seem
That the warning of Death
Was naught but a dream—
A dream of that dread time
In the long, long gone by—
She was both wife and mother,
Yet not ready to die.
At the routs of Mayfair
She was queen of them all—
The leader of fashion
And the belle of each ball.
Till one night she grew fearful,
She wist not of what,
She fled from the ballroom
So stifling and hot.
In the quiet of her bower
She was gasping for breath,
When again came the call,
The stern voice of Death.
With 'grim Death' she pleaded
With sighs and with tears,
'Oh, spare me, oh, spare me,
A few precious years!'
'What good hast thou done
With thy time in the past?
What fruit of repentance?
My patience can't last.'
Yet again will I spare thee
In response to thy tears,
Remember thy burdens
Increase with thy years.'

"In the solemn hush of the now overwrought crowd all were tense with the eager desire to know how the tragedy would end. Here, on the eve of Christmas, in unexpected quarters, a poor wandering mummer was preaching in the snow a sermon to the thoughtless votaries of reckless pleasure. Here was a prophet of the kerbstone delivering a message to a congregation that had been captured without warning to hear a preachment with a weird text, 'Death and the Lady.'

"The sweet-faced lady had thrust her way through the crowd, and was now gazing—gazing with an agony of search into the dark eyes, flashing now with tragic fire—into the strong, mobile face of the actor

"'I have no doubts now—no doubts now—it must be—it must be,' she said in her heart, as the reciter finished his story:—

"But the chain of bad habits
Bound My Lady in thrall,
So she flouted the warning
Of 'grim Death' at the ball
More callous, more reckless,
She had her mad fling
Became a Court beauty,
Won the smiles of a king.
Then 'Death' called the third time
Midst all her glory,
Yes—'Death' took 'the lady'
And thus ends my story.
But the lesson, good gentles
Is for one and for all:
Be ready, aye, ready,
To answer Death's call.
Let work and let pleasure
Be done in God's eye,
He only lives wisely
Who is ready to die.

"For a moment or two the crowd remained mute as the mummer finished his story. Then someone broke the spell with the chink of money. The whole crowd with one accord fired coins—aye, silver and gold coins—into the battered hat of the reciter laid ready on the ground for the offertory.

"But, alas! the poor mummer had spent himself in his art, for when he stooped down to gather the harvest of their sympathy he fell prone like a dead log in the snow.

"Twenty kind friends rushed to his relief, but the sweet-faced old lady commanded the crowd:—

"'Carry the poor fellow to my door. He shall have every care. God knows he needs it. He needs it this cold Christmas eve.'

"No one seemed to marvel. It was what each kind heart there would have done, and her house was the nearest. Into it he was carried. For many, many weeks he lay fever-stricken and on the borderland of Life and of Death. For many, many sad and anxious weeks did the kind-hearted, mothering soul watch and listen by his bedside.

"Many other strange scenes in the eventful tragedy that bound their lives together in one great whole were rehearsed by the fever-wrought actor, and these, with what she herself had known and mourned over for years, gave increased conviction to her mind and her heart as to the identity of the actor."

To understand it all you must know a former chapter in the history of the great family of London bankers, Johnstone, Baird, and Co.—a chapter of tragic moment to Andrew and Margaret Baird. In early life they had been bereft of both parents; the vast wealth that would be theirs when they became of age had been most strictly guarded, and the Johnstone head of the great bank had absolute control of the money and charge over the young Bairds.

When Andrew Baird went to Oxford and learned something of life on an equality with other young men, Margaret, his sister, was sent abroad for her education. Young Baird fell in love with, and married, a beautiful and good young woman, fully fitted to be his wife in every respect save one—lack of wealth to match the vast hoards of her young husband. She was an actress, and the leading lady on the Oxford theatrical circuit. The young people kept their marriage secret, for Uncle Johnstone was too great a terror to face. The tragedy of revelation had to come, and it came when Andrew Baird was least able to bear it. His devoted wife in giving life to their child died. There was the real tragedy. Under the shadow of that death, in the pall of that horror of thick darkness, Andrew Baird underwent a crucifixion of mental and physical sufferings It aged him twenty years in one day. With his dead wife's body before him he would not look into the face of his child. For weeks and weeks after the sad funeral he went about as a man in a dream. Now, indeed, must he face his life. What now did it matter? Let Uncle Johnstone say and do his worst. Let his sister Margaret think as she might. What were these things now to him? The great banking house of Johnstone, Baird and Co. might totter to its fall so long as he could be loyal to the angel-wife so long as he could lay sweet flowers on her grave.

To his sister Margaret the tragedy of revelation seemed a catastrophe of social degeneration. "Married to an acting-woman! Doubtless a siren of the stage, who had bewitched her poor brother." So this high and mighty young lady went down to Oxford and tried (oh! fatal unkindness) to condole with her brother, yet to lead him to see (this was indeed a double tragedy of error) that for social reasons a good Providence had taken the matter in hand; that very soon the memory of the mésalliance would fade away, and that society would forgive him, and take the rich young banker back again to its arms. She was very young for her years was Margaret. She knew not the heart of her brother, aged and crucified with sorrow.

Andrew cursed his sister, and drove her from his presence. He vowed that she should never, never see his face again. He cursed the bank and all its hoards of gold. He vowed that he would never, never touch it. He kept both vows. Andrew Baird with his child took to the road. He became a mummer. When I saw him first at that Christmas feast fifty years ago I put his age at seventy. He was only about forty-two. Sorrow had bent his body and silvered his hair.

Need I labour to tell you the end of my story? You know it already. The sweet-faced lady was Margaret Baird—a better and truer woman in her old age. She heard and recognised in the voice and in the features of the poor busker at her door the voice and features of her long-lost brother alive again in the person of his son. It was thus that after many years the child of the mummers came into his inheritance.

His Aunt Margaret had much to tell him. He had much to tell her of the long years gone by, when he and his father, whenever they were out of "collar" on the legitimate boards, took to the streets and recited "Death and the Lady."

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Miss Fritzi Scheff has no difficulty in upholding her popularity in the new comic opera with which Messrs. Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert have provided her. It is called The Prima Donna, and it is playing to crowded houses at the Knickerbocker Theatre. Staged in a highly artistic manner by Mr. Fred G. Latham, and commendably free from the features that have marred so many musical productions in this city, The Prima Donna possesses all the charm of a genuine comic opera, and the advance booking attests the enduring popularity of that class of entertainment. The prima donna is Mlle. Athenée. During a motor tour she drops in at the Pomme d'Or Café at St. Germaine, and, sinking her identity under the stage name of La Petite Perle, takes the place of a singer with a bad cough, whose application for an engagement is rejected by the musical director, Herr Max Gundelfinger. The café chantant has its miniature stage and little corner bar, and the audience is composed of soldiers in uniform, with the usual complement of grisettes. Herr Gundelfinger is an autocratic personage, with an execrable German dialect. Lieutenant Armand, Count de Fontenne, has composed a waltz song, and is anxious to hear it sung. The prima donna offers to sing it, and in doing so she captivates the young officer. They declare their love for each other, but Lieutenant Armand's superior officer becomes his rival, and there threatens to be a duel with dire consequences. The prima donna averts the encounter, however, and contrives to set everything right before the final curtain falls. In the opening scene there are lively doings in the café when the soldiers enter and in anticipation of a revel burst out into a rollicking chorus, "Here's to my comrades and me." This has a fine swing to it that will ensure its popularity. An amusing scene follows, in which a curious assortment of "artists" go through their performances, and then the prima donna sings Lieutenant Armand's song, "A Soldier's Love." This number has an entrancing air that stays in the memory. Captain Bordenave, to whom the father of Mlle. Athenée owes much money, takes a fancy to the prima donna, and, forcing himself into her presence, makes her drink with him, and tries to win her favour by lighting his cigars with her father's promissory notes. He drinks so much, and becomes so ardent in his advances, that he is finally thrust into an adjoining room, and the key is turned on him by the virtuous prima donna. She gives the alarm, and when the soldiers and their female companions come flocking into the café Captain Bordenave is released. Thus he is exposed and shamed in the presence of his subordinates.

The second act is a mélange of mirth and music, in which the thread of the story seems to have snapped. The scene is the exterior of the club-house at Ile de Puteaux, Paris, and a very handsome scene it is. "What is his official capacity?" someone asks, referring to a certain baron. "About three quarts," is the answer. The baron can hold his own in the game of repartee. "So sorry to hear your wife ran off with your chauffeur," observes a marquise with a knack of saying unpleasant things in a pleasant way. "Oh, yes," he replies, "for he was such an excellent chauffeur." Lieutenant Armand's family interpose objections to his marrying Mlle. Athenée, but all difficulties are smoothed over, and in the end the lovers triumph. There are a number of spirited choruses, and through the score runs the waltz melody of the song composed by Lieutenant Armand. Miss Scheff sings with a spirit and dash that are irresistible, and her drum playing always pleases the audience. Mr. James E. Sullivan as Herr Max Gundelfinger is as funny as he was when he played the "polite lunatic" in The Belle of New York, which is saying a good deal. His two songs, "Something always happens when it shouldn't" and "I'll be married to the music of a military band," are full of diverting humour.

"They play marches when you're wed,
They play marches when you're dead;
I wonder if they consider it's the same?"

sings Herr Max in the latter song. Mr. William Raymond is excellent as Lieutenant Armand, and Mr. William Harcourt plays the obnoxious Captain Bordenave in a lifelike manner; Mr. William J. Ferguson gives an admirable representation of Mons. Beaurivage, the impecunious father of the prima donna; Mr. Donald Hall and Miss Blanche Morrison sing and dance a waltz number delightfully; and Mr. Martin Hayden, as Lieutenant Gaston, makes a pronounced hit when he sings "Everybody else's girl looks better to me than mine." Miss Katherine Stewart as the Marquise Du Perrifonds and Miss Ruth Holt Boucicault as the Duchess of Montrose bear themselves with a proper air of distinction and good breeding. Mr. Herbert's music is delightful, and the company do justice t oit. The piece is put on the stage in a tasteful manner, and its success is beyond doubt.

Mr. De Wolf Hopper, in a recent interview, deprecates the vulgarity of a certain class of musical "shows," and especially deplores the popularity of the Salomé dancers. "In the religious city of Montreal," he says, "I saw an equine act in vaudeville in which a horse was trimmed up as much as possible to suggest Salomé, and it capered and wiggled about, finally picking up in its teeth a papier-mâché head of John the Baptist, to the neck of which shreds of red flannel had been tacked to give it a realistically ugly touch. Now, can you tie that for vulgarity?"

In order to be funny it is not necessary to be vulgar or suggestive, according to Mr. Hopper. In the matter of amusement the public is nothing but a lot of children, and it is always safe to act on that principle. Those who have seen Mr. Hopper in Wang need not be told that he practises what he preaches. One of the most delightful things he does is to dance with a group of children. His great height gives him a certain dignity that by force of contrast enhances the drollery of his capers. In The Pied Piper his height is accentuated by the dwarfed appearance of the houses in the City of Innocence, and the juvenile "get-up" of the inhabitants, all of whom are supposed to be children. For his partner in the dance the Piper chooses the smallest child in the company. In the midst of their waltz someone orders them to reverse, whereupon the tall comedian grasps the youngster around the waist and starts to turn her upside down. When the order is repeated, the little one tries to reverse her towering partner in the same way. A speech before the curtain is a feature of Mr. Hopper's performance that would only be omitted if it were not demanded, and it always is. He has done it for years. Between the first and second acts of The Pied Piper he describes the horrors of touring the "one-night stands" under a manager who is evidently a direct descendant of Columbus, because he discovers so many places in America that are not on the map. "Were you ever in Winnipeg?" asks Hopper, with a shiver. "In winter there is fine sleighing there; but why go to Winnipeg for sleighing," he asks, "when you can enjoy the same sensation nearer home? All you have to do is to put on your pyjamas on a cold day and sit by an open window on a cake of ice and ring a bell." As the Pied Piper his witticisms move the audience to frequent laughter. "Never contradict a lady," he says. "Give her time and she'll contradict herself." And again, "Always let a woman have her own way. It will save her the trouble of taking it." When his Official Adviser fails him, the Piper tells him that his ideas are "like the flowers on a century plant."

For upwards of two hours on Monday morning the works of Edisonia (Limited), at Peckham, were held in the grip of fire, and as the result damage was caused to the extent of £10,000, and a large number of workpeople will be thrown out of employment. There was everything to feed a fierce fire—tanks of paraffin wax used in moulding, great quantities of celluloid and other combustible material used in the manufacture of the phonograph records, and impedimenta of every kind.

The Fun City at Olympia has this week been feeling the good effects of the coming holiday season. The attendance throughout the day has shown a great increase. An even stronger attraction than the increased variety programme is provided in the famous film of the Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling match. On Boxing Day Fun City will be one continual whirl, there being no less than six separate free shows on the variety stage, with a greatly augmented programme, including Woodward's Seals, which remain on, and will be the star number next week. Maud, the famous American untamable mechanical donkey, has arrived. Here's a chance for amateur cowboys.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR ALL THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

CHARLES SHEARD & CO.'S

PANTO WINNERS! PANTO HITS!

Every Artiste, Author, or Manager should examine them. There are a lot of "down the course" songs offered this year, but THESE are the only REAL CERTAIN SURE WINNERS.

PRINCIPAL BOY—
"I CAN'T GET AWAY FROM THE GIRLS."
"MY LIMELIGHT LOU."

PRINCIPAL GIRL—
"HOLD ME TIGHTER, MR. LIGHTER."
"WHO'D LIKE TO PAY FOR MY HOLIDAY."

BOY or GIRL (very effective)—
"JENNIE, DON'T SWING ON THE GATE."

COMEDIAN—
"GIRLS, GIRLS, NOTHING ELSE BUT GIRLS."

CHORUS SONGS (beautifully harmonised)—
* "LITTLE SILVER MOONBEAM."
(Great for staging purposes. The best since "Pansy Faces.")
* "WHEN THE SUNRISE PAINTS THE DISTANT HILLS WITH ROSE."
* "SWEET BELLS OF HOME."

Band Parts can be had of those marked *, price 1/- per set.

PLEASE ENCLOSE SIX STAMPS FOR POSTAGE, These are the only songs that "stand out" on their merits. They are bound to keep you in the front rank if you are there already, or, if not, are certain to place you there right away,

VALSE REFRAIN—
Starshine, Starshine,
Come back once more into the sky,
Tell me, tell me,
All that you told me that night gone by.
I am not lonely-hearted,
For when the clouds have parted,
After the shadow beyond the rain
Starshine will come again!

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE EVIL SPIRIT IN A GIRLS' BOARDING SCHOOL.

Code Word, "FLUXION."

In order that his daughter, aged 15 years, should not see her lover, a stern father has her sent to a convent; but Horace and his friends arrive and make trouble in the house, and the young man prepares everything for the abduction of his young lady-love. Happily, the plot is discovered before she runs away, and her father, yielding to the young people's entreaties, at last allows them to be married. This is a very comical subject, very appropriate for the Christmas season.

643ft. The Subject, £10 14s. 4d. Colouring, £5 17s. 0d.

AMAZONS OF DIFFERENT PERIODS.

Code Word, "FLUIDE."

Here are shown the different stages of civilisation of the world according to his wife's changes of costumes and ideals in the different centuries. We pass from the prehistoric warrior, armed with her long spear, and clad in the hides of wild beasts, to the gracious Amazon of the present time, acknowledging "en passant" her sisters of the Middle Ages, the reign of Louis XIV., also the time of the French Revolution (1789), with Therolgne de Méricourt as a prominent figure amongst some thrilling incidents of that troubled period.

332ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d. Colouring, £3 5s. 6d.

BOBBY'S DRAWINGS.

Code Word, "FRENAIE."

Young Bobby's simple drawings represent different people and things. First, there is a gentleman, then two gendarmes, one hooligan, and a long wall, lighted by a lamp-post. Bobby cuts out his different drawings, which become alive. The gentleman walks along the wall, the hooligan assaults him; but the kindly gendarmes arrive, and the wicked hooligan is carried away. Another picture is that of a lady colliding with a little pastrycook's apprentice, and sitting down on the ground, with the boy in front of her and the cake between the two.

180ft. The Subject, £3 0s. 0d.

PALERMO AND SURROUNDINGS.

Code Word, "EXPANSION."

Titles of pictures: The Pellegrino Mountain, The Villa Tosca's Gardens, The Royal Palace, The "Reale" Mount, The Cathedral St. John of the Hermits, The Catacombs of the "Capuccini," The Via Alloro, The Aniseed Cordial Dealer, The Pretoria Place, The "Ciramella" Player.

396ft. The Subject, £6 12s. 0d. Toning, 15s. 0d.

KIDS' STRIKE.

Code Word, "FOURNEE."

The boys of a school in one of the Paris suburbs throw their books at their master's head, and go and make the girls next door join them, when they make a huge bonfire with their school requisites. Presently the young strikers march through the streets, clamouring for their "rights"—the youngsters' rights: Freedom and truant-playing!

396ft. The Subject, £6 12s. 0d.

THE PRETTY DAIRYMAID.

Code Word, "FOURBE."

A farmer is making love to his pretty dairymaid. Mary, however, has given her heart to Peter the sailor, whose sister is the farmer's fiancée, and she agrees to go and meet him near the pool outside the village. The farmer, having discovered her design, picks a quarrel with her, while Peter, who has been waiting a long time, leaves the pool, thinking she will not come. Mary arrives too late, and her master, who has followed, maddened by the girl's defiance, strangles her, and throws her into the water. Peasants having discovered the body, an inquest takes place, and Peter, who has been seen near the pool, is arrested; but he breaks away, and the gendarmes, having lost his trail, come back to the place of the murder. There they see the farmer walking about. Suddenly, the ghost of the girl, appearing before his mental eye, makes him kneel down on the ground in an attitude the meaning of which cannot be misconstrued.

628ft. The Subject, £10 8s. 8d. Toning, £1 10s. 0d.

THE INVALID WITH THE WOODEN HEAD.

Code Word, "FOURNEAU."

An old veteran, having lost his head during the war, has had a complete collection of wooden ones carved for him. One day he puts on his veteran's head, and with it comes back to him memories of his campaigns. This makes him drink too much, and his head begins to swim. On Sundays he puts on his best head—a very peaceful head, which he allows boys in the park to unscrew so that they may use it for playing skittles.

478ft. The Subject, £7 19s. 4d.

IT IS THE HOUSE DECORATOR.

Code Word, "FRENESIE."

A gentleman, on leaving his house, sees a young man he does not know entering his flat. Anxious for the safety of his wife, he goes back quickly and asks for an explanation. He can only apologise, however, when he sees the stained coat of the house decorator. The would-be workman jumps on the scaffolding outside the drawing-room window, and, seeing that he is not safe in that flat, he climbs up to the next floor, where he disturbs a young lady at her toilet. After many and sundry accidents, the young man leaves the house in a blouse and skirt lent him by a compassionate laundress, but the actual workmen plunge him into a bucket full of paint when they see him come out of the house.

510ft. The Subject, £8 10s. 0d.

A DUEL IN THE TIME OF RICHELIEU.

Code Word, "FRESQUE."

François of Montmorency, Lord of Bouteville, the famous duellist, has just been obliged to take refuge in Brussels, after killing the Marquis Desportes and the Earl of Thorigny, and wounding Lafrette. In spite of the intercession of the Archduchess governing the Netherlands, King Louis XIII. refused to pardon him. Bouteville was so vexed when he heard of it that he swore to go and fight in Paris in the Place Royale itself. He had the audacity to carry out his daring wager on May 12th, 1627. His opponent was Beuvron. Arrested in his flight after this new feat, Bouteville was sentenced to death, and beheaded on June 21st, in spite of the entreaties of the highest people in the land.

740ft. The Subject, £12 6s. 8d.
